WELLNESS PROGRAM ESTABLISHED

There is a continuing interest on the part of the administration "in the health and well-being of all members of the University Community," Provost William D. Johnson says in speaking of the Wellness Program now being established.

In an effort to bring about an increased awareness of the concept of wellness and to emphasize the importance of regular exercise, balanced nutrition and not smoking to good health, President Elliott asked six members of the University Community to function as a steering committee.

In December, the president held a meeting with a group of 25--faculty, staff and students--to discuss the program. There was unanimous support for such an intiative.

President Elliott said at the meeting, "Our university ought to have the widest range of wellness activities, from serious studies of substance abuse to easy availability of recreation for all." Emphasizing the voluntary nature of such a program, the president said, "We should offer attractive opportunities and encourage everybody to participate."

Members of the steering committee are preparing a list of opportunities for the promotion of good health available to the University Community. A directory of these opportunities, including written comments on the value of physical fitness, nutrition, stress management and other topics will be included. The listing will be made available on campus in March. "There are a number of programs designed to promote wellness here at the university and it is hoped that the listing will make it easy for individuals to choose those most suited to their needs and interests," said Provost Johnson.

For more information on this program, or to suggest activities that might be included, contact David Taylor in the Office of News and Public Affairs, Ext. 6460.

MARTIN LUTHER KING'S BIRTHDAY TO BE OBSERVED

The GW Committee on Historical Observances invites the University Community to join in remembering Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. on his birthday, January 15.

Beginning in 1986, the third Monday of January will be set aside as a national holiday in honor of Dr. King. The committee notes that Dr. King is remembered not only for his achievements in the civil rights movement, for which he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize of 1964, but for his broader vision of peace, justice, freedom and equality for all people.

This year, in commemoration of Dr. King's birthday, the film, "I Have A Dream," will be shown on campus. The 33-minute film relates Dr. King's dream of equality for all. It will be shown on Tuesday, January 15, in the GW Hospital Cafeteria Special Functions Dining Room at 11:30 am, 12:15 and 1:00 pm. The film will be shown in the Marvin Center, Room 409, at 2:00, 3:00 and 4:00 pm.

If you have any questions, contact Annette Robinson (Ext. 8456) or Cheryl Siebert (Ext. 7402). Both are members of the committee.

FACULTY RECITAL IS JANUARY 28

Thomas Perazzoli, flute, and Neil Tilkens, piano, will appear in a faculty recital on Monday, January 28, at 8 pm in the Marvin Theatre. The program will include sonatas by Walter Piston, Gaetano Donizetti and Benedetto Marcello. Tickets, available at the door are $4, general admission; $2, GW alumni, staff and faculty; and $1, students and senior citizens. For more information, call Ext. 6245.

RICHARD SOUTHBY RECEIVES AWARD FROM STATE OF NEW JERSEY

"In appreciation of his leadership and dedication as Chairman of the Subcommittee of the Medicaid Cost Containment Task Force," are the words on the plaque awarded in December to Dr. Richard F. Southby, chairman of the Department of Health Services Administration and professor of health care sciences. The presentation was made by Edward J. Dailey, Jr., assistant commissioner, Administration and Information Services, Department of Human Services for the State of New Jersey and Beverly Blacher-Eide, executive assistant in the same department.

From November 1983 to August 1984, Dr. Southby was a member of the task force which had the responsibility of reviewing the Governor's Management Improvement Plan as it related to the Medicaid Program. He was appointed by the Commissioner of Human Services for the State of New Jersey. Dr. Southby was then appointed chairman of the subcommittee which conducted an in-depth review of the Medicaid Program and prepared the final report. The report was unanimously accepted and approved by the Task Force in July and is now under review by the Commissioner and the Governor.

—SENIOR CLASS RECEPTION—

All members of the faculty, administrative staff, and graduating seniors of The George Washington University are cordially invited to attend a reception in honor of the Class of 1985 hosted by President Lloyd H. Elliott. The reception will be held on Tuesday, January 22, beginning at 4 pm, in The George Washington University Club, third floor, Marvin Center.

BUREAU CHIEF OF GERMAN PRESS AGENCY TO SPEAK

Dr. Arno Meyer, Washington bureau chief of the German Press Agency, will speak at a program sponsored by the GW School of Public and International Affairs Alumni Association on Tuesday, January 22, at 11:45 am in Marvin Center, Room 426.

Dr. Meyer will examine U.S. economic, political and military policies in Europe, and their impact on U.S.-West German relations. He will also discuss the new, and increasingly critical, views of the United States held by the younger generation in Germany. Dr. Meyer previously served as the German Press Agency's bureau chief in Moscow.

For more information on the event, call Ext. 6435.

AUDITIONS FOR GW MUSICIANS

The George Washington University Singers, formerly the University Glee Club, under the direction of Catherine Pickar, and the University Orchestra, under the direction of William Wright, are holding auditions through Friday, January 18. If you are interested, call Ext. 6245 for an appointment.

DIMOCK GALLERY LOAN DAYS

The Dimock Gallery has scheduled Wednesday and Thursday, January 23 and 24, for university offices to return loaned art works from the GW Permanent Collection, to exchange works or to borrow for the first time. There is a one-time charge of $15 per object. Those returning works are asked to do so on the first day, January 23. Works may be borrowed on either day. Loans will not be made after January 24 until the next loan period is scheduled. For more information, call the Dimock Gallery, Ext. 7091.

HOUSEKEEPING IS RECOGNIZED FOR EXCELLENCE AT PRIDE DAY

Vice President William P. Smith, Assistant Treasurer Robert E. Dickman, Director of Housing and Residence Life Ann E. Webster, and Physical Plant Director Robert F. Burch were among those expressing the appreciation of the administration for the fine job done by the Housekeeping Division of Physical Plant for the University Community at the Ninth Annual Pride Day held on December 20. Vice President and Treasurer Charles E. Diehl, who was ill, sent a message. Housekeeping Director Al Slaughter introduced the speakers and Housekeeping Manager, Dormitories Leroy O. Payton gave the invocation and benediction.

Vice President Smith, who said he came to the university in 1943, talked about the good work done by all of housekeeping and remembered those who had come back from vacation last year to help save the students' papers and books and clothes when there was some flooding from burst pipes in the dormitories. "The work you do for the students is the best that I've ever seen since 1943," he said. Assistant Treasurer Dickman called housekeeping's work "really outstanding." Ms. Webster emphasized to the members of the Housekeeping Division, "I'm proud of you every day." PPD Director Burch talked about the hard work that went into the preparation of the Guthridge and described experiences with the plaster beatles there. "For the ninth time, we're the best in the country," he said. "Keep up the pride folks."

Recognition went to Odessa Harris and Mary Fenner who were absent only two days in all of the last year and to Maggie McCarney, who was absent only four days.

Carlton Collins, day housekeeping manager, said that a large number of letters of commendation had come in and that he could not read them all. Portions of letters of commendation about some of the members of the Housekeeping Division were read. Among them were: Jesse May Juhans, Margaret Porter, George Smith, Ronald Fisher, Clarence Chappel, Robert Scott, Paul Smith, Bill Frye, Leon Thurston, Ernest Hays, Willie Wells, Willie Barnes, Lee Barrows, Paul Hawkins, Ernest Hays, David Kelly, Louise Miller, Patience Berkow, Barbara Barron, Sherrill Jacobs, Lexie Riley, Ethel Honeycutt, Michael Boyd, Robert Gilliam, Windell Henry, Harold Knox, Carrie Morris, and Merrill Osborne.

The day shift clean equipment contest was won by Joanne Hendricks and Ronella Lyles. The night shift clean equipment winners were Anne Woolridge and Ida Pearce. Each winner received a $25 gift certificate.

Night shift people also received recognition for perfect and near-perfect attendance. There were three with no absences for the past year: Ruth Jones, Willie Hatcher and Theresa Miles. Absent just two days for the year were Sylvia Graham, Betty Proctor and Lenoria King. There were five who have been absent only three days: Overton Cavanaugh, Onnie Anderson, Ellen Brown, Robert Barnes and Dorothy Davis.

FELLOWSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

There are several fellowship opportunities with deadlines in January, 1985.

To faculty and student researchers, the U.S. Department of Energy is offering fellowships in the areas of energy production, utilization, conservation, and their societal implications. The deadlines are January 21. (They are also offering laboratory participation to graduate students for six-month appointments (master's) and one-year appointments (doctoral) - deadlines are the first of March, June, October and December.)

In the areas of nuclear engineering, health physics, radioactive waste management and magnetic fusion energy technology, the Department of Energy offers fellowships for master's or doctoral degree candidates. January 28 is the application deadline.

The Office of Naval Research Graduate Fellowship Program through the American Society for Engineering Education is offering opportunities to recent graduates in mechanical and electrical engineering, computer science and physics for study and research leading to a doctoral degree. Application deadline is January 31.

For additional information, contact the Graduate Fellowship Information Center, Ext. 6217.

MFA THESIS CANDIDATE SHOW

Works of George Washington graduate students who are candidates for the Master of Fine Arts will be on exhibition in the Dimock Gallery from Thursday, January 17, through Friday, February 8. Art media represented in the exhibition will be sculpture, visual communication and graphics. The student artists are Katherine E. Anderson, Barry C. Erdeljon, Kris Gentry, Mary Alice Langenkamp and Louise Moy. Some of the works will be for sale. Gallery hours are 10 am to 5 pm weekdays.

PROFESSOR ROBERT MOORE DIES IN ARLINGTON

Professor Emeritus of English Robert H. Moore died in Arlington, Virginia, on December 31, 1984. He was 71.

Born in St. Matthews, Kentucky, January 3, 1913, he held the degrees of Bachelor of Arts (1934) and Master of Arts (1936) from the University of Indiana. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Illinois in 1948.

Dr. Moore came to George Washington in 1949 as associate professor of English composition. He became full professor in 1958 and retired in 1978 as professor emeritus of English. He was a member of the National Council of Teachers of English, the Conference on College Composition and Communication and the Middle Atlantic College English Association, which he served as president. Listed in the Directory of American Scholars, and Who's Who in the South and Southwest, he was a frequent contributor of articles to College English.

There were four editions of his book Effective Writing. He was also the author of Handbook of Effective Writing, Plan Before You Write, and Elements of Composition.

He is survived by a brother, Martin Moore of Louisville, Kentucky.

There will be a memorial service for Professor Moore on Friday, January 25, at 12:15 pm in the Marvin Theatre.

NEWSNOTES

CHRISTOPHER C. JOYNER, assistant professor of political science, recently presented a paper, "Antarctica and the Law of the Sea: Issues of Ecology and Security," to the Southern Regional Meeting of the International Studies Association.

EUGENE W. KELLY, professor of education, gave testimony to the National Commission on Excellence in Teacher Education at the University of Texas in Austin in early October. He stressed that the overall development of teacher education is important in relation to the total universe of education and learning. The commission is expected to complete its work in January 1985 and release its final report in February at the annual meeting of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education.

JOHN M. LOGSDON, professor of public affairs and political science, was interviewed for a feature story on space commercialization in the September 17 Newsweek. On October 21, he was interviewed on the news and feature program "Capital Edition," Channel 9.

BERNARD MERGEN, professor of American civilization, was the keynote speaker at the First Conference of the Swiss Association for American Studies, in Bern, Switzerland, November 23 and 24. The topic was "American Travel and Travelers" and the theme of the Conference was "Traveling as a Phenomenon of American Culture." He also lectured at the Universities of Basel and Geneva under the sponsorship of the United States Information Agency.

SHIRLEY M. WRIGHT, adjunct assistant professor of English, was awarded an Academic Specialist Grant from the United States Information Agency to participate in a series of workshops for English teachers in Brazil, last summer. Workshop sites included Curitiba, Porto Alegre, Sao Paulo, Campinas, Santos and Belo Horizonte.

PERSONNEL NOTICES

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, Division of Continuing Education. (Person will be director of a university-based program in Washington, D.C., to study prison industries. URBAN AND REGIONAL PLANNING STUDENTS DEVELOP PLAN TO ASSIST SMITHSONIAN VISITORS

URBAN AND REGIONAL PLANNING students, first row, Linda Amato, then L to R, David Porter, Mary Nagelhout, Cheryl Siskin, and Al Stern with Professor Greene stand in front of the drawings made for the Smithsonian. Cheryl Siskin holds the award from the National Capital Area Chapter of the American Planning Association.

Under the direction of Professor of Urban and Regional Planning Sherwin Greene, members of the Community Planning and Design Studio, U&RP class 262, produced a design study for the Smithsonian Institution Visitor Information and Associates Reception Center, which was completed in May, 1984. The study has been accepted by the Smithsonian as a concept and is now under study for implementation.

The study, "The Smithsonian: Enhancing the Visitor's Experience," was recognized by the National Capital Area Chapter of the American Planning Association with a Merit Award, Category III (student projects) on December 6, 1984. This was the first time the student award had been given by the chapter since its award program was begun 11 years ago.

The study project was initiated at the request of Mary Grace Potter, director of the Smithsonian Institution Visitor Information and Associates Reception Center, who asked Professor Greene to develop an integrated information and orientation system to assist Smithsonian visitors.

First, the student team studied the past and possible future development of Smithsonian facilities, the existing information and orientation devices and the overall functional and visual qualities of the Mall in terms of how well the environment fulfilled basic user needs. The information and orientation needs of visitors were defined and the existing system evaluated in terms of response to these needs.

Second, the team synthesized the research, developed specific goals for the project and generated alternative solutions to the problem. The differing information and orientation needs of first-time and repeat visitors became increasingly clear as alternatives were reviewed and evaluated.

Third, the students developed a general concept which defined specific locations for various types of orientation/information components to meet the needs of both types of visitors. The specific recommendations addressed the goals of the project.

The official Smithsonian sunburst was recommended for use as the only logo so that a strong, comprehensive image for the institution would be established. A flexible and integrated system of orientation/information elements (including information kiosks, booths and signage) with a specific theme was proposed to inform and direct visitors to the wide range of exhibits, events and

LECTURE SERIES ON PRESERVATION AND THE PLANNING PROCESS

A four-part lecture series on "Preservation and the Planning Process" is being sponsored by the Graduate Program in Historic Preservation and the Department of Urban and Regional Planning.

This evening, Tuesday, January 22, the first lecture, "The Tax Act as an Agent of Urban Revitalization," will be given by William J. Pencek Jr. of the Maryland Historical Trust. He will speak at 6:30 pm in Rooms 413-414 of Marvin Center.

"Private-Sector Planning and Preservation in Small Towns" will be the subject of the second lecture on Tuesday, February 5, at 6:30 pm in Alumni House, 714 21st St, NW. David Bland, president of Bland, Roos & Associates, will be the lecturer.

"Maryland Initiatives in Rural Land Management and Preservation" will be discussed in the third lecture by David Miller, director of the National Lands Trust on Tuesday, February 19, at 6:30 pm. He will speak in Room 426 of Marvin Center.

"Preservation and Housing Rehabilitation in Baltimore" will be M.J. Brodie's subject for the fourth lecture on Tuesday, March 5, at 6:30 pm. Brodie, director of the Pennsylvania Avenue Development Corporation, will speak in Room 426 of Marvin Center.

Admission to the lectures is free. For more information, call Ext.6098.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES VOTES TO INVITE PROPOSALS ON HOSPITAL

The Board of Trustees at its January 17 meeting, adopted a resolution to invite appropriate investor-owned health firms to submit proposals for the purchase or long-term lease of the University Hospital.

The action was taken by the Board following receipt of a year-long feasibility study which defined standards and conditions by which University Medical Center officials would maintain control over policy and operation of the Hospital in the event of an ownership change.

The company selected would be required to provide a significant infusion of capital to maintain and enhance the hospital facility and its technological base.

Proposals will be requested, in the next few weeks, from American Medical International (AMI)--which participated with GW in the study--and from other similar organizations that meet the qualifications and agree to the conditions established.

The study was completed in late 1984 by GW Medical Center's Dean for Administrative Affairs, Philip S. Birnbaum, who combined the work of four committees which reviewed the implications--on education and research, on clinical affairs, on hospital operations, and on fiscal operations--of a relationship with an investor-owned company.

The qualifications set for a corporation to lease or purchase the hospital include:

- Ownership and operation of at least 50 acute care hospitals, at least one of which is comparable in size to GW Hospital; and
- Financial size and strength to generate working capital to support the hospital.

Negotiations can begin if an investor-owned hospital company agrees:

- To the management structure recommended by the study findings, which places responsibility for hospital policy and operation in a University-controlled governing board;
- To retain the existing medical staff organization, by-laws, rules, and regulations;
- To retain non-academic hospital employees without loss of compensation or seniority for at least one year;
- To a commitment to develop a regional health care network with George Washington University Medical Center as its center;
- To provide capital for the Hospital to continue education, research and patient care needs; and
- To a "buy-back" option to permit the University to regain ownership in the event of unforeseen difficulties.

GW WASHINGTON AREA STUDIES CENTER PUBLISHES NEIGHBORHOOD CRIME WATCH PROGRAM ASSESSMENT

Although serious crime has declined in the District of Columbia, Neighborhood Crime Watch Programs probably have had little to do with this fall-off, according to a study by Jeffrey R. Henig, associate dean of the School of Public and International Affairs and associate professor of political science.

"There is no clear evidence that crime has dropped more rapidly in participating blocks than in those that are not participating," he says. "Nor do reports show that crime drops more rapidly in blocks with active watches then in those with inactive watches," he goes on, challenging the notion that crime watch programs are the long-sought key to safer communities for all District residents.

The study, "Citizens Against Crime: An Assessment of the Neighborhood Watch Program in Washington, D.C.," published by GW's Center for Washington Area Studies, notes that the crime watch programs are not without benefit. Neighborhood residents often strongly support the watches, believing they make people feel more secure and build better relationships between police and the community. A neighborhood that can mobilize its residents and maintain a functioning block watch has every incentive to do so, says Henig, observing that the cost to the neighborhood is slight.

The programs are designed to reduce crime by encouraging residents to act as the "eyes and ears" of the police. Mayor Marion Barry stressed the importance of such activities as part of his "Unified Program to Reduce Crime," announced in 1981. The Metropolitan Police Department reports that more than 60,000 households are taking part in the watch program.

The crime watch report presents the results of a pilot study of neighborhood watches in Washington's First Police District. Among other findings, the report states:

* Watches are more likely to be formed in more prosperous, gentrifying blocks and in those with a higher percentage of white residents, than in poorer, crime-ridden neighborhoods that would seem to have a greater need.

* A significant minority of those blocks with neighborhood watch signs no longer have active organized watch programs. Some may have participated in only a most limited way.

* Most block watch captains believe the watch program has made residents feel more secure, and many

PHYSICAL PLANT SPOTLIGHT

Did you know that your Physical Plant Department (PPD) spends more than 10 million dollars a year keeping us sheltered, comfortable and functional? Part of the money is spent on a group of facility maintenance programs. One of these is Program 70, which many people know as "Find/Fix."

Program 70 is a maintenance procedure used by PPD to find and correct breakdowns in the structure and utility systems of university buildings. Program 70 sends a mechanic into a building to find out what needs to be fixed and to fix it on the spot. If what the mechanic finds is too extensive or difficult to be fixed within a two-hour period, he reports it to his foreman for comprehensive planning and scheduling.

PPD's trick is to go through the buildings as often as possible. Currently, Program 70 visits most buildings twice each year. Soon, some of the buildings will be visited three times a year since PPD feels the more frequent the visits, the better maintained the buildings will be.

Francisco Soto-Sida

One of many outstanding PPD mechanics dedicated to making Program 70 a success is Senior Carpenter Francisco Soto-Sida (above). Hailing from Mexico, Francisco joined PPD in 1971 as a carpenter's helper. Now one of PPD's best carpenters, Francisco is married, the father of two children, and a resident of Hyattsville, Maryland. PPD asks you to look for Francisco and other Program 70 mechanics and let them know about repairs needed in your area when you see them in your building.

Look also for the notice posted by your PPD building manager with the approximate date your building is scheduled for a visit by Program 70.

Dates for visits in the next weeks are: Jan. 25, Bldg D; Feb. 4, Bldg Y; Feb. 5, Bldg Z; Feb. 6, Bldg N; Feb. 7, Alumni House; Feb. 8, Davis Hodgkins House; Feb. 11, Bldg BB; Feb. 12, Bldg X; Feb. 13, Bldg T; Feb. 14, Bldg P; Feb. 15, Bldg O; Feb. 19, Woodhull House; Feb. 20, Samson Hall; Feb. 21, Bldg E; Feb. 22, the University Parking Garage; Feb. 25, the garage of Bldg C; Feb. 26, the Marvin Center Garage; Feb. 27, Lisner Auditorium; and March 4, the Academic Center.

activities in the museums and on the Mall. Outdoor activity areas, designed to extend the museum experience onto the Mall, information brochures and consistent use of the logo were recommended to expand the educational experiences offered by the Smithsonian. All suggested components of the system were carefully designed to preserve the aesthetic qualities of the Mall while promoting the long respected reputation of the Smithsonian Institution.

FELLOWSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

The American Association for the Advancement of Science will award approximately 15 fellowships to advanced students in the natural and social sciences and in engineering for the summer. Application deadline: February 1.

The State Farm Companies will award 20 Exceptional Student Fellowships to full-time college juniors or seniors who have shown strong leadership abilities and who are majoring in a business or business-related field. Application deadline: February 28.

More information is available from the Graduate Fellowship Information Center, Ext. 6217.

CRIME WATCH

believe the program has succeeded in deterring criminals.

From the standpoint of police officials, Henig believes the neighborhood watch program might be judged worthwhile, even if evidence cannot support the claim that it leads directly to reduction in crime.

"It is a worthwhile program that can be helpful in some neighborhoods," Henig says, "but it is not the cure-all that overly enthusiastic exponents have suggested. If a real dent is to be made in crime and if the needs of all neighborhoods are to be met, other substantial initiatives must be designed and put into effect."

Copies of the study are available for $2.50 from the Center for Washington Area Studies, Ext. 6240.

NEWSNOTES

INTERVIEW

JAMES DEAKIN, adjunct associate professor of journalism, was interviewed on C-Span, December 5, about news media and on WRC-TV (Channel 4), December 19, about national security.

PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

JAMES R. BARTH, professor of economics, presented a paper entitled, "The Economic Consequences of Federal Deficits: An examination of the Net Wealth and Instability Issues," with George Iden and Frank Russek at the Southern Economic Association meetings in Atlanta, Georgia, November 16.

WILLARD E. CALDWELL, professor of psychology, attended a seminar, "Looking for the Shadow" at the Human Sexuality Institute of Washington, D.C., November 10.

BARBARA J. DUNHAM, assistant director of admissions, presented a paper on the affirmative side in a debate entitled, "Academic Scholarships: Should We Reward Exceptional Students?" at the Annual Meeting of the Middle States Association of Collegiate Registrars and Officers of Admission (MSACROA), Atlantic City, New Jersey, November 28.

AMITAI ETZIONI, universtiy professor, appeared on the Chamber of Commerce-sponsored television program "It's Your Business" on December 2. The discussion revolved around dealing with the Far East. The other discussants on the half-hour program were Dr. Richard Lesher, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Dean George Packard of the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies and Herman Starobin, director of research for the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

RODERICK S. FRENCH, professor of philosophy, moderated a panel on "Pragmatism in Contemporary American Life," at the National Conference of State Humanities Councils, Atlanta, Georgia, November 28 - December 2. He also attended the Board of Directors' meeting of the National Federation of State Humanities Councils which met concurrently.

DAVIS LEE, associate professor of Chinese, presented a paper entitled, "The Chinese Language in the United States," at the 1984 Modern Language Association Convention held in Washington, D.C. December 29.

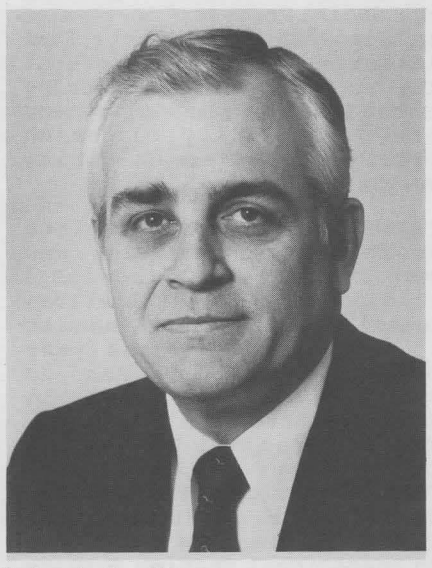
SHOUP AND COHEN APPOINTMENTS APPROVED BY BOARD OF TRUSTEES

At its January 17 meeting, the Board of Trustees approved the appointments of Robert D. Shoup as Director of Planning and Budgeting and of Margaret K. Cohen as Assistant Provost for Institutional Research.



Robert D. Shoup

Shoup joined the university on a full-time basis July 1, 1966, as a systems analyst and then served as a programmer analyst and a planning and budget analyst before becoming assistant director of planning and budgeting in August, 1974.

He held this position until July, 1976, when he became acting director of the Computer Center. In February, 1977, he again assumed the responsibilities of assistant director of planning and budgeting and continued in that post until he was appointed to his present position. He holds the degree of Bachelor of Business Administration (1970) from George Washington. He is a resident of Fairfax County, Virginia, married and the father of two children.

Mrs. Cohen became a full-time member of the university's administrative staff on July 1, 1966, as assistant to the vice president for academic affairs. She holds two degrees from the university, both in statistics, (B.A. 1963, M.A. 1966). Her professional memberships include the Association for Institutional Research and the American Statistical Association. She and her husband, an attorney, live in Fairfax, Virginia. They have one son.

RARE AMERICAN PAINTINGS ON LOAN TO THE UNIVERSITY

Two paintings by the American artist Charles Hawthorne (1872-1930) are on indefinite loan to the university from George Washington alumna Dr. Joan F. Higbee, who received her undergraduate degree, Bachelor of Arts, from the Columbian College of Arts and Sciences in 1967. She holds graduate degrees from the Johns Hopkins University (M.A. and Ph.D., Romance languages, 1976) and from the Catholic University of America (M.S.L.S., 1977). The French universities she attended include the Sorbonne, the Universite de Nancy and the College International de Cannes.

Dr. Higbee discovered the two paintings while she was traveling in France in 1972. She was at that time a graduate student at the Johns Hopkins University. Recognizing their importance in American art, she overcame numerous difficulties to acquire and bring them to the United States. She had them expertly restored and they are now on exhibition in the Special Collections Reading Room of the Gelman Library.

The paintings, "Man with Children" and "Fisherman and Boy," were first exhibited as a pair in the 1913 Paris Salon des Beaux Arts at a time when Hawthorne was just becoming well-known in the United States. He subsequently received wide recognition in American art circles and his paintings were acquired by leading American museums and art galleries throughout the country. Hawthorne founded the Cape Cod School of Art in Provincetown, Massachusetts, and was its director until his death in 1930. E.P. Richardson in his A Short History of Painting in America, calls Hawthorne one of the most influential painter - teachers of the early 20th century.

The paintings, both oil on wood, may be seen from 8:30 am to 5 pm, Monday through Friday and by appointment.

GERMAN PRESS AGENCY CHIEF GIVES HIS VIEWS

In answer to the question "Is there a corresponding hostility (such as that toward the United States) among young Germans toward the Soviet Union?" Dr. Arno Mayer, chief of the German Press Agency, said, "No, there is not and I think the main reason for this is you do not get out of the Soviet Union very much information. When the young Germans see that there are demonstrations against nuclear weapons in this country, they think that this is support for them." Referring to his five and a half years as his agency's bureau chief in Moscow, he emphasized the extreme difficulty of getting information in the Soviet Union.

His appearance on campus was sponsored by the Alumni Association of the School of Public and International Affairs. He explained that after World War II "a lot of Germans came over to U.S. universities and made a lot of friends and are still interested in the U.S. Now," he went on "German young people are not interested in coming."

Dr. Mayer said, in beginning his remarks, that he was expressing his own personal opinions. He noted the contrast between recent reports that "according to official American sources, the relationship between the United States and the Federal Republic of Germany is in excellent shape" and an editorial in the German newspaper the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung which said there is no reason for concern with respect to the "solid" alliance between the two administrations (U.S. and Federal Republic) but that there should be concern about the continued cooperation between the two nations because things will become more difficult in the future.

Regarding the attitude of young Germans towards America, Dr. Mayer said it began changing during the Vietnam era when they asked why a superpower like America acts like the policeman of the world and that their unfavorable opinion was re-affirmed when America invaded Granada.

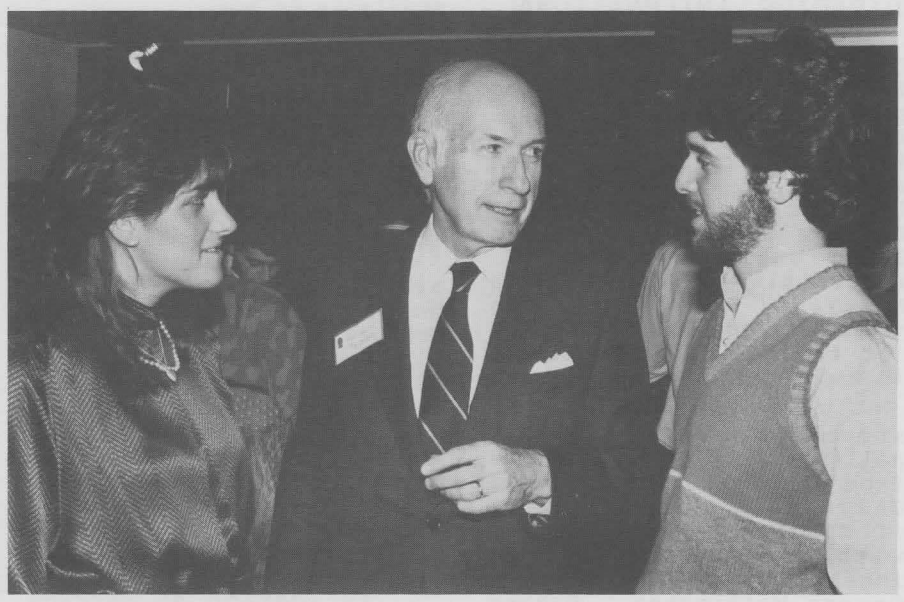
He noted that the majority of West Germans still value the United States as a close ally and that although he had not seen recent polls, former polls show 70 percent of the West German population pro-American.

"The basic problem in the American/German relationship is probably a lack of information," he observed, saying, "The point I want to make is that people of our two countries have to get to know each other better."

Dr. Mayer explained that Germans feel helpless and think that in the event of a nuclear exchange between the U.S. and the Soviet Union, Europe, especially Germany, would be the battlefield of a limited nuclear war, millions of Europeans would die, Europe would be destroyed and afterwards America and the Soviet Union would consider a truce.

"I am convinced that the Soviet system does not have a future," he said, predicting that it will fail in 50 or 100 years. Dr. Mayer pointed out, "The Communist party asks people to work very hard but does not reward them. The communist ideology cannot work because it tries to solve the problems of the eighties with the ideas of the twenties." He said the communists will not be able to solve their problems because of their inflexibility.

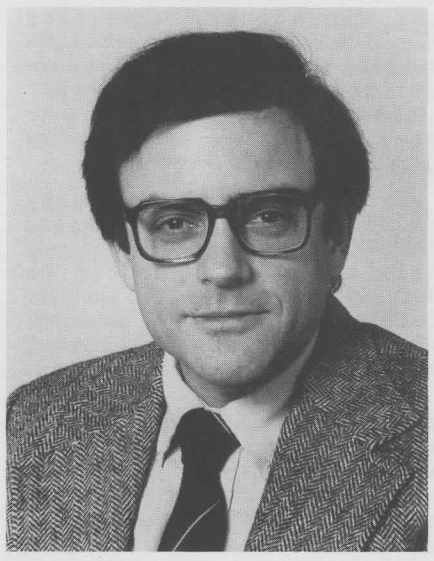
He said the German Press Agency is like the Associated Press, that it is owned by the publishers and radio and television stations, that there is an English service for the Far East, one in Arabic and one in Spanish for Latin America.



SENIOR CLASS RECEPTION -- President Lloyd Elliott, center, talked with Andrew Kaye, right, a Columbian College senior majoring in political science, as Sheryl Levin, an SGBA senior and marketing major, listened at the January 22 reception for graduating seniors the president hosted in the GW University Club. The event was the first of a series planned for seniors this semester.

MURRAY LOEW APPOINTED TO NEW POSITION

Murray H. Loew, associate professor of engineering, has been named assistant for academic computing in the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs. Vice President French announced the appointment at the January 22 meeting of the Faculty Assembly, commenting, "Professor Loew is a good teacher and a good computer scientist who has the complete respect of his colleagues and his students."



Murray H. Loew

Dr. French said that Loew will work closely with the deans as they develop instructional and research applications appropriate to their respective schools, that he will be an ex officio member of the Academic Advisory Committee to the Center for Academic and Administrative Computing, and that he will give his attention to critical areas for future development, such as exploring the proper relationship between the Gelman Library and the Computer Center.

Professor Loew first became associated with the School of Engineering and Applied Science as an associate professorial lecturer in engineering in the fall of 1975. He became a full-time member of the faculty in 1978. He is a member of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers Computer Society; the Association for Computing Machinery; and the School of Engineering Graphics Subcommittee. A graduate of Drexel University (B.S. 1965), he earned his graduate degrees from Purdue University (M.S. 1967, Ph.D. 1972). A resident of Alexandria, he is married and the father of two children.

E. DONALD DRIVER IS DIRECTOR, INTERNATIONAL STUDENT SERVICES

E. Donald Driver assumed the post of director, International Student Services on January 22. He was international student and faculty advisor at the University of Maryland, College Park, from October 1980, until coming to GW. Before his association with Maryland, he was, for two years, Foreign Student Advisor for the ELS Language Center in Washington, D.C.

He holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in international politics and foreign service from The Pennsylvania State University and a Master of Business Administration with a concentration in international business from George Washington. During the time he was a GW master's candidate, he was a member of the Housing and Residence Life staff and coordinator for the international special interest floor in Thurston Hall.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY CONFERENCE SERIES

If you are an executive, dean, director (associate or assistant) and if more than 18 months have passed since you have met to discuss the University's position, policies, procedures and practices regarding EEO and Affirmative Action, the Office of Equal Employment Activities asks that you register now for the Equal Employment Opportunity Conference for University Executives.

The conference is designed exclusively for university executives and those in policy-making positions. It is composed of two half-day sessions and provides a forum for interactive communication and problem-solving around EEO-related issues.

Registrants must select dates for both sessions, I and II, from the following schedule:

Session I	Session II
February 12	February 26
April 10	April 24
June 6	June 11

GW RECEIVES LARGE BEQUEST FOR CANCER RESEARCH

The university has received nearly $800,000 for cancer research projects and related equipment from the estate of Dr. Frederick John Cullen and Marie Stone Cullen.

Dr. Cullen was associated with GW in research and in the development of standards for the use of non-prescription drugs, and later served as Medical Director and Executive Vice President of the Proprietary Association of America, a trade group of manufacturers of over-the-counter pharmaceutical products. He died in 1968.

Dr. Cullen had been both a pharmacist and a physician. Born in Kokomo, Indiana, he was graduated from the Winona College of Pharmacy at Indianapolis in 1907. He received his M.D. degree at the University of Colorado in 1913.

Mrs. Marie Stone Cullen was active in the American Red Cross as a volunteer at the Bethesda Naval Hospital for many years. She died in 1978 and the bequest came to GW upon the death of Mrs. Cullen's mother, Mrs. Edith C. Morgan, who passed away in late 1984.

$275,000 of the funds will be used for the purchase of an electron microscope and the balance of the principal will be used to establish an endowment fund to be known as the "Frederick John Cullen and Marie Stone Cullen Fund" for cancer research.

CHANGE IN SAVINGS BONDS INTEREST RATE

The U.S. Savings Bonds Division of the Department of the Treasury has announced a significant increase in the market-based interest rate for Series EE Savings Bonds. The market-based interest rate changes each May and November. The new rate, effective for Series EE Bonds issued between November 1, 1984, and April 30, 1985, is 10.94 percent. This represents an increase from the May-October rate of 9.95 percent.

If an employee wishes to buy Savings Bonds, payroll deductions made for the purchase of bonds are taken from each paycheck. The purchase price may be averaged over a number of paychecks. For example: the purchase price for a $50.00 Savings Bond is $25.00. You may elect to have $12.50 deducted each payday, thus purchasing a bond every other payday. Bonds which you buy are mailed directly to you from the Treasury Department.

Regular full-time and regular part-time faculty and staff interested in participating in the U.S. Savings Bond Payroll Savings Plan may visit the Records and Benefits Division, Department of Personnel Services, Building GG, 2125 G Street, NW, to complete the appropriate form.

WINTER CONVOCATION TO BE SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 17 ABC's STEVE BELL TO SPEAK, RECEIVE DEGREE

The Winter Convocation will take place on Sunday this year, instead of on the day set aside as "Washington's Birthday Observed," which has been the custom in the last few years. The ceremony is scheduled for 1 pm at the Charles E. Smith Center.

Steve Bell, anchorman for ABC's "World News This Morning" and the news segments of "Good Morning America," will be the convocation speaker and will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. Lawrence A. Cremin, Frederick A.P. Barnard Professor of Education and former president at Teachers College, Columbia University will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Humanities.

Steve Bell

Five Alumni Achievement Awards will be presented. Recipients will be: Abul Huda Taji Farouki, (B.E.E. 1966, M.E.A. 1974), president and chief executive officer of American Export Group International Services Inc., an international business organization which bears the acronym Aegis; Edward Jude Feeney (M.A.E 1958, Ed.D. 1971), immediate past superintendent of the Prince George's County School System; Lewis Henry Kuller (M.D. 1959), professor and chairperson of the Department of Epidemiology in the University of Pittsburgh Graduate School of Public Health; Lawrence Stanley Margolis (J.D. 1961), a judge on the U. S. Court of Claims; and Jerry Michael Reinsdorf (B.B.A. 1957), chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Balcor/American Express Inc. and chairman of the board of the Chicago White Sox major league baseball team.

Approximately 1,000 degrees will be conferred at the ceremony. President Lloyd H. Elliott will confer the honorary degrees and degrees in course and will give the traditional charge to the graduates. The invocation and benediction will be given by the Reverend William C. Crawford, director, Ecumenical Christian Ministry. Music will be provided by the Potomac Brass, under the direction of Roy J. Guenther Robert M. Eldridge, bass, will lead in the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

The change of the convocation date to Sunday was made with the thought that families and friends of the graduates might find it more convenient to attend a ceremony in the middle of the holiday weekend.

There will be receptions following the Winter Convocation for the graduates and their guests in the Marvin Center. Sunday brunch will be available for $4.50 in Marvin Center's Colonial Commons on the second floor of the building from 9:30 am to 12:30 pm. Reservations are being taken by the University Marshal's Office, Ext. 6325. At 10:30 am Sunday, there will be a mass sponsored by the Newman Catholic Student Center in the Marvin Theatre. Arrangements have been made for family photographs in the Fifth Floor Lounge of Marvin Center between 9 am and 4:30 pm. The cost will be $4.50 for a 5 x 7 color photo, with a special rate of four for $15.

GAA SEEKS NOMINATIONS FOR ALUMNI TRUSTEES

The Governing Board of the General Alumni Association (GAA) is seeking nominations for individuals to serve as alumni trustees on the university's Board of Trustees.

To be eligible for consideration, a candidate for the position of Alumni Trustee must hold an earned degree from The George Washington University; should have demonstrated interest in the university or have been involved in activities of the General Alumni Association or one of its constituent organizations; and should have distinguished himself/herself in either volunteer or professional activities, both in service and activity as a student at the university as well as after graduation.

There will be three Alumni Trustee positions open on the board in the spring of this year. These trustees serve for three years and are limited to two consecutive terms.

Nominations should be sent by Friday, February 15, to Nominating Committee, Alumni House, The George Washington University, Washington, DC, 20052. If there are questions about the nominating process, contact GAA President John R. Manning, by calling Ext. 6435.

GEORGE WASHINGTON AWARDS NOMINATIONS DUE FEB. 19

The Joint Committee of Faculty and Students is seeking nominations for the ninth annual George Washington Awards, to be presented at the spring commencements.

The awards were established in 1976 to give special recognition to members of the GW community whose contributions have had a broad impact on campus life and whose service has been above and beyond that which is usual or expected.

All students, faculty, administrators and staff of the university may submit nominations or may be nominated. Guidelines and forms for nominations can be obtained from the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs, Rice Hall, Room 403.

Deadline for nominations is Tuesday, February 19, at 5 pm. Up to 10 awards will be presented at the spring commencements. For more information, contact the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs, Ext. 7210.

EDWARD D. KENNEY RESIGNS AS SECURITY DIRECTOR

Edward D. Kenney has submitted his resignation as director of safety and security, effective February 8. Curtis Goode, assistant director of safety, has been named to become acting director as of February 8. According to Vice President for Administration and Research Carl J. Lange, Mr. Kenney cited personal reasons for resigning, primarily his commute to and from Fredericksburg, Virginia, which is 120 miles round trip.

GW FORUM TOPIC IS FULL OF QUESTIONS FOR WRITERS

"What difference can you make?" is the topic for the next issue of GW Forum.

Writers submitting manuscripts are asked to provide or suggest answers to a number of questions, among them: Can one human being make a difference in a world of "Star Wars," compassion-numbing droughts and famines, and deep-despairing cores of cities? Can one make the difference in the smallest of shifting communities? Can one human being counter the chronic and inherited angers of his race and family, the drive to dominate? How can we care enough to make a difference or should we start by asking if we want to make a difference?

Essays of from 1,000 to 2,000 words should be sent to Professor A.E. Claeyssens, English Department, Stuart Hall, Room 407, (telephone Ext. 6472 or Ext. 7355). Deadline for submission of all manuscripts is Friday, February 15.

SECURITY NOTE

The Office of Safety and Security has found that the incidence of office thefts can be greatly reduced if all of us will just lock the doors to our offices when we go out for even a few minutes. If a would-be purloiner can't get in the door, then he/she can't ransack desks and cabinets for our valuables. Safety and Security reminds us that since we have such a friendly campus, we need to be alert to keep the unfriendlies out.

1984 FEDERAL TAX EXEMPT STATUS EXPIRES FEB. 15

Federal tax form W-4, item 6, allows certain employees to claim exemption from tax withholding by certifying that they "did not owe any Federal income tax and had a right to a full refund of all income tax withheld" for the previous year and that they expect a similar situation to exist for the current year. This exemption from tax withholding is valid for only one calendar year at a time and expires annually in February.

Employees who are eligible to continue their 1984 exemption from tax withholding in 1985 must complete a form W-4 by Friday, February 15, 1985. Failure to recertify by February 15 will result in the withholding of Federal taxes as though the employee has zero withholding allowances.

Forms W-4 are available in the Records and Benefits Office of Personnel Services, Building GG, 2125 G Street, NW, or at the University Payroll Office, Rome Hall, Room 101.

Please note that this section (item 6) is used mostly by student employees. This announcement does not apply to the rest of form W-4 which is used for claiming marital status, dependents and withholding allowances. These items remain in effect until changed by the employee.

NOTE: Virginia tax exempt status expired 12/31/84.

Maryland tax exempt status will expire 4/30/85.

COLONNADE GALLERY TO PRESENT WASHINGTON MONUMENT EXHIBIT

Art work, photographs, historical documents and souvenirs, both contemporary and vintage, will be included in the Colonnade Gallery's exhibition, "Aspects of the Washington Monument: 100th Anniversary Celebration." Works by Washington artists such as David Stainbeck, Pat Autenrieth, Mary Nash and Michael Clark, who have been inspired by the monument, will be on view. The exhibition will open Thursday, February 7, and will run through Friday, March 22. Gallery hours will be 8 am to 11 pm daily.

PRE-TAPING CONFERENCE--Susan Tolchin, professor of public administration, seated, talked with Eileen M. Lynch, interviewer for the Dallas Community College Educational Television Station, January 25 before a wide-ranging taped discussion between the two on the American political scene in 1985. The taped interview will be telecast over several hundred television stations in the United States.

POPULAR MECHANICS SEEKS EARLY-ON READERS

Popular Mechanics is searching for scientists, engineers and others in academic life and research who trace their interest in their work back to the time when they read Popular Mechanics as children. The magazine is preparing a feature story on such people. The information will not be used for commercial promotion. If you are an early reader of Popular Mechanics and wish to answer this query, send your name, title and address (with zip code) to the editor at 224 West 57th Street, New York N.Y. 10019 (telephone a.c. 212, 262-4824). Deadline for submissions is February 20.

GW READING SERIES

The Department of English continues to sponsor the Evening Reading Series and Tuesday Noon Poetry Series.

The evening readings are at 8 pm in Room B-120 of the Academic Center and will begin this Thursday with Joanne Barrio, a Washington writer, teacher and author of non-fiction. On Thursday, February 21, three GW writer-teachers will be featured: Jonathan Chaves, Department of East-Asian Studies; David McAleavey, Department of English; and Berry Morgan, Department of English.

The Tuesday Noon Poetry Series is held from noon to 1 pm in the atrium at 2000 Pennsylvania Avenue. It begins tomorrow, February 5, with Bonnie Gordon, Hilary Tham, and Bob Svenson. February 12, Howard Berliner, Ross Taylor and Grace Cavalieri will read and on February 19, Julia Alvarez, Jenny McKean Moore Lecturer will appear. After her reading, those present will be invited to read their poetic compositions.

LACHIN, professor of statistics, presented a paper, "Ursodeoxycholic Acid Treatment of Gallstones-International Results" at the symposium, Update on Treatment of Gallstones: Role of Ursodeoxycholic Acid, December 1 in Scottsdale, Arizona. He presented a tutorial "The Design and Analysis of Clinical Trials: Perspective on Recent Developments" to the 40th Annual Conference on Applied Statistics on December 5 in Newark, New Jersey. The address was based on the book The Randomized Clinical Trial and Therapeutic Decisions which was co-edited by Dr. Lachin (Marcel-Dekker, 1982).

JAMES WILLIS ROBB, professor of Romance languages, directed a third colloquium on "Literary Friendships of Alfonso Reyes" at the meetings of the American Association of Teachers of Spanish and Portuguese, held in Mexico City. Alicia Reyes, director of the Alfonso Reyes Library helped direct the colloquium. Robb was on sabbatical leave during the Fall 1984 semester and travelled to four cities of Colombia: Cali, Medellin, Bogata and Cartagena. In Bogata, he was received by Colombian essayist German Arciniegas and by scholars of the Instituto Caro y Cuervo.

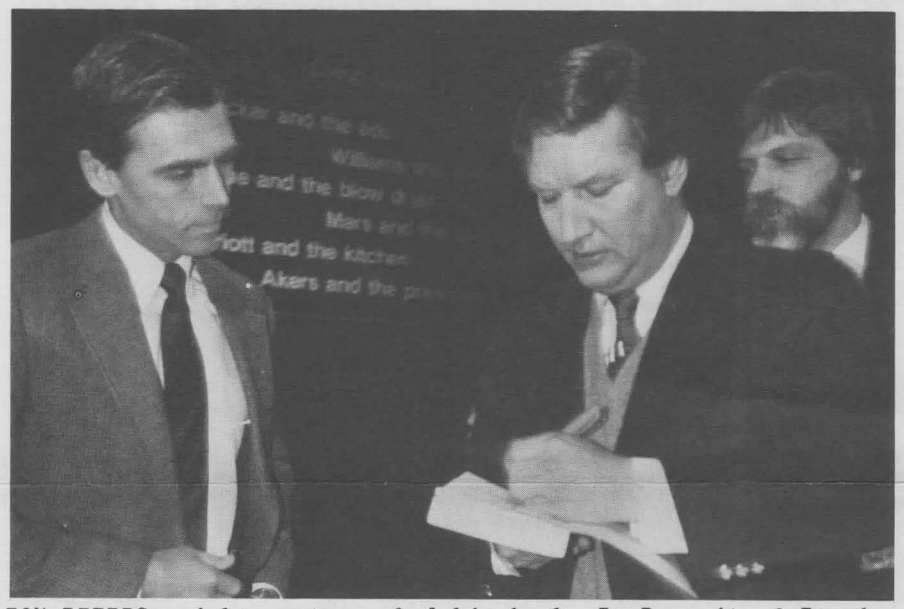
TOM PETERS TAPES PROGRAM IN MARVIN THEATRE FOR PBS

"Whenever you see a winner, whether it's in selling Girl Scout cookies or working with computers, you see fun, zest and enthusiasm," Tom Peters told his audience at the end of two television tapings in the Marvin Theatre on January 30.

With the title "A Passion for Excellence: An Evening with Tom Peters," a program edited from the tapings will air nationally over the Public Broadcasting System (PBS) during public television's Festival '85 fundraising campaign. Peters is the co-author, with Robert H. Waterman Jr., of the best-selling book In Search of Excellence. The program focuses on small businesses, schools, hospitals and even households. In the course of his presentations Peters emphasized the importance of pride, love, care, trust, courtesy, listening and respect in achieving excellence. "People who really love what they're doing have the joy of excellence in performance and in participation on a team," he said.

During a press conference after the tapings, he gave the following advice in answer to a question about women and corporations, "Avoid the Fortune 500 like the plague. Look for a small company without bias and, if possible, start your own business."

In Washington, DC, WETA/26 will carry the program on March 12 at 9 pm and repeat it on March 17 at 3 pm.



TOM PETERS, right, autographed his book, In Pursuit of Excellence, for Charles A. Fountaine, program analyst, Veterans Administration, to take to a member of his staff. Fountaine is a current participant in SGBA's Contemporary Executive Development Program.

"GEORGE" WILL BE CALLING IN MARCH AND APRIL

"Hello, this is 'George' calling," is a phrase that will be heard many times in many voices in just a few short weeks.

The annual "George Calling" Phonathon is scheduled for the weeks of March 4th through March 29th with students calling April 1st through April 5th.

Every year, approximately 600 alumni and members of the university community volunteer for several hours of phoning in the evening to call GW alumni and ask for their support for the Annual Fund. The effort has always proven successful and the established goal this year is an unprecedented amount of $360,000. The geographic area for calling has been extended to all major states east of the Mississippi. Volunteers will focus primarily on those alumni who have previously supported the Annual Fund.

The Phonathon calling location will be Room 410-415, Marvin Center. Calling hours are from 6 to 9:30 pm. A light supper will be served for volunteers beginning at 5:30 pm and guidelines for telephoning and record-keeping will be provided before the calling begins.

Students will be concentrating their efforts on raising funds for student financial aid. Last year during the 1983-84 Campaign, they raised more than $22,000 in pledges. This year they hope to stretch the figure to $25,000.

For additional information and to volunteer, call Director of Alumni Support Serap S. Akisoglu, at Ext. 6414.

MARILYN GARST IN FACULTY RECITAL, FEBRUARY 25

Marilyn Garst, adjunct assistant professor of music, will appear in a Faculty Recital in Marvin Theatre on Monday, February 25, at 8 pm. She will perform sonatas by Copland, Mozart and Brahms. Tickets, available at the door, will be $4, general admission; $2, GW faculty, alumni and staff; and $1, students and senior citizens. For further information, call Ext. 6245.

BLACK HISTORY MONTH OBSERVANCES SCHEDULED

A number of observances are scheduled on campus during February -- Black History Month. The events are being coordinated by the university's Black People's Union and are co-sponsored by the Program Board.

Thursday, February 14, author Dr. Francis Welsing will discuss "Racism and Its Impact on Black Male-Female Relationships" at 7 pm in Marvin Center, Room 426. A reception will follow.

Tuesday, February 19, Randall Thompson of TransAfrica will speak at noon on "Africa: A Continent in Turmoil" in Marvin Center, Room 410-11.

Saturday, February 23, there will be a fund-raising party for the Black People's Union in the first floor of Marvin Center. The party's purpose is to help with expenses connected with Black History Month. An individual donation of $3.00 will be asked for at the door.

On Wednesday, February 27, under the sponsorship of the university's Committee on Historical Observances, GW Associate Professor of American History and Civilization James O. Horton will discuss "The Afro-American Family: Historical Strengths for the New Century" at 3:30 pm. Following his remarks, black students at GW with grade point averages (GPAs) of 3.5 and above will be honored. There will be a reception after the program.

Thursday, February 28, Clarence Thomas, chairman of the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, will speak on the subject "Blacks, Opportunity and Government" at 7 pm in Marvin Center, Room 426.

With the exception of the fund-raising party, all the events are free and open to all members of the GW community. For more informaion, call the Black People's Union at Ext. 7321.

DISTINGUISHED EXECUTIVES IN SGBA SPRING PROGRAM

Two distinguished executives have been appointed to the School of Government and Business Administration's Executive-in-Residence Program for the spring semester. They are Malcolm R. Lovell, Jr. and Charles F. Bingman.

Malcolm Lovell, an expert in labor management relations and productivity, will work within SGBA's Continuing Professional Education Program in the areas of business and government management and industrial relations. Most recently a guest scholar at the Brookings Institution, he is a former under secretary at the Department of Labor. He has served as president of the Rubber Manufacturers Association. Lovell's undergraduate degree is from Brown University. He received his master's degree in business administration from Harvard University.

Charles Bingman, whose expertise is in public management, will work within SGBA's Public Administration Department. Most recently a practitioner-in-residence at the National Academy of Public Administration, he held top-level positions at the U.S. Office of Management and Budget. Before that, he was special assistant to the deputy secretary at the Department of Transportation. He received both his degrees in management from the University of Wisconsin (B.B.A. and M.B.A.).

UNIVERSITY THEATRE PRESENTS "YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU"

The George Washington University Theatre will present Kaufman and Hart's comedy, "You Can't Take It With You," February 19 through 23 at 8 pm in the Marvin Theatre. There will be a 2 pm matinee on Sunday, February 24.

Guest director for the production is Fred Lee, who is currently teaching at the Duke Ellington School for the Arts.

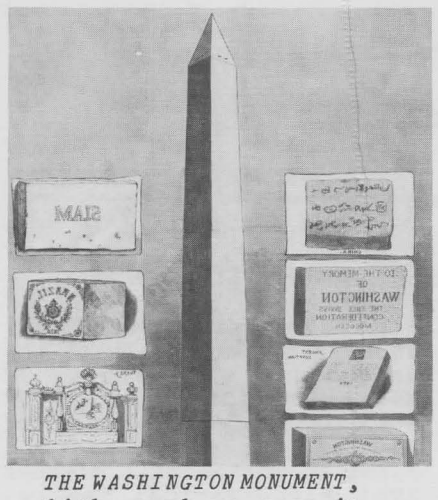
Ticket prices are: general admission, $6; students and senior citizens, $3. For more information and reservations, call Ext. 6178 between 10 am and 4 pm Monday through Friday.

—— GW ALUMNI ON TIME ——

The Alumni Relations Office has produced a large poster in the style of the cover of Time magazine, composed of 20 covers which featured George Washington University alumni.

Among the 20 alumni shown on the poster are Margaret Truman, George Romney, John Foster Dulles and his brother, Allen Dulles, Senator J. William Fulbright, Leon Jaworski, Jacqueline Kennedy and Syngman Rhee.

The poster, dated November 26, 1984, will not be sold but is available from the Alumni Relations Office free to members of the university community. Already many Time posters have found places in university offices.



THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT, lithograph as seen in Harper's Magazine of February 21, 1885, exactly 100 years before the date of the reception planned in connection with the Colonnade Gallery's exhibition, "100th Anniversary Celebration of the Washington Monument," February 21, 1985, from 4 to 6 pm in the Colonnade, third floor, Marvin Center. The university community is invited.

FINE ARTS FACULTY SHOW 1985

Works by members of the university's full-time and part-time fine arts faculty will be on exhibition in the Dimock Gallery/Art Department from Thursday, February 14, through Wednesday, March 27. Many of our faculty members are well-known artists whose works have been exhibited widely in the Washington metropolitan area.

There will be 25 artists represented in the exhibition, which will include painting, sculpture, photographs, prints, drawings, ceramics, mixed-media collages and design. It will be possible to purchase some of the works.

Full-time fine arts faculty members, who will have works in the exhibition, are: Constance Costigan, H.I. Gates, Fuller Griffith, Jerry Lake, Samuel Molina, Turker Ozdogan, Arthur Hall Smith, Jeffrey Stephanic, Douglas H Teller, William Woodward and Frank Wright.

Part-time fine arts faculty members, who are included in the exhibition, are: Michael Dennis, Michael Francis, Jo Harrop, Rick McCleary, Lenore D. Miller, Karen Montgomery, John Morrell, John Paradiso, Richard Rodriguez, Maia Sampson, William Schran, Claudia Smigrod, Clarice Smith and Brad Stevens.

Gallery hours are 10 am to 5 pm, Monday through Friday.

MARTHA'S MARATHON WILL BE FEBRUARY 22

Martha's Marathon of Birthday Bargains, the annual auction of treats and privileges sponsored by the GW Residence Hall Association, will take place Friday, February 22, in Marvin Center's third floor ballroom beginning at 8 pm.

Proceeds of the auction provide residence hall scholarships, administered through the Office of Student Financial Aid, which are used to pay residence hall fees for GW students. Martha's Marathon began at Thurston Hall in 1967. Last year's marathon raised in excess of $10,000.

Theme of the 1985 marathon is "Marthas in Wonderland." Plans are being made for the appearance of a live Alice and a White Rabbit as visitors to the occasion from Lewis Carroll's famous book. Music will be provided by the Brothers Jay and the Troubadours will sing during the intermission. There will be an admission charge of $1.00, payable at the door.

Auctioneers will be Professor of Zoology Stefan O. Schiff and Colonel Donald Davis, a professional auctioneer. Sarah Foster, an SGBA senior majoring in marketing, is Martha's Marathon chairman.

ALUMNI SERVICE AWARD NOMINATIONS INVITED

The Alumni Awards Committee is now accepting nominations for individuals to receive Alumni Service Awards.

These awards were established in 1959 to recognize volunteer service to the university, the General Alumni Association (GAA) and to any of the constituent alumni associations. Six years ago the GAA Board authorized a special award category to honor non-alumni who merit recognition for the same kinds of service.

In order to allow the committee ample time to consider nominees and to make a report to the GAA Board in mid-March, it is requested that nominations be submitted no later than Thursday, February 28.

Nomination forms are available from the Alumni Relations Office and should be addressed to Director of Alumni Relations Sandra H. Lear, to be forwarded to the committee. If there are any questions, call Sandra H. Lear at Ext. 6435.

W-2 FORM INFORMATION

The University Payroll Office advises that 1984 W-2s were mailed on January 28, 1985. These forms were sent to the employee's permanent address (not check-mailing address) on file in the Payroll Office as of January 11, 1985. If you have moved recently, your permanent address has been updated only if you filed a new W-4 form with Records and Benefits in the Personnel Office. Please make sure you have a change-of-address notice on file with your former Post Office.

The Payroll Office in Rome Hall will accept requests for duplicates as of today, February 11. Your request must include your current address. As of this date, if the original has been returned to the Payroll Office, it will be forwarded to you. A group of duplicates will be processed and sent out weekly. Your duplicate will be sent to the address you give in your request.

CAREER SERVICES OPEN HOUSE--Linda Brown, an education alumna, talked with Julie Mangis of the Career Services Center about the varied program planned for Career Week '85.

FELLOWSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

Here are professional and fellowship opportunities with application and proposal deadlines of March 1. Resources for the Future will award two fellowships for young professionals who wish to spend a year doing scholarly work on a social or policy problem in the areas of natural resources, energy or the environment. Resources for the Future also offers small grants for support of research on issues related to the same subjects.

The National Endowment for the Humanities is seeking scholars to direct the Summer Seminars for College Teachers. The program provides the opportunity for teachers at undergraduate and community colleges to have eight weeks of uninterrupted study, research and discussion with the seminar director and distinguished scholars. The director should choose a topic broad enough to accomodate a large range of interests.

The Inter-American Foundation provides fellowships allowing students to carry out field research in Latin America and the Caribbean. Applicants should be master's and doctoral candidates who have not yet completed their coursework. They are required to write and speak the language of the country in which they intend to do the research.

For more information, contact the Graduate Fellowship Information Center, Ext. 6217.

STEVE BELL SHARES INSIGHTS WITH WINTER GRADUATES

"The message is the system needs us and we need the system," ABC news anchorman Steve Bell told the graduates at the February 17 Winter Convocation in the Charles E. Smith Center.

He offered two observations from his special vantage point as a reporter. First, he said, "The happiest, most secure people, both in public and private life, are those people who have value systems that are based upon something larger than themselves, value systems that in fact reach out to others." Second, he declared, "From a purely pragmatic perspective, there's nothing wrong with looking out for number one but only if you realize that both the opportunity to get ahead and to enjoy the fruits of labors in freedom and security that we enjoy in this country -- only if you realize that those are absolutely dependent upon the health of our system ... everyone's favorite whipping boy."

Commentator Bell pointed out that we sometimes forget that our democratic institutions are based on the revolutionary concept brought to this country by the early settlers, that of every human being deriving power from a sovereign God and government's legitimate power flowing from those who choose to be governed as a community of individuals.

Mr. Bell contrasted what he called "that view of reality" with the experience of a young Chinese, Li Dan, who was the interpreter for him and fellow TV newsman Ted Koppel when they were working on a documentary in China in 1973. He said that after they got to know Li Dan they would tease him about what he wanted to become and that he would only say, "Whatever Chairman Mao wants me to be," but that finally he admitted to the ambition of becoming an English language commentator for Radio Beijing. He related how Li Dan was sent to a re-education camp along with his wife, as an intellectual, because as an advocate for what the ABC documentary team was trying to do, Li had gotten into trouble with some local officials around the country. Bell told of his great pleasure in seeing Li Dan in New York a year ago accompanying the Chinese foreign minister as the chief English language commentator of Radio Beijing. He noted however that the period in the re-education camp had been the second disrupting phase of his and his wife's careers because of the former regimes in China.

Sharing his observations of both North and South Korea of 10 years ago, as well as of the Iranian hostage crisis, Bell emphasized his view of the importance of faith in the spirit of a nation, particularly a democracy, and said to the graduates, "Permit me to leave this challenge with the class of '84-'85: Consciously take with you from this institution of higher learning not only that knowledge you have gained and those skills you have gained that will be used directly for earning a living but take with you also that body of knowledge about our system of government and collective will that is essential to the democratic process and when you do that, make a commitment to use that knowledge as foundation for being part of our solutions rather than our problems." The speaker commented, "I think it's fair to say that we stand taller in our self-perception that we did just a few troubled years ago but there is still a long way to go and we need you to help us recapture the faith and the vision of community that produces confidence, civility and compromise."

President Elliott, in his charge to the graduates, spoke of the poster produced by the Alumni Relations Office in the style of a cover of Time magazine which

TRUSTEE CARR PLEDGES GIFT TO ENHANCE UNIVERSITY YARD

University Trustee Oliver T. Carr Jr. has pledged a gift of $250,000 to the University to bring about major improvements to the University Yard, located adjacent to the National Law Center, Corcoran and Lisner Halls.

In accepting the gift, President Lloyd H. Elliott said, "The University has long felt the need to improve the appearance of the Yard, which is at the heart of our campus. This generous gift from Trustee Oliver Carr will enhance the quality of daily life for the entire GW community. We are deeply grateful for this significant contribution to the University and to the city."

Improvements will be made according to a plan to be prepared by the Washington office of Skidmore Owings, & Merrill, architectural firm. The plan will involve major plantings and other landscape design features. A committee will be selected to review and approve the plan; among those expected to serve on the committee are Trustee Carr and Professor of Urban and Regional Planning Dorn C. McGrath Jr.

Mr. Carr is president of the Oliver T. Carr Company, a real estate planning, development, leasing, and management organization. A third-generation Washingtonian, he is a former president of the Greater Washington Board of Trade. He attended both GW and the University of Maryland. In the fall of 1978 and again in the fall of 1981, he was a visiting lecturer in urban development planning in the University's Department of Urban and Regional Planning. His son, Richard W. Carr, earned a master's degree from GW in urban and regional planning in 1974.

NEW RETIREMENT PLAN OPTIONS APPROVED BY BOARD OF TRUSTEES

At its January 17 meeting, the Board of Trustees approved the addition of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States and The Vanguard Group of Investment Companies as investment managers in The George Washington University Retirement Plan for Faculty and Staff. As a result of this action, eligible faculty and staff will have the opportunity, effective July 1, 1985, to have their future contributions to the Retirement Plan invested in TIAA/CREF or Equitable or Vanguard.

A university brochure, summarizing the features, provisions and investment options available in the Retirement Plan will be distributed by campus mail in early March.

TIAA/CREF, Equitable and Vanguard are also preparing mail-outs regarding investment information. In addition, preparations are underway for a series of group presentations and question and answer sessions with representatives from TIAA/CREF, Equitable and Vanguard. These presentations will be held on campus in the first two weeks in April. Specifics regarding times, dates and locations for these presentations will be announced in the near future.

WOMEN'S NETWORK HONORS WOMEN IN GW ADMINISTRATION

Women in administration at the University were recognized at a February 11 tea in the GW University Club sponsored by the GW Women's Network and hosted by Provost William D. Johnson and Associate Provost Marianne R. Phelps.

Provost Johnson, in welcoming the guests, called the tea a "special occasion" and said, "It is a real, sincere pleasure for me to talk to all of you. To the best of my knowledge, this is our first time to recognize and honor all the women in administration here and the really important contributions each of you makes in your respective areas of the institution." He referred to the January 9 issue of the Chronicle of Higher Education, which had a story on the increased number of women working over the last decade and the January 28 issue of Business Week, which had a cover story on women at work and how they are reshaping the economy. The provost said the story pointed out that, during the 10-year period immediately past, 20 million new jobs were created and that two thirds of them were filled by women. He said that here at the University in the same period "things were not so different." Mr. Johnson noted that in the last 10 years the number of women faculty members has more than tripled, that the three head librarians are women, and that in top management, the number of women has increased from 16 to 56. He stated that in professional, non-faculty positions the number of women has increased from about 600 to something over 1,000 in a wide range of administrative posts and that he feels the University has made progress with respect to salaries. The four women who had been asked to speak on their experiences at the University he called "absolutely outstanding" and said that he wished to add a few other names of those who are making a "tremendous contribution" -- Marianne Phelps, Peggye Cohen, Margaret Trexler, and Mary Bayliss.

brings together 20 GW alumni who have appeared on the magazine's covers. He said it reminded him of "the history and unique role of this university. ... This university's role has over the years been patterned much the same (as that of George Washington, the man). Service to the citizen and to country, to the point where we can take pride that 20 of our alumni ... have made the front cover of Time." The president expressed the hope that the graduates "may serve country, humanity and self in both public and private life through public service, in business or in the professions and be reminded of our first president's service to his country and his rights to the life of a private citizen."

MEMORIAL SERVICE FRIDAY MARCH 1, FOR PROFESSOR LEITE

There will be a memorial service on Friday, March 1, at 12:15 pm in the Marvin Center Theatre for the late Professor Lawrence P. Leite, who died in Alexandria, Virginia, on February 5.

He came to George Washington in the fall of 1956 as assistant professor of art. In 1959, he was named associate professor and in 1967, became full professor. From 1967 to 1972, he served as chairman of the Department of Art. In the spring of 1975, he retired as professor emeritus of art.

Professor Leite was born in Kobe, Japan, September 5, 1907, where his father was Portuguese consul. He grew up in the San Francisco area and from 1939 to 1941, studied painting at the California School of Fine Arts while at the same time studying the humanities at the University of California in San Francisco. He served in the United States Army from 1942 to 1946 attaining the rank of captain. After a period of summer study in Madrid, he pursued graduate studies at the University of Chicago for two years before transferring to the Johns Hopkins University. There he earned two degrees (M.A. 1956 and Ph.D. 1966).

He is survived by a brother, Raymond Leite, of Sonora, California.

TELEPHONE BOOKS AVAILABLE

The Office of Telecommunications Services informs us that Maryland and Virginia telephone directories, both white and yellow pages, are available in the basement of Rice Hall. These directories will only be available at this location from today, Monday, February 25, through Friday, March 1, between 9 am and 5 pm. Departments should send a representative to pick them up or request Transportation to deliver the number of directories needed.

WOMEN'S NETWORK

Dr. Phelps introduced the four women administrators who had been asked to speak and termed them all "competent, professional and effective."

Jan Carroll, compensation manager, Office of Personnel Services, said she would like to speak of people who "opened doors for me, my role models." She pointed out that, back in the '60s and '70s, two main topics of conversation were the lack of role models and women in the household. She named her grandmother, her mother, her father and her husband and expressed appreciation for what she had learned from them and for their support. Mrs. Carroll, who left the university on February 15 to become associated with the Mitre Corporation, declared, "My experience at GW was the best working experience I've ever had."

Marie McGilton, administrative manager of the School of Education and Human Development, looked back over 22 years and said, since she had served five different deans, "I had five different jobs -- so one does not get bored." She noted that the school has come a long way in methodology. "We have definitely grown," she said. "We have left behind the old equipment. We have word processing and Selectric IIIs but it's what you have to do and how you are to do it that's important," she stated. Miss McGilton observed she had always felt the women in the GW administration were the "backbone of the institution in many ways."

Claudia Derricotte, director of student activities, said she still is asked "What is student activities?" and that she does not believe anyone prepares for student activities, but that in working we can draw upon the non-educational skills that we all have. She said she thinks a person should go into a job thinking what he/she can do for an organization. "Sometimes career patterns are predestined. Others of us just find our niche," she commented.

Sheila McCarthy, director of nursing, who has about 800 employees, said she started out to be a nurse, not a nursing administrator. "I accept the honor of having been asked to speak today in the name of other women," she stated. She noted the changes in nursing departments in hospitals over the last 15 years and said that the president of the American Hospital Association agreed this year to have a nurse as a vice president. "We do feel that is a long stride to have taken in a short time ... Nursing is involved at the highest levels of hospitals. We think that's the way it should be," she declared.

JAMES DEAKIN TO SPEAK IN FIRST WEDNESDAY LECTURE

James Deakin, adjunct associate professor of journalism, will speak on Wednesday, March 6, at 8 pm as part of the First Wednesday Lecture Series sponsored by the Alumni Relations Office. His topic is "The Truth Twisters: Government and the Media in the 1980s."

He will speak in Room 402 of the Marvin Center. Reservations for dinner, beginning at 6:30 pm, can be made by both members and non-members of the University Club. Call Ext.6610. Admission to the lecture is free. To reserve a place, call Ext.6435.

-- GW SEMINARS BEGIN --

At the initiative of Vice President for Academic Affairs Roderick French, a series called The George Washington University Seminars is underway.

The seminars are designed to bring together scholars from throughout the University and the Washington area to consider a specific topic in depth and thus take advantage of the possibilities for intellectual exchange offered by the research community in this region.

University Professor Amitai Etzioni is the convenor of the first seminar which has as its topic "The Relationship Between Economics and the Other Social Sciences." The seminar held its first formal meeting on February 15. Among the participants were representatives from such institutions as the Federal Reserve Board, the World Bank, the Woodrow Wilson Center, the Brookings Institution, the International Monetary Fund, the National Academy of Sciences, the Congressional Budget Office, the American Enterprise Institute and the Federal Trade Commission. A core group of 51 seminar participants has been formed.

Future meetings of the seminar are scheduled for March and April. Public choice will be examined with James Buchanan of George Mason University, an expert in the field, as the speaker. The group will hear from Tom Schelling of Harvard, who will discuss his recent work on the economics of self-control.

Vice President French anticipates that as many as four continuing seminars will be formed by this time next year.

ALLNIGHTER FOR MIRIAM'S KITCHEN IS SAT. MARCH 2

The 1985 Allnighter for Miriam's Kitchen is scheduled for Saturday, March 2, in the Charles E. Smith Center.

The allnighter is a midnight mini-olympics. Proceeds will be used to help support Miriam's Kitchen, a breakfast program for homeless people at 19th and H Streets, NW. The program operates totally on charity donations and the allnighter has been a major source of support.

Allnighter team participants will include GW students, faculty and staff. Members of the university community are invited to come and cheer for the teams of their choice and to make a donation at the door.

Serving as co-chairmen for the allnighter are Reverend Bill Crawford of the GW Board of Chaplains and Robert Romano of the Department of Recreation and Intramurals. Contributions for the kitchen, both monetary and canned goods, can be directed to the Board of Chaplains, Building O, 2106 G Street, NW, or contributors can call Ext. 6434.

HOLLIDAY B. WAGNER NAMED COLUMBIAN COLLEGE ASSISTANT DEAN FOR SPECIAL PROGRAMS

Holliday Wagner, assistant professor of biological sciences, is now assistant dean for special programs in the Columbian College of Arts and Sciences. She assumed her new responsibilities as of January 1.

Commenting on the appointment, Columbian College Dean Clara M. Lovett said, "Holly's responsibility is to monitor several programs which the College inherited from DEP. As a former assistant director of DEP, she is ideally qualified for the tasks at hand."

Dr. Wagner became associated with George Washington University in 1982 as assistant professor in the Department of Biological Sciences and as assistant director of the former Division of Experimental Programs. She began her undergraduate studies at the University of Wisconsin at Madison and received a B.S. from the State University of New York, Empire State College, in 1976. From 1978 to 1980, she conducted research for her doctoral dissertation at Duke University and received her Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania in 1981.

In the newly created position in Columbian College, Assistant Dean Wagner coordinates the Service Learning Program and the residential programs in Thurston Hall, "Politics and Values," and in Building JJ, "Computers and Society." The service learning and residential programs were transferred to Columbian College in July, 1984, when programs previously administered by the Division of Experimental Programs were transferred to other units of the University. She will divide her time equally between her professorial and administrative duties.

WORKS OF FINE ARTS FACULTY MEMBERS IN LOCAL GALLERIES

Works of three GW fine arts faculty members will be on exhibition in Washington galleries this month.

Constance Costigan, associate professor of design, will have works on display from March 6 until March 23, (along with the works of Patricia Bellan-Gillen of Pittsburgh) at the Franz Bader Gallery and Bookstore, 2001 I Street, NW.

Works by William Woodward, associate professor of painting, may be seen in the Fendrick Gallery, 3059 M Street NW, through March 23. The exhibition, titled "Dangerous Places," includes oils on canvas and paper.

Oil paintings by Michael Francis, assistant professorial lecturer in art, will be on exhibition through March 9 at Gallery K, 2032 P Street, NW.

All three artists, Costigan, Woodward and Francis, are represented in the current exhibition of works by fine arts faculty in the Dimock Gallery.

GAIL DELENTE AND SURA KIM IN FACULTY PIANO RECITAL

Gail Delente, adjunct assistant professor of piano, and Sura Kim, adjunct assistant professor of music, will appear in a faculty recital on Monday, March 18, at 8 pm in the Marvin Theatre.

The program will be devoted entirely to the romantic piano duet music of Moritz Moszkowski. Professor Delente, an expert on Moszkowski's style, will provide commentary in addition to performing.

Tickets, available at the door, will be $4, general admission; $2, GW faculty, staff and alumni; and $1, students and senior citizens.

UNIVERSITY-WIDE COMPUTER SYMPOSIUM TO BE MARCH 20

On Wednesday, March 20, there will be a one-day symposium at the university titled "Computing at The George Washington University."

Keynote speaker in the first morning session will be Dr. Erich Bloch, director of the National Science Foundation. Short presentations on computing at the University in the past and the present will complete the morning.

In the afternoon, there will be 12 different seminars on aspects of the use of computing in many disciplines such as social sciences, financial analysis and planning, the arts, academic medicine, language and music. It is expected that from the discussions in the seminars will come some sense or direction for the way computers will be used at GW in the future.

The entire day's program is open to all members of the University community -- students, staff, faculty and administration. Planners urge everyone to participate in the afternoon seminars. Professor of Engineering and Applied science Arnold C. Meltzer is serving as symposium organizer. More detailed schedule information will appear in GW Report of March 18.

HONORS CONVOCATION SET FOR APRIL 14

There will be a University Honors Convocation on Sunday, April 14, at 1:30 pm in Lisner Auditorium. Plans are already well underway for the occasion.

This ceremony has been created in response to a perceived need to recognize and encourage excellence in undergraduate scholastic achievement. The idea came from the Public Ceremonies Committee and the establishment of the convocation was approved by the Faculty Senate at its December 14 meeting, 1984.

Three categories of students will be recognized: all students who were named to deans' lists in the previous spring and fall semesters; those students who receive an Outstanding Academic Achievement Citation; and those students who are named Distinguished Scholars. It is estimated that those on deans' list will number 800. Members of this group will have their names printed in the program and will be recognized as a group at the event.

To qualify for the Outstanding Academic Achievement Citation, a student must have completed a minimum of 45 credit hours at GW and must be in the top two per cent of his/her class in his/her respective school (based on Quality Point Index). The estimate for this group is 75. Certificates will be presented to these students by the deans of their schools at the convocation.

The Distinguished Scholar Awards are designed to recognize one undergraduate in each school which grants undergraduate degrees who has distinguished him/herself through exemplary academic achievement and scholarship. The dean of each school will select the scholar upon the recommendations of the school's faculty. Award recipients must have evidenced outstanding scholarship in the course of their studies through a composition, research paper or project which shows originality or enhances knowledge or understanding. Award recipients will receive a certificate and a key in silver with the GW cipher and, on the obverse, the name of the award, the recipient and the date of the convocation. There will be five of these awards, one each for Columbian College, SGBA, SPIA, Engineering and Education.

The convocation itself will begin with music and an academic procession. The major focus of the event will be the presentation of awards. Parents and families will be invited.

Assistant Vice President for Campus Life John E. Perkins is serving as chairman of the Honors Convocation.

LEO RIBUFFO RECEIVES OAH MERLE CURTI AWARD

Leo P. Ribuffo, associate professor of history, has been selected to receive the 1984 Merle Curti Award for his book, The Old Christian Right: The Protestant Far Right From the Great Depression to the Cold War (Temple University Press, 1983).

The Organization of American Historians (OAH) gives the award every other year for the most distinguished publication in the United States in American intellectual history. Ribuffo's book traces the careers of William Pelley, Gerald Winrod and Gerald L.K. Smith, all anti-semites of the 1930s and '40s who grounded their prejudices in religious faith.

Reviewing the book in the October, 1984, American Historical Review, Leonard Dinnerstein wrote, "... his departure from the standard explanations in probing the causes of Christian anti-Semitism and right-wing politics is an eye opener. Future scholars of Fundamentalists in politics and the Christian right wing, in general, will ignore Ribuffo's arguments at their peril."

Dr. Ribuffo and his book will be honored at the OAH Annual Meeting, April 18-21 in Minneapolis.

FRANZ BADER'S COLLECTION OF SIGNED BOOKS ON DISPLAY IN SPECIAL COLLECTIONS

The current exhibition in the Special Collections Reading Room of the Gelman Library, "Selections from Franz Bader's Collection of Signed Books," will continue through Friday, March 15.

Franz Bader is a Washington art authority and photographer and is well known for his gallery on I Street. The 59 books shown were all written by authors with whom Mr. Bader had a personal friendship or a professional association. Some of the authors represented are Dylan Thomas, Dame Edith Sitwell, Harold L. Ickes, Rachel Carson, Henri Cartier Bresson, Jules Romains, Joseph Hergesheimer, Herblock, August Heckscher, Dean Acheson, Elizabeth Bowen, Gunter Grass, Robert Graves, Ivy Litvinoff, Marjorie Phillips, Eleanor Roosevelt, St. John Perse, Edith Sitwell, Paul Tillich and Frederick Gutheim.

Among the large books on display are: Great Paintings from the National Gallery of Art by Huntington Cairns and John Walker; Paintings from the Great Masters by Hereward Lester Cooke; and The Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, edited by Abram Lerner, who also wrote the introduction, and signed by Joseph Hirshhorn for Mr. Bader.

Exhibition hours are 8:30 am to 5 pm weekdays.

DEAN LONG WILL RETURN TO FULL TIME FACULTY

Anticipating a major reorganization of the Division of Continuing Education and Summer Sessions, and for personal reasons, Dean William F. E. Long has asked to return to full-time teaching in the Department of Economics.

He has requested, and been granted, leave until the opening of the fall semester to prepare for the resumption of his teaching duties.

"Dean Long is to be commended for years of outstanding service to the University as Dean and Administrator. We look forward to his continued contributions as a member of the faculty in the fall," said President Llyod Elliott, on announcing the pending reorganization of the division.

Dean Long came to the University in 1964 as assistant professor of economics and progressed through the ranks to become full professor in 1979. He has served as assistant dean of Columbian College, as associate dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, as dean of the Summer Sessions and, since 1979, as dean of the Division of Continuing Education and Summer Sessions.

DCE&SS Assistant Dean Edgar Jones will serve as acting dean while a national search is undertaken for new leadership for the reorganized Division of Continuing Education. Dr. Jones received the Ed.D. from George Washington in 1982. He came to the University in 1978 and served on the staff of the Division of Continuing Education and Summer Sessions prior to becoming assistant dean in January, 1982. Dr. Jones completed his undergraduate studies at the University of Mississippi (B.A. 1955) and also holds the degree of M.B.A. from George Washington (1969). He served in the United States Marine Corps from 1955 to 1975, retiring as a lieutenant colonel. For three years before coming to DCE&SS, he was a secondary school mathematics and business teacher in Woodbridge, Virginia.

VICE PRESIDENT FRENCH, DR. JAMES O. HORTON SPEAK AT BLACK HISTORY EVENT

Vice President for Academic Affairs Roderick S. French, speaking at the February 27 observance of Black History Month sponsored by the University's Committee on Historical Observances said, "GW intends to continue to be a great Washington university in the three senses of Washington: International center, federal capital, and local city. We cannot fulfill our destiny in any one of these dimensions without significant participation by all Americans, including Black Americans." In the course of introductory remarks for the occasion, Vice President French mentioned two programs in which the University is participating: the National Capital Area Writing Project between the departments of English in area universities and the teachers of English in local secondary and elementary schools; and a massive voluntary program, just beginning, to recruit faculty, graduate students and corporation personnel to work to strengthen the teaching of math and science in the D.C. Public School System.

Awards were presented to six GW black students who have attained quality point indexes of 3.5 or above. Those honored were: Nicola S. Bravo, Columbian College junior majoring in zoology; Bradford M. Berry, Columbian College senior in economics; Adrienne C. Twyman, SEAS freshman, who plans a major in electrical engineering; Jean F. Duc, SEAS senior in electrical engineering; Cargill H. Alleyne, Columbian College sophomore, planning to major in chemistry; and Geralene E. Wynn, SGBA junior majoring in finance. They were introduced by Ethel Bothuel, director of the University's Office of Equal Employment Activities and chairman of the Committee on Historical Observances.

The theme of the observance, held in the Marvin Center third floor ballroom, was "The Afro-American Family: Historical Strengths for the New Century."

Dr. James O. Horton, associate professor of American civilization and history and director of the Afro-American Communities Project of the National Museum of American History, gave the commentary on the theme. He began his remarks with a quotation from a freed slave, Jonas West, who, in 1865, said of his family, "We is family nearby. We is family way gone. We is family no 'count but we is all family." West made the statement in a conversation with an official of the Freedmen's Bureau in Mississippi who had objected to West's search for family beyond his nuclear family which had taken him away from the plantation where he was supposed to be living.

Dr. Horton said that what West meant was that regardless of the hardships of slavery, the concept of family was extremely strong. He observed that the idea was so strong that many black people traveled the roads, the highways and the byways of the Reconstruction South in search of family.

Professor Horton said that, in the course of his research, he has been impressed by the extreme adaptability of the black family which has been able to survive under a variety of ridiculously harsh conditions. "One of the most important strengths of the black family," he observed, "is the strong sense of kinship bond that makes kin take responsibility for kin and non-kin. Black families have also been extremely flexible," he went on. "Extended families have become extended households and have become extended communities, that is communities held together by kinship ties and non-kinship ties beyond the geographic area. In 1985, the family ties which tie blacks in northern cities to blacks in southern rural areas are alive and well," Dr. Horton stated.

APPLICATION FOR ADDITION TO H.B. BURNS CLINIC TO BE REVIEWED, APRIL 24

The George Washington University's application for approval of the construction of an addition to the H.B. Burns Memorial Clinic will be reviewed at a hearing, April 24, before the District of Columbia's Board of Zoning Adjustment.

Plans call for a seven-story addition with alterations to the existing building including an overhead pedestrian walkway linking the hospital with the clinic. This $31 million project would complete the block of 22nd Street between I Street and Pennsylvania Avenue. The new construction plan also includes three levels of underground parking.

The building will become the location for The George Washington University Health Plan (HMO), now located in leased space on 25th Street between M and N Streets, NW. The lease on the space is to be terminated in December, 1986, making it critical to have completed space for the HMO by that time.

University planners have met with members of the condominium association of The President at 2141 I Street, whose property adjoins that of the proposed new construction. Vice President and Treasurer Charles E. Diehl commented, "Such meetings are an effort to identify and understand the property owners' concern and to keep them apprised of our plans." Additional meetings with condominium owners and the Advisory Neighborhood Commission (ANC) have also been held recently.

"In consideration for residents of The President," said Assistant Treasurer Robert Dickman, "the plans have been drawn to reflect a 32-foot set-back from the property line on I Street. This ensures that three out of four tiers of windows on the property line can be maintained without obstruction of their view."

JAMES DEAKIN SPEAKS IN FIRST WEDNESDAY LECTURE

"Truth follows the law of economics: when the demand for it goes up, so does the supply," according to James Deakin, associate adjunct professor of journalism and White House correspondent for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch from 1955 to 1980. He spoke on: "The Truth Twisters: Government and the media in the 1980s" at the First Wednesday Lecture on March 5 sponsored by the Alumni Relations Office.

Beginning with his White House coverage under President Eisenhower, Deakin explained that "selective information" is given to reporters. For example, in 1955, Eisenhower suffered a heart attack and for 12 hours the White House reported it as "digestive upset" thus leading the American people to think the president had nothing more than an upset stomach. President Johnson, in July 1967, told the country that the Air Force was conducting the most self-limited air war in Viet Nam, with only 23,585 "sorties" being flown. What was not released was that these sorties were really "missions" with each mission consisting of four planes, meaning that the actual number of planes in the air was 94,340.

"There are three ways the government and the media can distort the truth: they can give partial truth,

NEWS AND PUBLIC AFFAIRS SURVEY DEADLINE IS NEAR

This coming Friday, March 22, is the final date for replying to the survey conducted by the Office of News and Public Affairs on the university's involvement with the community. The responses which have already been received are now being prepared for publication. Material should be sent to Jane Lingo, Office of News and Public Affairs, Room 705, Gelman Library.

Important strengths of the black family remain adaptability, flexibility, expandability and a strong sense of kinship bond, he repeated.

He discussed black family issues of the next century. Professor Horton sees as problems the continuing rise of single parent households and the fact that women's salaries are not commensurate with men's; poverty and the impact of poverty including the fact that black men's lives are generally five years shorter than white men's; and that aid to the dependent is not only inadequate but that also there is a widely held misconception that people are purposely remaining dependent.

Drawing lessons from black history, he emphasized the need for continued persistent effort at alliances between blacks, old people, women and other minorities. He cited the importance and historical strengths of black-Jewish relationships and reminded the audience of Jonas West's statement, "We is all family."

incomplete information, or outright lies. I feel that if the press reports a 'non-truth' they have most likely been given wrong information - except in isolated cases such as the Janet Cooke incident at the Washington Post."

Deakin explained that because of space limitations, important story details or entire stories may be cut. "You must consider that in the average daily, two thirds of the space is for advertising, leaving one third for editorials and copy. A better example is television - the most influential and far-reaching of all the news media has only 21 minutes to sum up our vast and unruly world."

A question and answer period followed the 40-minute discussion. A younger man felt that the Northern press was deceptive in not reporting certain events of the Civil Rights Movement in the South. In defending the media, Deakin responded, "Editors must decide what goes in the one third space of an average daily or the 21 minutes of a broadcast. Cutting a story because of space is far from an outright lie."

Deakin is the author of the books The Lobbyists and Straight Stuff: The Reporters, The White House and The Truth. He has been with GW since September 1981.

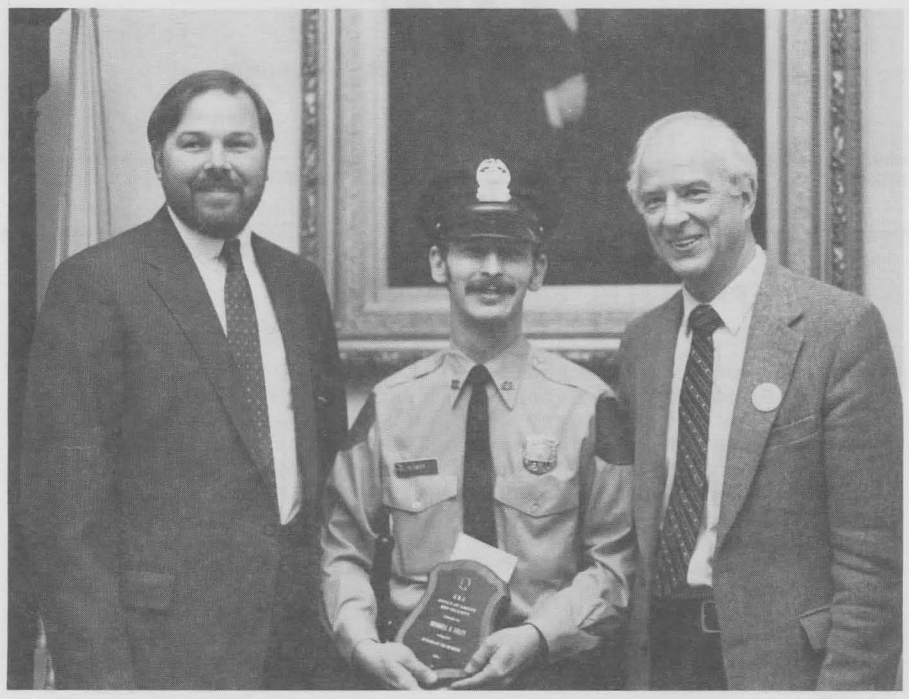
TWO-PART BACH BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION COMING

The Department of Music is presenting a two-part Bach Birthday Celebration this coming Thursday, March 21, and the following Monday, March 25.

The Thursday program will feature Anner Bylsma, cellist, performing Bach's Cello Suites Nos. 3 and 5. Bylsma has been called "the Rostropovich of the baroque cello" by the Boston Globe. Tickets to the 6:30 pm event will be $5.

The Monday program will be a lecture-recital, titled "From Harpsichord to Piano," with Neil Tilkens on the piano and Marilyn Garst on the harpsichord. Admission to this event will be free, but admittance passes will be required; 6:30 pm is the time.

Both events will be held in Room B-120 of the Academic Center. Call Ext. 6245 for ticket information.



OFFICER OF THE QUARTER Officer Russell A. Foley, center, is shown with Acting Director of Safety and Security Curtis Goode, left, and Vice President for Administration and Research Carl J. Lange. He was selected to receive the Officer of the Quarter award for October-December 1984 for his "outstanding courage, exceptional acceptance of responsibility and dedication that goes beyond the call of duty."

OPPORTUNITIES THROUGH NEH AND WOODROW WILSON CENTER

The Woodrow Wilson Center for Scholars has invited the University to nominate graduate students for the positions of Center Research Associates. The appointments involve research assistance for a fellow or staff member at the center and the opportunity to participate in special activities and events. Students may be nominated if they have a background in one of the following areas: United States history or politics; West European history or politics; Soviet and/or East European studies with reading knowledge of Russian; Latin American Studies with reading knowledge of Spanish; or East Asian studies with some knowledge of Chinese or Japanese. Application Deadline is April 1.

The National Endowment for the Humanities will offer 75 eight-week seminars to college teachers for advanced study and research in their own fields or in others related to their fields. Applicants must teach undergraduate courses, full or part-time. Preference will be given to those who have not recently had the chance to work at a major library. Successful applicants will receive a stipend of $3,000 for two full months. The deadline for applying is April 1.

Call the Graduate Fellowship Information Center, Ext. 6217, for further information on both of these opportunities.

COMPUTER SYMPOSIUM IS MARCH 20

The one-day computer symposium "Computing at The George Washington University" will be this Wednesday, March 20, starting at 9 am.

DR. EMILY FEITSRITZER SPEAKS TO SEHD FACULTY

Educators should become "less provincial" and "less timid" in their dealings with the media if they want to succeed in questioning the federal role in education, Dr. Emily Feitsritzer told faculty members of the School of Education and Human Development recently.

Dr. Feitsritzer, director of the National Center for Education Information and publisher of several weekly newsletters, addressed a meeting of the SEHD faculty on March 8 in the Marvin Center.

"This is a no-nonsense time for education," she told her audience. Declaring, "You can't play hardball with a softball," she recommended that educators become more open to the idea of dealing aggressively with the media. Conversely, she noted that the federal government has managed to grab media attention lately, citing statements by William Bennett, the newly appointed secretary of the U.S. Department of Education, as an example.

Bennett quickly made headlines following his appointment, she said, and has been characterized as being "combative" because of his arresting remarks. Bennett's frequently quoted comment about proposed cuts in federal student aid in his first press conference made him the target of criticism, she noted. Bennett reportedly said that students faced by threatened cuts might have to engage in divestiture. He was quoted, "It might require ... stereo divestiture ... auto divestiture ... three-weeks-at-the-beach divestiture."

Dr. Feitsritzer reported that Secretary Bennett has said that he regrets that his more colorful, headline-capturing statements to the press have obscured more serious points. She speculated, however, that he may like the stir created by such statements and that he encourages it by using graphic illustrations. She gave her observations after outlining her perception of the Reagan administration's agenda for education over the coming years.

She made five predictions relative to education during President Reagan's second term. She believes there will be decreased federal funding; increased fiscal and programmatic control of education at the state and local levels; a tightening of the management structure of the Education Department; a strong continuance of the tuition tax credit issue as the subject of discussion and debate; and the establishment of national, agenda-setting commissions, such as the commission which produced the provocative study, "A Nation at Risk."

IRS COMMISSIONER EGGER SPEAKS AT MEETING AT GW

For those citizens who have already fulfilled their annual American duty as taxpayers and filed their tax returns, there's good news, according to Commissioner Roscoe L. Egger Jr. of the Internal Revenue Service.

Commissioner Egger, a George Washington law alumnus (J.D. 1950), said there should be no "appreciable delays" in sending out refunds this year. He spoke to members of the American Accounting Association, meeting at the University for its Mid-Atlantic Regional Conference, March 14-16. He was the keynote speaker at a March 15 luncheon.

Commissioner Egger explained that the IRS had been in the process this year of upgrading its computer system and that, because of this transition, processing delays had been feared. He conceded that the computer upgrading project may slow processing. "However," he said, "the delay will probably be just a matter of days, and won't be noticed by the taxpayer."

During his speech, he endorsed the Treasury Department's tax-simplification plan. He said that the plan is a comprehensive effort which should eliminate "unfairnesses" currently existing within our tax structure.

HARRIET LITTLE NAMED ASSISTANT DEAN FOR ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES, DCE&SS

Harriet Little, assistant to the dean, Division of Continuing Education and Summer Sessions, has been appointed assistant dean for administrative services in that division.

A 1974 graduate of the University of Texas, Austin, Ms. Little received a Master of Arts degree in Russian linguistics from The George Washington University Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, Slavic Languages and Literatures Department, in 1981. She has been associated with the university since 1975.

DRAFT REPORT OF COMMISSION FOR THE YEAR 2000 AVAILABLE

The Commission for the Year 2000, established by President Lloyd Elliott in January, 1984, to assess the University's missions and to determine new directions for emphasis or change, is now completing its work.

Commission Chairman Associate Provost Marianne R. Phelps made a report to the Board of Trustees at its March 21 meeting. Copies of the draft report are now available to members of the University community. There will be a 30-day period for response and comment. The final report is expected in May. Call Ext. 6508, send a note requesting a copy to Dr. Phelps, or stop by the Provost's Office, Rice Hall, 8th floor.

GW RED CROSS BLOOD DRIVE THURSDAY, MARCH 28

The University-sponsored Red Cross Blood Drive will be held in the Marvin Center Ballroom Thursday, March 28, between 11 am and 5 pm. To expedite processing, donations will be by appointment. Call Ext. 6555 to schedule a time. For questions about donor eligibility, call the Red Cross at 728-6556.

The Student Activities Office, which is coordinating the drive, urges all members of the University community to contribute to this worthy effort and reminds us that the success of the drive is directly related to individual participation.

BOARD CHAIRMAN EMERITUS CHARLES E. PHILLIPS DIES

Chairman Emeritus of the Board of Trustees Charles Emory Phillips died on Tuesday, March 12, in Bethesda, Maryland.

First elected to the Board of Trustees in 1962, he became chairman in 1972 and served until July 1, 1978, when he became chairman emeritus. His service on Board committees was extensive. The committees included University Development; Buildings and Lands; Financial and Legal Affairs as chairman; Financial Affairs, as chairman; and the Executive Committee as vice chairman and chairman. He was also honorary chairman of the University's Luther Rice Society. In 1979, the year following the completion of his active service on the Board, the University conferred on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

Trustee Phillips was born in Montgomery County, Maryland, October 2, 1902. A graduate of Central High School in Washington, D.C., he received LL.B. (1925) and LL.M. (1926) degrees from The George Washington University Law School and was admitted to practice before the Courts of the District of Columbia and the Supreme Court of the United States.

Chairman Phillips entered the service of the Equitable Life Insurance Company in 1922; became assistant secretary in 1933; was named to the company's Board of Trustees in 1936; became secretary-treasurer in 1943; and president in 1948. He served as president for the next 20 years and subsequently became chairman of the board, chief executive officer and chairman of the company's executive committee.

He was a past president of the Metropolitan Washington Board of Trade, of the Life Insurers Conference, the Kiwanis Club of Washington and of the United Givers Fund for the National Capital Area. Chairman Phillips had been State Vice President for the District of Columbia American Life Convention; a trustee of the Benjamin Franklin Foundation of West Berlin, Germany; and a member of the Board of Directors of the Life Insurance Association of America and the Metropolitan Police Boys Club. He was also a director of the National Savings and Trust Company of Washington, D.C. and of the American Federal Savings and Loan Association and had served on the executive committee of the Federal City Council. He is survived by his wife, Laura.

GELMAN LIBRARY STAFF MEMBERS RECOGNIZED FOR SERVICE

In a March 15 ceremony, which University Librarian Sharon Rogers said will become a tradition, Gelman Library staff members were recognized and thanked for long and loyal service.

"These are people who have provided an important network of support," Dr. Rogers said. "It has been one of my real pleasures that this group has been supportive and generous with their trust and advice. ... You have made commitments and are loyal to serve the organization and ultimately yourselves," she told those being recognized.

Frances McDonnell, with 20 plus years of service, was presented with an initialed pen and pencil set.

Special Projects Librarian Frances McDonnell, left, with University Librarian Sharon Rogers.

Two staff members with service of between 15 and 20 years received engraved book ends: Jean Crausway and Diane Hollyfield.

Those with 10 to 15 years service were given initialed portfolio covers. This group included Sharon Lincoln, Barbara Maxwell, Connie McCarthy, Jon Melegrito, Delia Rafuson and Esther Yap.

The 20 staff members recognized for between 5 and 10 years of service were presented pewter letter openers with their initials.

At the end of the presentations, Connie McCarthy said, "There is one merit award," and handed Dr. Rogers a basket of multi-colored flowers on behalf of the Gelman Library staff.

GW Music — EVENTS APRIL 1 AND 2

Robert Parris, harpsichord, and John Albertson, guitar and lute, will appear in a Faculty Recital on Monday, April 1, at 8 pm in the Marvin Theatre. The program will feature the artists in ensemble and solo works by John Dowland, Francis Pilkington, Luigi Boccherini and Antonio Vivaldi. A transcription of Bach's "Brandenburg Concerto No. 3" for solo harpsichord and an original composition of three pieces for electric guitar and harpsichord, both by Robert Parris, will be performed. Tickets, available at the door, will be $4, general admission; $2, GW faculty, alumni and staff; $1, students and senior citizens.

The George Washington University Troubadours will appear in concert on Tuesday, April 2, in the Marvin Theatre, at 8 pm. The program will consist of a blend of a capella serious music and vocal jazz. The Troubadours have been invited by the United States Embassy in Ireland to perform in Ireland in May. Proceeds of this concert will help defray the cost of their airfare. Tickets, available at the door, will be $5.

For more information on either event, call Ext. 6245.

LONG DISTANCE RATES TO RISE FOR A TIME

Telecommunications Services advises us that due to increased line and access charges associated with the University's long distance service, there will be an increase in the per-minute charge for administrative departments with the March billing.

This is a temporary increase and will be adjusted downward effective July 1 of this year. The per-minute rate is being increased for the four-month period, March through June, to offset costs associated with the University's acquisition of long distance equipment. Additional information is available from Dawn Schratz, Ext. 6521.

RUBELLA, MEASLES AND MUMPS SHOTS AVAILABLE TUESDAY

On Tuesday, March 26, between the hours of 10 am and 3 pm, representatives of the D.C. Public Health Service will be in the 22nd Street lobby of the Charles E. Smith Center to provide inoculation against rubella, measles and mumps for members of the faculty, staff and students who wish to avail themselves of this opportunity.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR NAMED FOR CENTER FOR ADVANCED STUDIES OF THE AMERICAS

The Center for Advanced Studies of the Americas (CASA), recently organized by American, Catholic, George Washington, and Georgetown Universities, in association with the Inter-American Development Bank and the Organization of American States, has announced the appointment of L. Ronald Scheman as its first executive director.

In announcing the appointment, Reverend John P. Whalen, executive director of the Consortium of Universities and president of the board of CASA, said, "CASA will be an inter-American center, studying the policy and role of the United States and Canada as well as Latin America. In this sense, it will differ from most other Latin American study centers which look at Latin America and the Caribbean in isolation. CASA will work on developing the distinctive advantages of Washington to help students from Latin America and the Caribbean understand the inter-relationships and dynamics of decision-making mechanisms of both the United States and the Latin American countries."

CASA's programs will be designed to supplement and strengthen existing programs in the participating universities. Among the activities planned will be internships, research programs, inter-faculty cooperation, and a special training program for the staffs of the inter-American organizations of Washington, D.C. The center will also seek to enrich the universities' offerings by bringing to Washington distinguished scholars from other American countries for teaching and research.

Ronald Scheman, the newly appointed executive director, has worked for over 20 years in the area of Latin American and Caribbean affairs. Most recently, he was Assistant Secretary for Management of the Organization of American States (1975-1983) and president of the Pan American Development Foundation (1977-1982). Mr. Scheman, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Dartmouth College, received a law degree from Yale and studied for the doctorate at the University of Brasil. He has been a professorial lecturer and is the author of The Foundation of Freedom. He has written extensively on the inter-American system and international law.

Three George Washington University faculty members represent the University on the Academic Committee of CASA. They are: Kenneth S. Flamm, professorial lecturer in economics; Marvin E. Gordon, professor of geography and regional science; and Cynthia McClintock, associate professor of political science. Vice President for Academic Affairs Roderick S. French is first vice president of the CASA board.

"GO FOR IT" - HEALTH AND FITNESS BROCHURE

"Go For It," the recently published listing of opportunities for health and fitness at The George Washington University, is available from the Office of News and Public Affairs, Gelman Library, Room 705.

The brochure is introduced by a memorandum to all members of the University community on the subject of wellness from President Lloyd Elliott. He says, in part, "The pace of life for all of us today is demanding. ...Each of us must make his or her own choices ... most of us need a kind of continuous reminder or reinforcement if we are to strengthen our efforts to realize better health. This booklet has been produced to be, in part, that reminder of the wellness program in the GW community. It lists a wide range of resources for wellness and contains contributions from members of the GW community who are authorities in their respective fields. I hope you will find here suggestions and ideas that will be useful to you."

There are sections on physical fitness opportunities; diet/nutrition/lifestyle opportunities; mental fitness/stress management opportunities; and the Charles E. Smith Center plus short essays by Dr. Jeanne E. Snodgrass on exercise, by Dr. L. Thompson Bowles on sensible eating, and by Dr. Diane M. DePalma on emotional fitness.

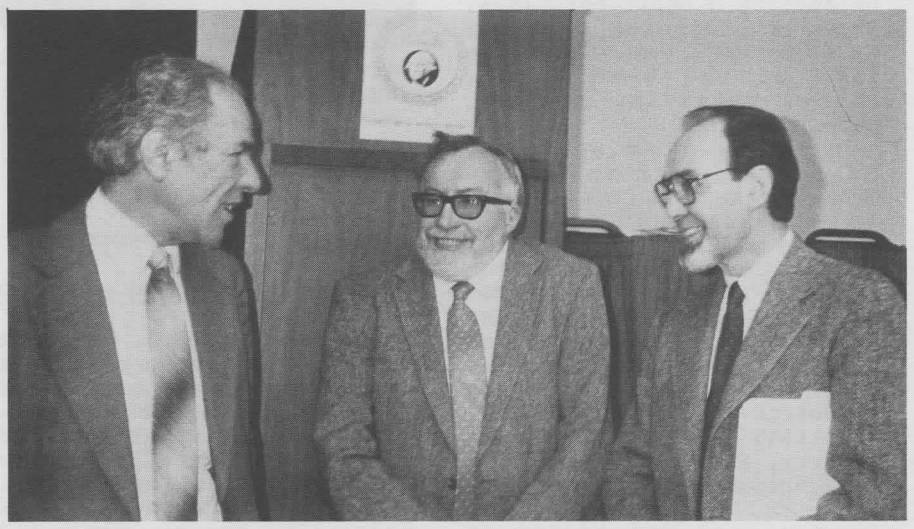
GW'S CHRISTAL CHACON IS MISS DC-USA

GW freshman Christal Chacon has been selected Miss DC-USA. She was chosen from a group of 31 contestants on March 15 at the Mayflower Hotel. She will go to Lakeland, Florida, for the Miss USA pageant on May 13. Before that, she will go to Michigan, April 10 for preparation for the pageant and then on to New York, April 17 for a period of promotion for the pageant.

The Miss USA pageant differs from the Miss America contest in that there is no requirement for a talent, such as singing, acting or dancing. The Miss USA pageant contestants are judged on poise, presence, personality and appearance.

Christal, 18, a student in Columbian College, is participating in the Computers in Society Program in Building JJ. A member of the Women's Crew Team, she is interested in public relations and plans, eventually, to go to law school. She was sponsored for the Miss DC-USA contest by the GW Student Association, the Computers in Society Program and the Women's Crew Team.

KENT CURTIS OF NSF SPEAKS AT COMPUTER SYMPOSIUM



COMPUTER SYMPOSIUM--L to R, Professor of Engineering and Applied Science Arnold C. Meltzer, organizer of GW's March 20 computer symposium; Mr. Kent Curtis, director of the Division of Computer Research, National Science Foundation, principal speaker; and Vice President for Academic Affairs Roderick S. French visited before the first session.

Diversity was the theme of the address given by Kent Curtis, Director of the Division of Computer Research of the National Science Foundation at the university's recent symposium.

"Computers evoke the image of conformity, big brother watching us," he observed, in acknowledging the fear and distrust that some people have of them.

"My theme today is diversity," he continued, "the antithesis of conformity and one of the most valuable elements of our society." He likened computers to tools, noting that, "Computers can offer something to almost everyone which will be of the nature of a useful new tool within the context of each person's own preferred area of endeavor." He described the experiences of his daughters, 8 and 11, in learning the uses of the computer easily in two months time and in their use of computer graphics.

Mr. Curtis discussed the advantages offered by the computer for writing, editing, and publishing text and other materials. "We are very near the stage when no paper need be generated between the time an author first types a manuscript into almost any computer and the time the finished product is printed and shipped to the bookstores," he stated, adding that he does not, however, envision "the paperless office" within the forseeable future.

He talked about the "marriage of computers with communications," observing that this has spawned a new industry whose uses are manifold. He noted that the new technology makes it possible for papers to be jointly authored easily and quickly by persons widely separated from each other; to share the use of specialized and expensive facilities; and to broadcast questions or information quickly and inexpensively leading to such uses as the electronic bulletin board. Mr. Curtis said that many campuses are now laying cables to create a local computer network which will be joined to national networks through gateways often administered by the computer center. "I have no doubt that this technology will be universally adopted by universities within a few years because its advantages to the conduct of research and education are very great indeed. ...Is this a tool for diversity and individuality? You bet it is!" he declared.

"We are beginning to learn to use computers to help design and build computers," Mr.Curtis told his audience. "We see a hierarchy of computing services emerging to enrich the working environment. ...Finally, remote specialized facilities which are shared by the national academic research community will be available by either remote access over an electronic network or by travel. The aggregate of all these services will be a richer, more varied computer environment than we have ever known," he predicted.

DIMOCK GALLERY ANNUAL AWARDS SHOW TO OPEN THIS WEEK

Works of George Washington University seniors and graduate students in art will be on exhibition in the Dimock Gallery from Thursday, April 4, through Friday, April 26, in the gallery's Annual Awards Show which includes the David Lloyd Kreeger Awards Exhibition.

Awards will be given for ceramics, sculptural ceramics, drawing, design, painting, photography, printmaking, sculpture, visual communication and papers in art history.

Works for the exhibition have been selected and awards designated by jurors from outside the University community. Jurors for the fine arts were David Furchgott, executive director, International Sculpture Center; George Hemphill, director of photography, Middendorf Gallery; and Michael Clark, artist. Juror for the papers in art history was Lois Fink, curator of research, National Museum of American Art, Smithsonian Institution.

The awards have been provided by David Lloyd Kreeger; Mr. Franz Bader; Dr. and Mrs. Jerome Canter (who give the Morris M. Aein Memorial Prize in Drawing); Robert N. Alfandre; the late Julian H. Singman, Esq.; and William D. Barbee, Esq.

The Dimock Gallery, off the lower lounge of Lisner Auditorium, is open without charge from 10 am to 5 pm weekdays.

PATRICIA ROBERTS HARRIS DIES

Professor of Law Patricia Roberts Harris died on March 23 at The George Washington University Hospital. She was 60.

Professor Harris, the only woman to have served as head of three federal departments, came to the University in September, 1983. She was graduated from the GW National Law Center in 1960 at the head of her class, receiving her J.D. with honors.

Mrs. Harris served as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development from January, 1977 until August, 1979, and was Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare from August, 1979 to May, 1980. When a separate department of Education was formed in May, 1980, she became Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services, remaining in that post until January, 1981.

She earned her Bachelor of Arts, summa cum laude, from Howard University in 1945.

Admitted to the District of Columbia bar in 1960, she served as trial attorney in the Department of Justice from 1960 to 1961 when she joined Howard University as associate dean of students and lecturer in law. She later became associate professor, professor and dean.

She was a partner with the Washington, D.C. and New York law firm of Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver and Kampelman from 1970 to 1977 and served as a director of the Chase Manhattan Bank, Scott Paper Co. and IBM. She was a trustee of the 20th Century Fund.

A former ambassador to Luxembourg (1965 to 1967), Professor Harris served as an alternate delegate to the 21st and 22nd General Assemblies of the United Nations. She was a member of the Committee on Grievances of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia from 1971 to 1977, chairman of the D.C. Law Revision Committee from 1975 to 1977 and a member of the executive board of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund from 1967 to 1977.

A member of Phi Beta Kappa and Order of the Coif, Mrs. Harris received an Alumni Achievement Award from The George Washington University in 1965.

Expressions of sympathy may be sent in the form of contributions to the Harris Fellows Program, care of Mr. Michael Winston, Vice President for Academic Affairs, Howard University, Washington, D.C., 20059.

CHANGES AT PERSONNEL SERVICES

James E. Clifford, director of Personnel Services, advises us of several changes in his staff. The manager of compensation, a position formerly held by Ms. Jan Carroll, is now held by Ms. Colleen Snyder. Ms. Snyder has been at the University for six years and was previously a senior member of the compensation staff. She can be reached at Ext. 6065.

Ms. Ann Jewett has replaced Ms. Kathy Colbert as the manager of employee relations. Ms. Jewett had previously held this position at the University for three years before her relocation to Hawaii in 1981. She can be reached at Ext. 7311.

Dr. Patricia McMillen has been appointed as the coordinator for international faculty, scholars and personnel. Dr. McMillen will advise international research scholars, faculty and staff on their social and personal adjustment to the University. She will also advise University staff on policies and procedures that affect this group. Dr. McMillen has had 15 years of experience at the University, including serving as director of international services. Her telephone extension is 6165.

MUSIC EVENT FOR ETHIOPIAN FAMINE RELIEF

The GW Program Board is sponsoring a folk music festival on Tuesday, April 9, for Ethiopian famine relief.

Musicians Tom Rush, Jonathan Edwards and the Smith Sisters will be featured in the benefit concert at 8 pm in Lisner Auditorium.

"We believe this is a good opportunity to make a statement that important things are going on in the world to which all of us should pay attention," says Program Board official Charlotte Ericson.

"While GW organizations already assist a number of local charities, we wanted to tell the university community that we also are concerned with causes beyond Pennsylvania Avenue," comments Program Board member Bob Flisser.

For ticket information, call Ext. 7312.

"THROUGH THE EYES OF STUDENTS" PHOTOJOURNALISM IN COLONNADE

"Through the Eyes of Students," the annual exhibition of photographs by students in the GW Department of Journalism, will continue through April 19 in the Colonnade Gallery, third floor of the Marvin Center. The black and white photos cover a wide range of subjects, and present different studies of images as well as contrasts in lights and darks. Colonnade Gallery hours are 9 am to 11:30 pm daily.

SENIOR PEGGY BOYLE NAMED TO ALL-AMERICAN TEAM

For her outstanding play at the National Collegiate Badminton Championships, GW senior Peggy Boyle was named to the Collegiate Badminton All-American Team for the second time in her career. She was also a 1983-84 Badminton All-American. The championships were held at Swarthmore College, Pennsylvania, the weekend of March 1st.

Boyle and the GW Women's Badminton Team placed 10th at the championships with Boyle reaching the quarter-final round of the singles tournaments and the semi-final round of the doubles competition. She is an accounting major in the School of Government and Business Administration.

UNITED NATIONS PROGRAM TODAY

The United Nations on its 40th Anniversary: Appraisals & Review is the topic of a session to be held today, Monday, April 8, from 3 to 5 pm in Marvin Center's third-floor ballroom.

GW Assistant Professor of Political Science Christopher C. Joyner will serve as moderator. Speakers will be the Honorable John B. Anderson, former Illinois Congressman and presidential candidate; Richard Bissell, editor, Washington Quarterly; and I.F. Stone, journalist.

The event is sponsored by the World Federalist Association with co-sponsorship by the United Nations Association, the GW Religion Department, Board of Chaplains, National Security Forum, College Democrats, the Ecumenical Christian Ministry and the Political Science Department as well the Georgetown University Lecture Fund and the World Human Needs Institute, School of International Service, the American University.

Admission is free. The event is open to the public.

TWO NOBEL LAUREATES TO SPEAK APRIL 9 AND 12

Two Nobel Laureates will speak this week in the first of a series of colloquia in physics sponsored jointly by The George Washington University Department of Physics and the National Science Foundation Divisions of Physics and Condensed Matter.

Professor C.N. Yang, Einstein Professor of Physics at the State University of New York, Stonybrook, will speak on Tuesday, April 9, at 3 pm in the lower lounge of Lisner Auditorium. His subject will be "Geometry and the Concept of Gauge." Yang received the Nobel Prize in 1957 for work with T.D. Lee of Columbia University.

Professor Carlo Rubbia, professor of physics at Harvard University, will speak on Friday, April 12, at 10:30 am in Room 540 of the National Science Foundation at 1800 G Street, NW. His topic will be "Electro Weak Unification, Have We Proven It?" Rubbia received the Nobel Prize in 1984 for work with a Professor Vandemeer of the University of Amsterdam.

Admission to both lectures is free and the public is invited. "Anyone with an interest in science should get something from the lectures," says Dr. Da Hsuan Feng, program officer for theoretical physics of the National Science Foundation.

BLOOD DRIVE volunteer David Campbell, a graduate student, places his trust in Red Cross nurse Diana Ryan during the University-sponsored event on March 28. The drive was coordinated by the Student Activities Office.

SEVEN TO RECEIVE GW AWARDS AT MAY COMMENCEMENTS

Seven members of the University community will receive George Washington awards at the May 5 commencements.

The awards were established in 1976 to recognize outstanding contributions toward the enhancement of university life.

Ms. Mary D. Fenner of the Housekeeping Department will be recognized for nearly 20 years of outstanding service; for the special rapport she has established with the residents of Crawford Hall; and for her unfailing willingness to be helpful and for her dependability and honesty.

Associate Professor of American Civilization and director of the Center for Washington Area Studies Howard F. Gillette Jr. will receive the award for his dedication and leadership in the establishment of the center; for his contribution to the establishment of the Benjamin Banneker Professorship at the center which has brought distinguished academcians to the University; for his contribution to the establishment of the Banneker Fellowship, given annually to an outstanding graduate student; for his dedication to the publication of a monograph series and occasional papers series on Washington Area Studies; and for his success in building rapport between Washington area citizens and the University.

Dean of Students Gail S. Hanson will be honored for her contributions to the entire University community, not only in her role as dean of students but also through the various committees on which she has served; for her personal commitment to improving all aspects of campus life, particularly her interest in the foreign student community and minority students and the countless students she has helped through personal counseling; for her personal dedication to enhancing all aspects of campus life; and her promotion of services for students.

Professor of Engineering Douglas L. Jones will receive the George Washington Award for his dedication and leadership in the School of Engineering and Applied Science (SEAS) including his work as the curriculum chairman for mechanical engineering; his primary responsibility for securing for SEAS the award of a two-million-dollar computer-aided design laboratory; his commitment to fostering close ties between the school and its alumni; and his work with students as advisor to the engineering honor society Tau Beta Pi and with the SEAS publication Mechelecivy, and the Undergraduate Honors Research Program.

Ayman Jumean, graduate student in engineering administration, will receive recognition for providing motivation and leadership to both the international student community and the University at large through his involvements as president of the Jordan Student Club and the Engineers' Council; as associate editor of Mechelecivy; as a member of the GW Student Association Senate Finance Committee, of the Joint Committee of Faculty and Students, and the Alumni Trustee Selection Committee as well as exhibiting integrity, understanding and professionalism throughout his activities.

Ms. Irma M. Marcellino, resident counselor in Thurston Hall, will receive the award for her promotion and support of art therapy outreach programs; for chairing the new Art Therapy Task Force in the University Couseling Center; for organizing the campus dance "Move-In" and several "Chalk-Ins;" for her dedicated work on the Summer Advanced Registration Program (SARP) to help orient freshmen to their new residential setting; for counseling troubled students in time of need; for developing and conducting Training workshops for Residence Hall Staff; for implementing relaxation and stress-reduction sessions; for her devotion to and efforts toward developing all students' growth and maturity through an integration of systematic and creative approaches; and for her generosity with her time in fostering community development in and around GW.

PETER CAWS TO SPEAK AT HONORS CONVOCATION

University Professor of Philosophy Peter J. Caws will give the address at the university's first Honors Convocation on Sunday, April 14 at 1:30 pm in Lisner Auditorium.

The idea for the convocation came from the Public Ceremonies Committee and was approved by the Faculty Senate at its December 14, 1984 meeting. The ceremony has been created in response to a perceived need to recognize and encourage excellence in undergraduate scholastic achievement.

Three categories of students will be recognized: all students who were named to deans' lists in the previous spring and fall semesters; those students who receive an Outstanding Academic Achievement Citation; and those students who are named Distinguished Scholars.

Students receiving Outstanding Academic Achievement Citations must have completed a minimum of 45 credit hours at GW and be in the top two percent of their classes based on Quality Point Index.

The Distinguished Scholar Awards are designed to recognize one undergraduate in each school which grants undergraduate degrees who has distinguished him/herself through exemplary academic achievement and scholarship. There will be five of these awards, one each for Columbian College, SGBA, SPIA, Engineering and Education.

Following an invocation by Reverend William C. Crawford, Director, Ecumenical Christian Ministry, President Lloyd Elliott will make brief remarks before Professor Caws' address.

Vice President for Academic Affairs Roderick S. French will confer the deans' list honors. Outstanding academic achievement citations will be conferred by the deans of the colleges and schools. The five distinguished scholar awards will be presented by President Elliott with the deans.

Music for the occasion will be provided by the University Singers under the direction of Catherine J. Pickar with piano accompaniment by Neil A. Tilkins.

MARYLAND TAX EXEMPT STATUS NOTE

Maryland tax form MW-507, item 3, allows certain employees who reside in Maryland to claim exemption from tax witholding by certifying that they "did not owe any Maryland income tax and had a right to a full refund of all income tax witheld" for the previous year and that they expect a similar situation to exist in the current year. This exemption from tax witholding is valid for only one calendar year at a time and expires annually in April.

Employees who are eligible to continue their 1984 exemption from tax witholding in 1985 must complete a form MW-507 by April 30, 1985. Failure to recertify by April 30 will result in the witholding of Maryland taxes as though the employee has zero witholding allowances.

Members of the quartet are George Steiner, first violin; Virginia Harpham, (guest artist) second violin; Richard Parnas, viola; and John Martin, (guest artist) cello. The last three are members of The National Symphony Orchestra. The quartet will perform works by Josef Haydn, Maurice Ravel and Franz Schubert. Tickets, available at the door, will be $4 general admission; $2 GWU faculty, alumni and staff; $1 students and senior citizens.

The University Singers, directed by Catherine J. Pickar, will present their Spring Concert on Tuesday, April 16, at 8 pm in the Marvin Theatre. The program includes Bach's Coffee Cantata and Handel's Chandos Anthem No. 1. The event is open to the public; admission is free.

FELLOWSHIP MEETINGS

Fellowship information meetings will be this week on Thursday, April 11, and Friday, April 12.

The Thursday meeting, at 4 pm in Room 402 of Marvin Center, is especially for graduate students.

The Friday meeting, at 4 pm in Room 410-415 of Marvin Center, is particularly for juniors.

At both meetings, Professor Jonathan Moreno, faculty coordinator for national awards, and Andrea Stewart, director of the Graduate Fellowship Information Center, will discuss national fellowship awards, such as the Rhodes, Fulbright, Marshall, National Science Foundation and Rotary awards. They will also outline the services of the Fellowship Information Center, located in the Gelman Library. For more information, call Ext. 6217.

Forms MW-507 are available at the Records and Benefits Office of Personnel Services, Building GG, or at the University Payroll Office, Rome Hall, first floor.

Please note that this section of form MW-507 is used mostly by student employees. This announcement does not apply to the rest of form MW-507 which is used for claiming dependents and witholding allowances. These items remain in effect until changed by the employee.

NOTE: Virginia tax exempt status expired 12/31/84.

FITNESS-EXERCISE OPPORTUNITY

Are you interested in beginning a fitness-exercise program? If the answer is "Yes," call the Department of Human Kinetics and Leisure Studies at Ext. 6280. If there is sufficient interest, the department will form special classes for the Summer Sessions. Those who are interested are asked to call and give the department their time possibilities and activity preferences.

MIRCEA ELAIDE TO SPEAK, RECEIVE DEGREE AT SPECIAL CONVOCATION, APRIL 18

Mircea Eliade, Sewell L. Avery Distinguished Service Professor at the University of Chicago, will speak on "Technological Man, Religious Man" at a special convocation on Thursday, April 18, at 7:30 pm in Building C, Room 108. At the convocation, he will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters. President Lloyd H. Elliott will confer the honorary degree. Professor of Religion Alfred J. Hiltebeitel will present Prof. Elaide.

Born in Bucharest, Romania, in 1907, Mircea Eliade received a philosophy degree from Bucharest University in 1928 with a thesis on "Italian Philosophy, from Marsilio Ficino to Giordano Bruno." From 1928 to 1931 he traveled and studied in India where he spent six months practicing Yoga at a traditional ashram. In 1933, at the University of Bucharest, he completed a doctoral thesis on Yoga, which was later revised for publication as Yoga: Immortality and Freedom. Among his other major works are: Cosmos and History: the Myth of the Eternal Return; Patterns in Comparative Religion; and Zalmoxis: the Vanishing God. His epic novel, The Forbidden Forest, received high critical acclaim.

Professor Eliade has been at the University of Chicago since 1964, has taught History of Religions and has been a professor on the Committee on Social Thought there since 1957. He taught at Bucharest University in the 1930s and at the Ecole des Hautes Etudes in Paris from 1945 to 1956. He has received wide recognition as the world's leading scholar of comparative religions and as one of the leading interpreters of myth. The recipient of numerous awards, he was named a member of the French Royal Academy of Language and Literature in 1977 for his literary works. In 1984, during its 75th anniversary celebration, the American Academy of Religion honored him at a banquet citing him as "a towering scholar and a distinguished man of letters" and thanking him "for his distinguished contribution to the study of religion."

Dr. Eliade is currently working on the third volume of his work of synthesis, The History of Religious Ideas, and serving as chief editor of the projected 15-volume Encyclopedia of Religions soon to be published by Macmillan.

Professor Eliade is at George Washington this week in connection with the 700 series course Mircea Eliade: Scholar, Critic, Poet. A reception will follow the convocation.

THIS YEAR'S "GEORGE CALLING" IS BEST EVER IN GW'S HISTORY

The 1984-85 D.C. Phonathon shut down all its phones at 9:33 pm on Thursday, April 4th. This brought to a close the most successful "George Calling" phonathon in GW's history. During the fifth and last week, calls were made by GW students who concentrated on phoning parents.

Records of all sorts were broken. Over 600 alumni, students, faculty and staff volunteered their time, raising over $380,000 from 9,700 pledges. The announced goal of the D.C. phonathon had been $360,000. Last year's country-wide phonathon total was $305,000.

The students set an impressive record for their week of calling, raising over $40,000 for Student Financial Aid, an increase of $18,000 over last year's total.

The members of the Development Office, particularly Director of Annual Support Serap S. Akisoglu, would like to express sincere appreciation to everyone in the University community who helped in achieving this record.

CHILDCARE POLICY PANEL TODAY FROM 4 TO 6 PM

The Women's Studies Program and Policy Center is presenting a childcare policy panel discussion today from 4 to 6 pm in Rooms 402-404 of Marvin Center.

Titled "Conflicting Agendas in Childcare: Resolving the Interests of Women, Children, and Childcare Workers," the panel will be moderated by Valora Washington of Howard University's School of Human Ecology. Panelists will be: Gilbert Steiner, Brookings Institution; Helen Blank, Children's Defense Fund; Marsha Renwanz, Senate Children's Caucus; and Alvin Turner, Association of Federal, State, County and Municipal Employees. The event is sponsored by a grant from the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education. To reserve seating, call Ext. 6942.

OUR "CHALK IN" IS APRIL 17 THIS YEAR

The University's fifth annual "Chalk-In" is scheduled for Wednesday, April 17, from noon to 2 pm in the Gelman Library Courtyard.

During the two-hour period, University Counseling Center staff encourage those lunching in the yard or passing by to make their marks on the pavement with an array of colorful, oversized chalks. Counseling Center staff members feel that in this way members of the university community can "chalk their feelings out" celebrating the semester's end and recognizing mixed emotions that come with finals, returning home, beginning a new career and leaving school friends. Any passers-by or university neighbors are also invited to participate.

In the unpleasant event of rain, the "Chalk-In" will be rescheduled for Wednesday, April 24, at the same time. This year the Counseling Center will be assisted by the Art Therapy Residence Life Task Force. Adding to the festivity, there will be free balloons for all chalkers, face painting, a juggler and music. SAGA is providing lemonade.

For further information, contact Sandy Geller, coordinator of Art Therapy Services, or T. Thorne Wiggers, coordinator of outreach, both of the GW Counseling Center, Ext.6550.

FINANCIAL PLANNING SEMINAR REGISTRATION DATE IS APRIL 26

The last day to register for the seminar "Planning for Your Financial Future in the Mid-1980s" is Friday, April 26.

The estate-planning seminar is sponsored by the Development Office and the Faculty Senate Committee on Resources and Development, and is the fifth in the seminar series for university faculty and staff members. Alumni of the university are also invited. The 8:30 am to 1 pm session will be held in the Marvin Theatre.

"Financial Planning for the Individual" will be discussed by Georgetown University Associate Professor of Finance William Droms. "Investment Alternatives for Meeting Financial Goals" will be the topic addressed by Professor of Business Finance Frederick Amling. Philip J. Sweeney III, Esq., a partner with the University's legal counsel, Reasoner, Davis and Fox, will speak on "The Philanthropic Benefits, Tax Savings and Lifetime Income Advantages of Charitable Planned Giving." There will be refreshment breaks and a question and answer period.

There is a fee of $5 per individual or $10 for a couple to partially defray the cost of parking, refreshments and seminar material. Checks for the registration fee should be made out to The George Washington University and forwarded to Seminar Coordinator, Development Office, Gelman Library 701, by Friday, April 26.

FACULTY AWARDS LUNCHEON APRIL 22

There will be a Faculty Awards Luncheon on Monday, April 22, at noon in The George Washington University Club. Faculty members who are becoming emeritus and who have completed 25 years of service will be honored. For further information, call the Office of the University Marshal, Ext. 6325.

GW SINGERS IN CONCERT TUESDAY, APRIL 16

The George Washington University Singers will give a concert titled, "300 Years of Bach and Handel," on Tuesday, April 16, at 8 pm in Marvin Theatre. Francis Conlon will be the pianist for the performance. Admission is free.

-- SECURITY NOTE --

The Office of Safety and Security reminds us that at this time of the year, with the approach of final examinations and last class meetings, any activity on campus which disturbs students or faculty in class or study is especially detrimental. The increasing stress which students experience may bring actual emergencies into the classroom or elsewhere on campus. From time to time, incidents such as activities of disorderly students, loud noise and false fire alarms have interrupted study or affected classroom teaching.

Acting Director of Safety and Security Curtis W. Goode tells us, "To report any conduct interfering with teaching or study and to have the matter acted upon quickly, faculty or staff should call Campus Security at Ext. 6111 and state the problem. A Security Officer will be dispatched to deal with the matter."

SPRING CELEBRATION WEEKEND

The 1985 Senior Class Committee has designated the weekend of April 19, 20 and 21 as Senior Celebration Weekend in honor of the Class of 1985.

There are two events in which those planning the weekend hope members of the faculty and administration will participate. The first is an evening of dinner, music and dancing on Saturday, April 20, at the 22nd Street Marriott Hotel from 7:30 pm to 1 am. The second is a Senior Class versus Faculty and Administration softball game and barbecue at noon on Sunday, April 21st, on the playing fields at 23rd Street and Constitution Avenue, NW. For information on reservations, call the GW Student Association at Ext. 7100.

FELLOWSHIP INFORMATION

Minority students from all majors who have completed their junior year by June, 1985, are eligible for the summer program in policy skills for minority students. The program is sponsored by the University of Michigan Institute of Public Policy Studies, the Association of Public Policy Analysis and Management, and the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation. Deadline for maililng applications is April 25.

The Rikkyo University in Tokyo has established a research fellowship program in the areas of the humanities, social and natural sciences. Application deadline is April 30.

For more information, contact the Graduate Fellowship Information Center, Ext. 6217.

AN EASTER EGG HUNT provided an afternoon of excitement for these pre-schoolers on Friday, April 5. The hunt was organized by Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity in conjunction with the D.C. Parent Child Center.

-- NEW PARKING RATES BEGINNING JULY 1 --

New parking rates will go into effect on July 1 for the next fiscal year. The rate increase is necessitated by the increase in expenses.

The increase will raise the staff/faculty rates $2.11 per month and the daily parking rate will be raised $.13.

Student rates will increase $.10 per parking period, raising the daily rate from $2.25 to $2.35, and the over-time rate will increase $.07 from $1.75 to $1.83. The monthly rate will be raised from $68.50 to $71.58.

PROFESSOR GASTWIRTH RECEIVES GUGGENHEIM FELLOWSHIP

Professor of Statistics and Economics Joseph L. Gastwirth has received a Guggenheim Fellowship for 1985. The award was announced by the Guggenheim Memorial Foundation on April 5.

Professor Gastwirth plans to spend the year at the University of California at Davis, where he will study methods of combining the results of several data sets with an overall statistical analysis and the application of the data sets in the analysis of equal employment and epidemiologic data. He expects to complete a book on statistical reasoning in law and public policy.

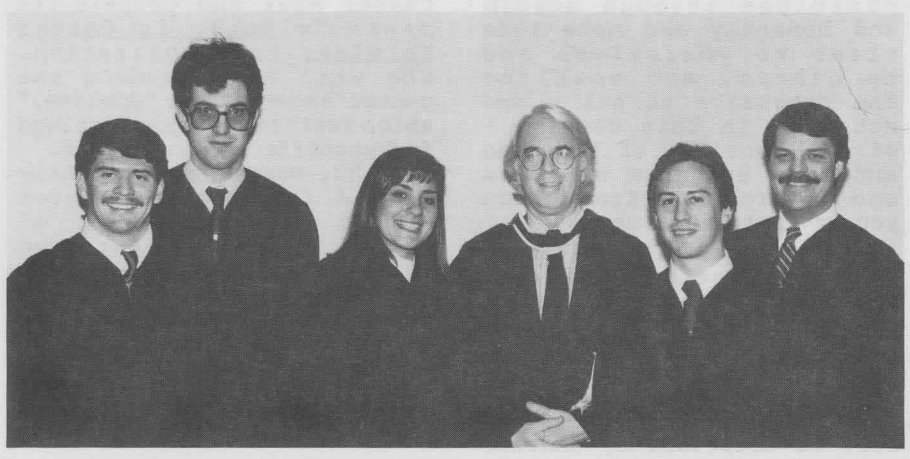
Dr.Gastwirth, who came to the University in the fall of 1972, is one of 270 scholars, scientists and artists chosen by the foundations's Committee of Selection from among 3,548 applicants in the Guggenheim's 61st annual competition. Since March, 1981, Professor Gastwirth has served as a statistical consultant to the Office of Information and Regulatory Analysis of the U.S. Office of Management and Budget. He is a prolific author in his fields.

KATHY MARSHALL AWARDED NCAA POSTGRADUATE SCHOLARSHIP

Kathy Marshall, a senior member of GW's Women's Basketball Team, has been awarded a postgraduate scholarship by the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA). She is one of only 10 student-athletes in the nation in her sport to receive the award in recognition of her academic and athletic undergraduate achievements. She was chosen from among hundreds of nominees. An economics-public affairs major in the School of Public and International Affairs, she will receive the degree of Bachelor of Arts at the May 5 commencement.

During her four years at George Washington, she has maintained a 3.78 grade point average while also becoming the Women's Basketball Program's all-time leading player. She earned the squad's Most Valuable Player Award for the just concluded season. A member of Omicron Delta Kappa, she has, this semester, been elected to Phi Beta Kappa. Ms. Marshall has been accepted by Harvard Law School.

HONORS DISCUSSED, HONORS CONFERRED AT CONVOCATION



DISTINGUISHED SCHOLAR AWARD RECIPIENTS, l to r, Rick George Buckovich, Anton George Bergmann, Randi Gayle Shapiro, Kenneth David Smith, and Rodney Carlyle Burford, posed with University Professor of Philosophy Peter Caws, third from right, before the April 14 Honors Convocation. Professor Caws was the convocation speaker.

"Honors are a kind of worth that is not for sale. They can be earned but not bought," said University Professor of Philosophy Peter Caws at the April 14 Honors Convocation in Lisner Auditorium. "I hope you will realize that if you get honors today, it is because something is expected of you," he told the 1,459 outstanding students receiving awards.

Tracing the derivation of the word "honor," and referring to the perception of honor held by Shakespeare's Falstaff, Professor Caws stated, "I want to talk about honor not as something conferred but as something to be lived up to," and went on to outline for his listeners his own sense of academic honor and university values.

"What are the values of the university that I stand for, that I feel engage my honor?" he asked rhetorcally. "Not, oddly enough, the factual knowledge that the institution represents ... No, what engages academic honor is not so much proven knowledge itself as an attitude towards it, a conviction about it, a commitment to it. I take myself to be honor bound to count as knowledge only what truly is so, hence to test what offers itself as such, never to accept it because it would be expedient to do so but only if, and because, it meets the best criteria I can muster. I take myself to be honor bound to state what is thus known as plainly and patiently as I can to anyone who may have need of it. I take myself to be honor bound to defend the integrity of knowledge, to ensure that it is open and accessible to all who want it, to help make knowledge rigorous, intelligible and free: that is the challenge I feel I have to live up to.

"Less common (than well-meaning conviction)" he declared, "are the commodities the university purveys: care in argument, clarity in communication, impartiality of inquiry, the patient dissemination of learning. The university ought to be the conscience of its society ... That is why we need, now more than ever, all the intellectual honor we can find. And we need

GELMAN LIBRARY RECEIVES RARE COPY OF 1865 NEW YORK HERALD

PRESENTATION--L to R, Friends of the Libraries President Ronald W. Howard, Professor of Management David S. Brown, Associate Professor of American History and Civilization James O. Horton, and President Lloyd Elliott are shown with the April 15, 1865, edition of the New York Herald presented to the Gelman Library by Professor Brown.

An original copy of the New York Herald of Saturday, April 15, 1865, with an account of the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln, was presented to the Melvin Gelman Library on April 15 by Professor of Management David S. Brown at a Friends Forum, sponsored by the Friends of the University Libraries. President Lloyd Elliott accepted the gift for the library and termed it "an appropriate addition for the university's historical collection." The yellowed paper was prepared for placement in the library by student assistant Sara Devine.

Associate Professor of American History and Civilization James O. Horton spoke at the forum on the subject, "The Assassination of Abraham Lincoln: Its Significance in American History." He quoted the words of a poem by Herman Melville, "Beware the people weeping for they bear the iron hand." Professor Horton gave historical details surrounding the assassination and discussed the overall plot of which it was a part. Commenting on the assassinations of Lincoln, John F. Kennedy, Robert Kennedy, Martin Luther King, and Anwar Sadat, he asked, "How do we calculate the effects of such an assassination on the shape of our world today and tomorrow?" Dr. Horton said he thinks the reconstruction period in the south would have been very different if Lincoln had lived.

HONORS CONVOCATION

people like you who are willing to sustain it. What your honors bind you to, what is expected of you as you leave this University with them, is that you should set and reaffirm standards in these matters: that you should judge public discourse rigorously, think your own positions through deeply and honestly and make them clear to yourselves and to others, and work for the extension to all - and not only in this country - of the benefits of the open and free exchange of ideas and information from which you have profited here."

President Lloyd Elliott, said, at the beginning of the convocation, "Athletic, recreational, social, political and economic are all words descriptive of the activities of today's campus. The mission, however, of a university can best be described by another word -- scholarship. This convocation is a ceremony to recognize that central mission of a University." He introduced Professor Caws for his address as "one of this University's most distinguished scholars."

Vice President for Academic Affairs Roderick S. French said to those receiving deans lists honors, "By virtue of your academic performance, you are our dividend and our warrant, the dividend for our time and intelligence invested and the warrant for the validity of our hope." 1,381 students received these honors.

Outstanding Academic Achievement Citations, awarded those in the top two percent of their classes who have completed a minimum of 45 credit hours at GW, were presented to 71 students by their respective deans.

Distinguished Scholar Awards, presented by President Elliott, went to Anton George Bergmann, a senior in Columbian College of Arts and Sciences with a triple major in physics, mathematics and German; Rick George Buckovich, a senior in the School of Engineering and Applied Science, majoring in civil engineering; Rodney Carlyle Burford, a sophomore in the School of Education and Human Development, whose selected major is human services; Randi Gayle Shapiro, a senior in the School of Government and Business Administration, majoring in accounting; and Kenneth David Smith, a senior in the School of Public and International Affairs, majoring in public affairs. In brief responses, each of the five in some way expressed appreciation for studying at George Washington, for the quality of the faculty and the climate of the campus.

Anton Bergmann is the son of Professor of Physics Otto Bergmann. Two other members of the University family, who both received Outstanding Academic Achievement Citations, were Waleed A. El-Ansary, a Columbian College junior in philosophy, son of Professor and Chairman of Business Administration Adel El-Ansary, and Kelly L. Pratt, a senior in finance in SGBA, daughter of Mrs. Bobbye Pratt, Executive Secretary to Vice President and Treasurer Charles E. Diehl.

Music for the convocation was provided by the University Singers. One of their selections was "Virginia," with words and music by Associate Dean of Columbian College Robert C. Rutledge.

ANNE SCAMMON JOINS CAREER SERVICES CENTER

Anne Scammon, a 1981 graduate of Columbian College, joined the staff of the Career Services Center as public relations coordinator in March. In this position, Ms. Scammon will coordinate the promotion and marketing efforts for the center, organize the center's annual Career Week and prepare the center's Guide to Career Services for publication. She will also produce the center's new 24-hour "Jobline," which features new job listings for specific career fields.

Ms. Scammon most recently worked for the Washington public relations firm of Hager, Sharp and Abramson which specializes in marketing and promotion for education, community and non-profit organizations. She can be reached at the Career Services Center Monday through Thursday, 10 to 7 and Friday 8 to 5, Ext. 8630.

MIRCEA ELIADE RECEIVES DOCTOR OF LETTERS, SPEAKS AT SPECIAL CONVOCATION

Mircea Eliade, distinguished scholar of the history of religion, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters at a special convocation April 18 in Building C.

In conferring the degree, President Lloyd Elliott said, in part, "You have explored the planet of human religious experience as no other has ... you envisioned a creative hermeneutic that would overcome provincialisms and open up for modern man a vast recovery of lost, distant, and unfamiliar worlds of meaning."

Dr. Eliade, Sewell L. Avery Distinguished Service Professor at the University of Chicago, has been widely recognized as one of the world's leading interpreters of myth. He gave a scholarly address on the subject, "Technological Man, Religious Man," which was enthusiastically received by those present.

Beginning with the observation that "the latest decades are paradoxically characterized by the coexistence of a tragic, neurotic pessimism with a robust, almost candid optimism," Professor Eliade cited examples of pessimism from contemporary arts in the areas of rock music, films and science fiction. He quoted extensively from the works of scholars of both the pessimistic and optimistic orientations. He noted that the new scientific technology has made it possible for man to do things faster than nature and in effect, to change the meaning of time.

Dr. Eliade concluded with a discussion of consciousness. He said, "In the last analysis, we discover that the latest activities and conclusions of scientists and technologists - the direct descendents of homo faber - reactualize, on different levels and different perspectives, the same fears hopes, and convictions that have dominated homo religiosus from the very beginnings: the fear of death, and even of the catastrophic destruction of life; the hope of conquering death through a ritually constructed post-existence; and, finally, the certitude that the indestructibility of life and the immortality of the soul are to be accepted as they are, as a series of states of consciousness. Of course, certain homini religiosi may add that it depends on every one of us to learn how to reach the highest state of consciousness, namely, the awareness of pure being."

NEARLY 2,100 DEGREES TO BE CONFERRED AT COMMENCEMENTS

At our commencement ceremonies on Sunday, May 5; Sunday, May 19; and Friday, May 24, nearly 2,100 degrees will be conferred. President Lloyd Elliott will confer degrees in course as well as honorary degrees.

At the School of Government and Business Administration commencement, May 5, in the Charles E. Smith Center, Victor Kiam, chairman of the board, Remington Electric Razor Company, will be the speaker and will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. J. Willard Marriott, Sr., chairman of the board of the Marriott Corporation, will receive an honorary Doctor of Public Service. LONG SERVICE NOTED AT FACULTY RECOGNITION EVENT

Long years of service to the University were recognized on April 22 at a luncheon in the GW University Club, sponsored by the Faculty Senate.

The occasion honored the 14 faculty members who will receive emeritus status at the May commencements and those who have served the University for 25 years.

Professor William B. Griffith, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Faculty Senate, expressed appreciation for the fact that faculty members convey to students a sense of academic professionalism and show themselves to be devoted both to their disciplines and to the institution.

President Lloyd Elliott said in his greetings, "I am here to say 'thank you' to those faculty who give continuity to the education of the institution and to thank you for your years of leadership and service."

Vice President for Academic Affairs Roderick S. French, in recognition of the emeriti faculty elect, said, in part, "Our kind of institution is built up through an infinity of transactions - learning transactions - day after day, year after year, generation after generation. I'm here on behalf of the faculty remaining to tell you that we intend to be good custodians of the magnificent capital that you have built up."

ETA KAPPA NU NAMES FELDMAN TEACHER OF THE YEAR

The George Washington University chapter of the Eta Kappa Nu Association has named Michael B. Feldman Teacher of the Year in Electrical Engineering.

Feldman, associate professor of engineering and applied science, has been at George Washington 10 years. He came to the University in the fall of 1975 as assistant professor and became associate professor in 1980. The honor was announced in an April 10 ceremony. This is the first time the chapter has made the award. The plaque in the Department of Electrical Engineering and Computer Science which bears Professor Feldman's name reads, "In recognition of excellence in teaching and dedication toward education as a faculty member."

The name of the late Professor of Engineering and Applied Science Abdelfattah M. Abdalla has been inscribed on the plaque as last year's honorary recipient. Honored as Part-time Teacher of the Year was Daryoush Shafighi, professorial lecturer in electrical engineering. Chosen as Graduate Teaching Assistant of the Year was Duncan W. Mills.

President Calvin Lo of the Eta Kappa Nu Association announced the awards at the ceremony. The chapter intends to continue making the awards annually.

LEO RIBUFFO IS MAY'S FIRST WEDNESDAY LECTURER

Leo Ribuffo, associate professor of history, will speak on "Harry Truman, Beyond the Nice Guy Myth" on Wednesday, May 1, at 8 pm in the Marvin Theatre. QUOTABLE FROM THE MAY 5 COMMENCEMENT CEREMONIES

The six speakers at the May 5 Commencements gave graduates-to-be the benefit of their observations on a variety of subjects.

Victor Kiam, chairman of the board of the Remington Electric Razor Company, speaking at SGBA, said, "You are to be congratulated for two things, first, because you seized the opportunity to get this education, which will give you a step up in the world; and second, because you opted for business, which is the opportunity every individual should seek since it builds the standard of living of people in the United States and around the world." Of entrepreneurs, he said, "More inventions, more patents, more new business, more job opportunities are created each year by individuals and small businesses than by the mammoth corporations. ... Entrepreneurship is not a condition of size-it's a state of mind."

Charles Z. Wick, director of the United States Information Agency, said at the SPIA ceremony, "I cannot overemphasize the fact that the preservation of democracy here--and its growth elsewhere--is dependent on our ability to communicate information in a truthful and timely manner about our values and freedoms. ... It is our ideas--the ideas of America--that make up our arsenal of influence, our strongest national security asset. It is not Western military power that our adversaries fear so much as the penetration into their societies of our ideas. As Lenin once said, 'Ideas are more fatal than guns.'"

Daniel Yankelovich, chairman of the board of Yankelovich, Skelly and White, at GSAS, noted the enormous increase in the choices that are available to individuals today compared to a few years ago. "The contrast with the past is very sharp," he said. "Our generation was expected to supress the expressive side of our lives for the sake of making a living, achieving a certain kind of success, bringing up a family. ... Women, in particular, were expected to give up their self-expression, which conflicted with family responsibilities. I propose to you today that you find your own unique contribution to our society, not by hunkering down behind the high walls of your area of specialization and your private lives. I propose to you that you make this specialty a base for roaming far and wide into other fields, other disciplines and broader concerns."

William J. Bennett, Secretary of Education, the speaker at SEHD, gave four pieces of advice. "First, try to like life. ... Your attitude should be one of optimism and interest. Second, don't lose the passion to do what you know and what you love. We are at our best when we do that which we know, and which we love. Third, my advice to you is, do not seek happiness. The nature of happiness is such, that happiness retreats, the more intensely it is pursued. Lastly, keep an open mind--but not so open that yours brains fall out."

Julius Axelrod, Nobel Laureate in Medicine and Physiology, speaking at the Columbian College exercises, traced his career as a scientist. He said that as an independent researcher, "I learned you don't need a great brain to do original research. It required taste, judgement, intuition, imagination, intelligence and determination. One of the most important qualities for a successful career in research was to ask the right questions at the right time."

Erich Bloch, director of the National Science Foundation, said, at the SEAS commencement, that we need to "push technology. If we don't push technology hard enough, we don't compete (around the globe)," he stated. "If we are to remain the leading economic power in the world, we must do whatever is necessary to position ourselves on the leading edge of technological and industrial change. Make a constant effort to stay at the leading edge of your technology and your chosen field of activity," Bloch told the engineers-to-be, noting that this can only be done through continuing education.

DR. ELMER LOUIS KAYSER DIES

Dr. Elmer Louis Kayser, university historian, professor emeritus of European history and dean emeritus of the Division of University Students, died April 28, at the Potomac Valley Nursing Center in Rockville. He was 89.

Dr. Kayser had been university historian since May, 1962, when he completed 32 years' service as dean of University Students. He had been professor emeritus since 1967. Dean Kayser was seen as a professor who broadened his students' mental horizons with his keen perceptions and who enriched his instruction with a superb command of the English language.

There will be a memorial service for Dr. Kayser on Saturday, June 8, at 1:30 pm in the Marvin Theatre.

Born in Georgetown, D.C., on August 27, 1896, he was educated in the District schools, graduating from the old Western High School in 1914. He entered the University in the fall of that year, beginning what was to be a 71-year association with The George Washington University. As a freshman, he became assistant to Professor of History Charles Clinton Swisher. He received the Bachelor of Arts degree in 1917 and the Master of Arts in 1918. He pursued further graduate study at The Johns Hopkins University and later received the University's first sabbatical leave to attend Columbia University, where he completed studies for the Ph.D. in 1932.

Dean Kayser was appointed instructor in history at GW in 1917. During his first year of teaching, he was also assistant librarian, graduate manager of activities, and registrar of the university. In 1918, at age 21, he was elected secretary of the university, a post he held until 1927. He served as university marshal and, for a time, director of the then School of Government. During World War I, he attended the Field Artillery Officers Training School at Camp Zachary Taylor, Kentucky.

When athletics were resumed at the University, following World War I, Dr. Kayser suggested that University teams be named "Colonials," instead of "Hatchetites," as they were then known.

In addition to European history, Professor Kayser taught courses in nationalism, public speaking and current history. He was known for his legendary lecture on Anthony and Cleopatra. GW students, university-wide, would skip other classes and come to Dr. Kayser's class the day of that particular lecture. Some of his classes were so large they had held in Lisner Auditorium.

The author of Bricks Without Straw, (1970), a history of the University, and of A Medical Center, (1973) a history of the development of medical education at George Washington, Dr. Kayser also wrote the textbook, A Manual of Ancient History (1937).

He received many honors, both in the University community and beyond. He was one of the first ten recipients of the George Washington Award, given for the first time in May, 1977. In 1941, he received the University's Alumni Achievement Award in recognition to his contribution to education and service at the University and, in 1948, the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. In 1962, the GW General Alumni Association presented him an Alumni Service Award.

JOHN KUESTER IS NAMED HEAD BASKETBALL COACH

John Kuester, head basketball coach at Boston University for the past two years, has been named head basketball coach at George Washington. He succeeds Gerry Gimelstob, who resigned in April after four years as head coach. The appointment was announced by GW Director of Athletics Steve Bilsky at a May 3 press conference.

Kuester, 30, who has had an illustrious career in high school, college and professional basketball, said, "I am very honored and flattered to be named. ... I feel George Washington is an ideal situation because it offers both a coach and players so many fine opportunities."

A native of Richmond, Va., Kuester led his Benedictus High School to three straight Catholic State championships (1971-1973). At the University of North Carolina, he was a four-year letterman (1973-1977) and two-year starter under coach Dean Smith. Kuester and his teammates captured the Atlantic Coast Conference (ACC) championship in his junior year (1973). In his senior season, the Tar Heels won both the ACC regular season title and the conference's post-season tournament. Kuester was named Most Valuable Player (MVP) of the ACC Tournament and was also honored as MVP of the Eastern Regionals.

Twice voted North Carolina's Best Defensive Player Award, Kuester went on to play three years in the NBA with the Kansas City Kings (1977-78); the Denver Nuggets (1978-79); and the Indiana Pacers (1979-80).

Following his professional career, Kuester returned to his hometown where he served as assistant coach at the University of Richmond in the 1980-81 season before moving on to Boston University. There, he served two years as assistant coach, under Rick Pitino, prior to becoming head coach. He holds a bachelor's degree in education from the University of North Carolina and has earned credits towards a master's degree in education.

TWO APPOINTMENTS ANNOUNCED IN INTERNATIONAL STUDENT SERVICES

E. Donald Driver, director of International Student Services, announces that F. Joy Montero was appointed assistant director on February 25th of this year and that, effective May 1, Linda Robinson became the international student advisor.

Ms. Montero, who came to the University in June of 1984 as the international student advisor, was previously director of intercultural activities at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, and worked in the area of residential life at the College of William and Mary and at Wesleyan. In Maine, she was the New England Advisors' representative for the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs. Her degrees include a B.S. in Zoology and an M.A. in counseling, both from Marshall University.

Ms. Robinson comes to George Washington from the University of Maryland, College Park, where she was an international admissions officer in the Office of International Education Services. Prior to her association with the University of Maryland, she was at American University in the Office of Intercultural Affairs. There, she was active in developing community programs. Ms. Robinson holds a B.A. in Government and Politics from the University of Maryland. She is currently the region Admission (ADSEC) representative for the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs.

FORMER AUSTRIAN MINISTER TO SPEAK AT SPIA EVENT

Dr. Karl Gruber, former Austrian minister of foreign affairs (1945-1953) and former ambassador to the United States (1954-1956 and 1969-1973) will speak on "Ten Years between Liberation and Freedom--Austria Celebrates a 30th and 40th Anniversary" on Tuesday, May 14, at 7:30 pm in Room 426 of Marvin Center.

The lecture is sponsored by the Alumni Association of GW's School of Public and International Affairs.

Dr. Gruber will recall the time of Austrian resistance against the Hitler regime and discuss the post-war period. His speech at George Washington will mark the 40th anniversary of the Allied occupation in Austria in 1945 and the 30th anniversary of the peace treaty signed in 1955. In addition to giving his reflections on his nearly 40 years as a resistance leader and Austrian government official, Dr. Gruber will comment on Austria's current role in changing East-West relations.

Admission to the lecture is free. Call Ext. 6435 for seating.

E. LAKIN PHILLIPS HONORED BY DIVISION OF STUDENT AFFAIRS

Dean Gail S. Hanson with Professor E. Lakin Phillips

Professor of Psychology and Director of the University Counseling Center E. Lakin Phillips was honored by the Division of Student Affairs at a morning coffee at the center on May 2. Dean of Students Gail S. Hanson spoke and presented Dr. Phillips with a picture of Building N, which houses the center, done in black and white by GW MFA candidate Nip Rogers.

In her remarks, Dean Hanson said, in part, "Dr. Phillips' interests have been many--autism, writing therapy and attrition among them--and his dedication to research has been consistent throughout his career. When he took on the direction of the Psychological Clinic (later the Counseling Center) in 1962, he had already established himself as a prolific writer with a national reputation as a specialist in behavior modification. Today his reputation is international ... We want to thank you, Lakin, for all that you have done here--for the students you have helped, the interns you have trained, the colleagues you have stimulated and supported in times of need and stress. And we want to thank you for what you have been--a model, a conscience, a critic. ...We shall never become inert after having you among us these 23 years."

Professor Phillips came to the University in 1948. He will retire on June 30.

Dean Kayser was twice honored by Mount Vernon College, in 1975, with the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, and nine years earlier, in 1964, with a special tribute at the college's 90th Founder's Day Convocation. He held Ecuador's national order, "Al Merito," with the rank of commander. In 1965, Dr. Kayser received the citation for distinction (a national award) from Sigma Phi Epsilon, national men's fraternity.

In 1984, the Elmer Louis Kayser Professorship in History was established at the University.

Dr. Kayser served the GW General Alumni Association successively at secretary, treasurer, vice president and president (president from 1950 to 1953).

For 10 years, during the World War II period, he was active in radio work on stations WTOP and WWDC, giving weekly, and sometimes daily, interpretive news broadcasts.

Active in associations, he was treasurer of the American Historical Association for more than 10 years, and served a five-year term as a member of the council of the American Association of University Professors. He was a member of the American Bar Association's Committee for the Improvement of the Administration of Justice in the District of Columbia. He served on the boards of Mount Vernon Seminary (now Mount Vernon College) and of the National Cathedral School for Girls. A long-time member of St. Alban's Church, he served there as a vestryman. He held membership in the Cosmos Club and the National Press Club and was a member of Omicron Delta Kappa.

He is survived by a grandson, Arthur Hallet Page IV, and a great-grandson, Arthur Hallett Page V. His wife, the former Margery Ludlow, and a daughter, Katherine, predeceased him.

Expressions of sympathy may be sent in the form of contributions to the Elmer Louis Kayser Professorship in History, 701 Gelman Library, The George Washington University, Washington, D.C. 20052 or to St. Alban's Church, Washinngton, D.C.

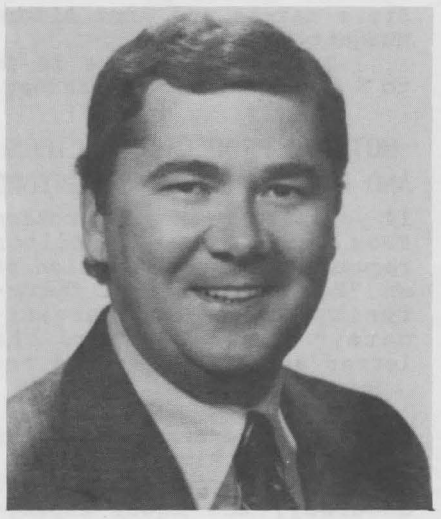
THREE NEW MEMBERS ELECTED BY TRUSTEES AT ANNUAL MEETING



Robert G. Perry

Dr. Floretta D. McKenzie

Thomas J. Owen

The Board of Trustees elected three new members at its May 16 annual meeting.

They are Dr. Floretta D. McKenzie, superintendent of District of Columbia Public Schools; Thomas J. Owen, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Perpetual American Bank, F.S.B.; and Robert G. Perry, division manager, public affairs, American Telephone and Telegraph Company. Dr. McKenzie and Mr. Owen were elected as charter trustees and Mr. Perry as an alumni trustee.

Dr. McKenzie is the first graduate of the D.C. Public School System to hold the position of D.C. superintendent. She is a graduate of Dunbar High School. Born in Lakeland, Florida, she holds a B.S. (1956) from the University of the District of Columbia and an M.A. from Howard University (1957). She earned her doctorate in education at The George Washington University (1985). Dr. McKenzie was a secondary school teacher in the Baltimore City Public Schools for three years (1957-1960). From 1960 to 1967, she served as a secondary school teacher/counselor for the District of Columbia Public Schools. From 1967 to 1969, she was director of the Opportunity Project for Education NOW of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. From 1969 to 1974, she returned to the D.C. School System as administrator. Dr. McKenzie became associated with the Montgomery County Public Schools as assistant area superintendent in 1974 and held that post until 1977. She was assistant deputy superintendent, Maryland State Department of Education in 1977-1978, and deputy superintendent of schools in 1978-79. From 1979 to 1981, she was deputy assistant secretary, Office of School Improvement, U.S. Department of Education as well as U.S. Delegate to UNESCO and task force leader, U.S. Department of Education Transition Team, and deputy commissioner, Bureau of School Improvement, Washington, D.C. She assumed her present position as superintendent of schools and chief state school officer for the District of Columbia in 1981.

Thomas J. Owen is a fourth-generation Washingtonian, a graduate of Landon School in Bethesda, Maryland, and Williams College (B.A. 1957). He served two years as a commissioned officer in the U.S. Marine Corps (1957-1959) before becoming associated with the firm of Thomas J. Owen and Son Inc. in 1959. He continued with the firm until 1975, specializing in real estate appraisal work. He was president of the firm from 1967 to 1975. He became president (1975) and chairman of the board (1979) of Perpetual Federal Savings and Loan Association of Washington, D.C., and chairman and chief executive officer of Perpetual American Federal Savings and Loan Association in 1980. The organization's name was changed to Perpetual American Bank, F.S.B., in 1983. Mr. Owen is a past director of both the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Company and the Ticor Mortgage Insurance Company, and a current trustee of the B.F. Saul Real Estate Investment Trust. He is a member of the Society of Real Estate Appraisers and a past officer and director of the local chapter; a member of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers; and Lambda Alpha (honorary fraternity devoted to land economics). A former executive committee member of the National Savings and Loan

MAY 5 COMMENCEMENT CEREMONY NOTES

Among the degree candidates at the May 5 commencements were the following members of the University family,--at SGBA, Kelly Lee Pratt, daughter of Mrs. Bobbye Pratt, executive secretary in the Office of the Vice President and Treasurer, B.B.A. with an emphasis on finance,--at Columbian College, her brother, Witt Guise Pratt, B.A. with a major in dramatic art; Jessica Rachel Nashman, daughter of Assistant Professor of Human Kinetics and Leisure Studies Honey W. Nashman, B.A. in sociology; Rachel Greene, daughter of Professor of Urban and Regional Planning Sherwin Greene,--at the Graduate School, Aldon O. Nielsen, director of office systems and instructional television, CCEW, Ph.D. with emphasis in the area of American literature,--and at the School of Engineering, Frederick F. Robbins, son of Associate Professor of Journalism Philip F. Robbins, B.S. in operations research and computational science. Kelly Pratt received the John Henry Cowles Award in Government in SGBA and the Department of Business Administration Award.

District of Columbia School Superintendent Floretta Dukes McKenzie received the degree of Doctor of Education in absentia at the School of Education and Human Development ceremony because she was at Spelman College in Atlanta for a daughter's graduation there.

At the Graduate School ceremony, Martha Lamborne Johnson, a Master of Arts candidate, had special family support. When her name was read, a child's voice said clearly, "Yeah, Mommy."

JUDITH SCHLOEGEL IS EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR FOR NATIONAL CENTER FOR INNOVATION IN CORRECTIONS

President Lloyd H. Elliott has announced that Judith Schloegel has been selected for the post of executive director of the University's National Center for Innovation in Corrections.

"Judith Schloegel is the right person to lead the Center's search for solutions to problems afflicting U.S. prisons," Dr. Elliott said. "The University is proud to be an active participant in this vital area of corrections improvements through the study and promotion of prison industries, literacy training and related activities."

Dr. Schloegel, a member of the Catholic order of the Sisters For Christian Community (SFCC), has served for the past seven years as executive director of Liberation of Ex-Offenders Through Employment Opportunities, a Washington, D.C., area employment service for men and women who have been released from prison. She has been a consultant to the Atlanta, Ga., City Prison, the Reformatory for Women in Alderson, W. Va., and has directed an adult literacy program in Atlanta. Dr. Schloegel holds a master's degree in special education from George Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville, Tenn., and a doctorate in special education from the University of Georgia, Athens.

The National Center for Innovation in Corrections was established at The George Washington University as an outgrowth of a conference held here at GW last year, "Factories with Fences: The Prison Industries Approach to Correctional Dilemmas." Jointly sponsored by GW and the Brookings Institution, the conference served as an invitation to private industry to become more involved with prison institutions in job training and placement of inmates.

A first step in addressing the prison industries issue has been the development of a National Task Force on Prison Industries, created with the assistance of Chief Justice Warren E. Burger. The Task Force is comprised of representatives of the private sector, organized labor, the corrections field, legislators, University personnel, and concerned citizens.

In its initial year, the National Center for Innovation in Corrections will work with Task Force committees to examine the status of prison industries and to define what is needed to strengthen prison industries in the future.

The Center is based in the University's Division of Continuing Education and Summer Sessions.

League, he is a past president of the Washington Board of Trade and a past director of the National Association of Realtors. His current and past civic activities include the D.C. chapter of the American Red Cross, the Davis Memorial Goodwill Industries, the National Cathedral School for Girls, the D.C. special Olympics and Mount Vernon College. He has received awards from the United Black Fund, the Associates for Renewal in Education, Inc. and Housing Counseling Services, Inc.

Robert G. Perry holds the degree of B.S. (1970) from the University with a joint major in accounting and economics. He served as chairman of the School of Government and Business Administration Alumni Association from 1981 to 1984 and is now in his second year as chairman of the University's Annual Fund Campaign. From 1980 to 1983, he was chairman of the annual fund for SGBA. For three years, 1981 to 1984, he was chairman of the Dean's Advisory Board for SGBA. Mr. Perry received an alumni service award from the University in 1983 and an outstanding service award from SGBA in 1984. Prior to assuming his present position at AT&T, he was, in 1982-1983, national account manager, Long Lines Department, AT&T. He first became associated with AT&T in 1967 and served in positions of increasing responsibility until 1981 when he went to the White House as a participant in the President's Executive Exchange Program for the 1981-1982 period. Mr. Perry serves as a member of the board of trustees of Fork Union Military Academy in Virginia and is a director of Foreign Exchange Management, Inc. He holds a distinguished service award from the Boys Club of Greater Kansas City, Missouri, and the Golden Spur Award from the Y.M.C.A. of Kansas City.

In other action, the board elected Howard P. Hoffman to a second term as an alumni trustee and elected Mrs. Hazel S. Hanback, who has completed two terms as an alumni trustee, to be a charter trustee.

The board received the final report of the Commission for the Year 2000 which had been presented in draft form at the its March 21 meeting. The final report takes into account comments which have come in since the issuing of the draft.

THIRD ANNUAL COLLOQUIUM ON HUMANITIES, PUBLIC AFFAIRS HELD AT GEORGE WASHIGTON

Sponsored by The George Washington University in cooperation with the D.C. Community Humanities Council and the National Federation of State Humanities Councils with the support of the Rockefeller Foundation, the Third Annual Colloquium on the Humanities and Public Affairs, was held at the University on Thursday and Friday, May 9 and 10.

The conference included panel discussions on representative academic programs, student perspectives, internships and residencies, and the boundaries of applied work.

Joanne Lynn, M.D., former staff member of the President's Commission for the study of Ethical Problems in Medicine in Biomedical and Behavioral Research, currently GW assistant clinical professor of health care sciences and of medicine, was the May 9 dinner speaker. Her subject was "Bridging the Worlds of the Humanities and Medicine."

The closing remarks at the conference were made by Catharine R. Stimpson of Rutgers University and the New York Council for the Humanities.

Panelists came from Case Western Reserve University, Colorado State, DePaul University, Loyola University School of Medicine, Bowling Green University, Arizona State University, University of Montana, the University of California at Berkeley and The George Washington University, as well as from the House Rules Committee, the North Carolina Board of Science and Technology, and from the Connecticut, California, and Montana Humanities Councils and Committees.

GW

ADULT EDUCATION CONFERENCE

A one-day conference, "Professional and Program Development - Preparing for the Future," will be held at the University, Saturday, June 1. It is sponsored by the Metropolitan Association of Adult and Continuing Education.

The keynote speaker will be Dee W. Henderson, deputy director of Learning and Training Services for the Graduate School, U.S. Department of Agriculture. The conference will benefit those adult education practitioners, teachers, administrators and other adult education specialists who deal daily with all parts of adult and continuing education programs.

The event, which will be held in the Marvin Center, is open to the GW community; cost is $40 for individuals, $25 for students with ID. For registration information, call Jay Castano at 282-0140.

FOUR ARE RECOGNIZED BY FACULTY SENATE

Four members of the University community were singled out for recognition at the May 3 meeting of the Faculty Senate.

Dr. Norman C. Kramer was cited for distinguished service by a Faculty Senate resolution, read and presented to him by President Lloyd H. Elliott. The citation noted his 25 years of faculty service, his stature in medical research and teaching, his compassionate care of patients and his unselfish service to the University, especially in his valuable service to the faculty during 11 years of membership on the Faculty Senate including three years on the Executive Committee and service on its regular standing committees. Dr. Kramer will receive the status of professor emeritus of medicine on May 24 at the School of Medicine and Health Sciences Commencement.

Dr. Victor H. Cohn was cited for distinguished service by a Faculty Senate resolution, also read and presented by President Elliott, on the occasion of his stepping down as chairman of the Grievance Committee of the Faculty Senate. The resolution commended his "conscientious and effective chairmanship." The citation recognized his many and varied contributions as a member of the University faculty since 1961, as a full professor since 1971, his particular contributions to the Medical Center Faculty Senate, to the Basic Sciences Faculty Assembly, which he has served as chairman, his broad and valuable public service as a consultant on drug abuse, to the White House, the Montgomery County Public Schools and the University residential communty and noted his appointment to the National Academy of Sciences/National Research Council Board of Toxicology and Environmental Health Hazards. Dr. Cohn, professor of pharmacology, was a member of the Faculty Senate in 1978-80, of the Grievance Committee since its inception in 1977. He has served as Grievance Committee chairman since 1982.

A tribute to Dr. Frank Nelson Miller Jr., who will become professor emeritus of pathology on May 24, was read by Faculty Senate member Professor Richard A. Kenney, who said in part, "His service to the University has been in many areas and has always been marked by a striving for excellence and the maintenance of human values. His excellence as a teacher has earned him the 'Golden Apple Award' on a recond seven occasions." Dr. Miller has been associated with GW for 47 years and served five years as a member of the Senate.

A resolution of appreciation to Monroe Hurwitz was presented by Faculty Senator Stefan O. Schiff on behalf of the Committee on the University Bookstore. The resolution spoke of Bookstore Manager Hurwitz's 15 years of unstinting service, the fact that he has overseen the development of the current bookstore and organized its operation during 75 registration periods, stated that he has been responsive to faculty and students and expressed the profound appreciation of the Senate to him for his dedicated efforts.

JUDGE HAROLD GREENE DEFENDS THE COURTS AND THE PRESS

"The fundamental fact is that the legal profession and the media represent the only important power centers independent of elected officialdom, and that as such, they are balancing factors vital to the preservation of freedom," the Honorable Harold H. Greene, Judge, United States District Court for the District of Columbia, told future attorneys at the May 19 commencement of the GW National Law Center.

"The courts and the press are the two institutions not beholden to the politically elected branches of government; they are also the two institutions which are today under serious and sustained assault," he continued. "This is not to say that either is without fault. The media are often superficial, they are congenitally arrogant and they are often wrong. ... The legal profession is guilty of sins of its own. ... We are embarrassed when the reputation of the profession is damaged by lawyers for wealthy clients who use the pretrial discovery process, not to acquire evidence, but to deplete the financial resources of their less affluent adversaries, and when once again the organized bar, which is so vigilant in punishing many minor transgressions, takes no action. ... We must work vigorously to eradicate these stains on the professions's honor.

"But none of these problems should divert us from this central fact: the Bench and the Bar are a necessary counterweight to the political forces in society, and they must not be weakened."

Noting Thomas Jefferson's statement that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, Judge Greene declared that it is also the price of justice and that justice is inseparable from the rule of law.

"It is our responsibility, yours and mine," he said to the graduates, "to see to it that law and justice are handed down to future generations as unimpaired as we have received them in our time."

Professor of Law Donald P. Rothschild recieved the Distinguished Faculty Service Award at the ceremony. The award was presented by Kent D. Murphy, a member of the graduating class, who noted Professor Rothschild's excellence in teaching, his important contributions as chairperson of the Faculty Hiring Committee and his contributions to the renovation and design of the National Law Center. "You are a fine example to us as future members of the bar," he said. In responding, Professor Rothschild said, "Respect for and from students is an integral part of my life, so I thank you very much." Professor Rothschild was the first recipient when the award was established four years ago. This is the second time it has been given so he is the only person to hold the award at this time.

Among those receiving the Juris Doctor were Leo Mondale, son of Professor of American Civilization Clarence C. Mondale, and Charles G. Starrs, son of Professor of Law and of Forensic Sciences James E. Starrs.

DONALD S. FREDERICKSON SPEAKS TO MEDICAL GRADUATES

"The economics of health care are now inextricably joined to the satisfactory practice of medicine. Regrettably, capital and credit may come to have a threatening power over your ability to perform your ancient obligations," Dr. Donald S. Frederickson, president and chief executive officer, Howard Hughes Medical Institute, told GW medical graduates at their May 24 commencement exercises.

"As professionals, you will enter now a society more adversarial than the one entered by my generation. As ethical dilemmas deepen, dogma often rises to threaten cautious uncertainty," he commented. "None of these considerations will alter the fact that 30 years from today you will be even more grateful you chose this profession," Dr. Frederickson assured the graduates. "The last 30 years have witnessed additions to the science base of medicine greater than in all the rest of the history of human intellectual achievement. This wave of discovery guarantees you will progressively have more opportunities to benefit your patients than any other generation of graduating physicians would have dared to imagine. ... As organic as are all human vocations, however, there is one aspect of medicine that cannot be challenged. No other calling can match the intimate affair with life itself that is granted the healer.

"Look, ours is not really a profession. It's a priceless gift," the speaker declared. "Take this gift that you are about to receive. Guard its form and renew its content. Keep it untainted from selfishness. Share it generously as long as you have the strength," he urged.

JUNE 8 MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR DR. ELMER L. KAYSER

There will be a memorial service for the late Dr. Elmer Louis Kayser on Saturday, June 8, at 1:30 pm in the Dorothy Betts Marvin Theatre.

Dr. Kayser, who died April 28, was associated with the university from 1914 until his death at 89. He was professor emeritus of European history; dean emeritus of the Division of University Students; and university historian. The Elmer Louis Kayser Professorship in History was established in his honor at the University last year.

FRIENDS OF LIBRARIES HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

STUDENT BOOK COLLECTOR'S CONTEST first place winner Richard Flynn, center, was congratulated by University Librarian Sharon Rogers, left, as Friends of the Libraries President Ronald W. Howard looked on before the Friends annual meeting May 16. Flynn, a doctoral candidate in English, entered his collection of books by and about modern poet Randall Jarrell in the contest.

At the May 16 annual meeting of the Friends of the Libraries, University Librarian Sharon Rogers, the featured speaker, discussed areas of commonality between U.S. and Chinese libraries. Dr. Rogers, who has recently returned from a tour of China as a guest of the People's Republic of China, highlighted her remarks with colorful and varied slides.

"The real salvation the Chinese see is in continuing education and in staff development," she observed. "We, too, cannot depend on the educational system to provide people with all the skills they need to work in the libraries of the future," she went on. "In many ways we are facing the same problem with automation." Dr. Rogers noted that the Chinese are quickly adapting to western software and that they, also, in many ways view the computer as their salvation. She said there are serious problems as to how to integrate the use of the Chinese and English languages in using the new technology.

Dr. Rogers enumerated some needs which are common to Chinese as well as to other library systems. Among them are the need for judicious use of space; the need for decisions regarding the use of new technology, particularly computers; the need for more staff people trained in the new technology; and the need for decisions on international networks and cooperation.

"We discussed cooperation between libraries with our Chinese counterparts as well as the idea of cooperative collection development. Many were interested in exchanges and we hope to see some of our Chinese colleagues here," Librarian Rogers said.

The Friends of the Libraries presented to the Gelman Library a rare 19th century broadside which contains a series of nine vignettes dealing with the subject of slavery in Washington, D.C. The Anti-Slavery Society published the broadside in 1836 to illustrate the inconsistency of slavery's continued existence in the heart of democratic America. Friends President Ronald W. Howard made the presentation to Dr. Rogers.

Dean of Students Gail S. Hanson was elected president of the Friends to succeed Mr. Howard and will take office on July 1. Other officers elected were: vice president, Professor of English Philip W. Highfill; secretary, Assistant University Librarian for Collections Connie K. McCarthy; and treasurer, Vice President for Development Michael J. Worth.

LASER DANCE PRODUCTION TO PREMIERE IN LISNER

Laser Dance, described as a pioneering endeavor in light, sound and modern dance, will have its world premiere in the University's Lisner Auditorium on Thursday and Friday, June 6 and 7.

The production will feature the collaboration of three Washington artists: Maida Withers, choreographer; Rockne Krebs, visual artist; and Bob Boilen, musician/composer. The three are joining forces with District Curators, Inc. and the Dance Construction Company to produce this event. Laser Dance is presented by The George Washington University Dance Production Groups. Maida Withers is GW associate professor of human kinetics and leisure studies. Stage lighting design is being done by William DeMull. Production director is William Shoemaker.

By integrating state-of-the-art technology with dance, one of the oldest art forms, the work becomes a comment on technology itself, the artists explain. Laser and sound will surround the audience as dancers moving across the stage interrupt the beams of light (generated by an argon laser), which in turn will trigger a variety of pre-programmed sounds (generated by a Synclavier II digital synthesizer). With nine dancers on stage, the effects are said to range from poetry to pandemonium.

Laser Dance has been developed with assistance from the National Endowment for the Arts Inter-Arts program, The George Washington University School of Human Kinetics and Leisure Studies, the D.C. Commission on the Arts and Humanities, the Dilthey Society and the Philip L. Graham Fund.

Tickets ($18, $15 and $10) are available at the Warner Theatre Box Office, all Ticketron outlets, Ticketplace, or call Chargit at 385-0044 or (800) 468-3540.

MFA CANDIDATE Anne A. Mudgett stands beside her oil painting "Sittin' n Diggin," part of the current MFA Thesis Candidate Show in the Dimock Gallery, which runs through Friday, June 7. The 40" x 50" work will remain in the GW Collection.

BP VENTURE RESEARCH UNIT REPRESENTATIVE TO VISIT DC

Dr. Don Braben, head of the BP (British Petroleum) Venture Research Unit, has contacted the University in search of possible applicants for research support.

"The BP Venture Research Unit is offering to support original, fundamental research in areas where our lack of understanding is a serious obstacle to progress. The research may be in any field, environmental or theoretical, and the unit looks for coherent approaches formulated without artificial constraints on scientific discipline which can be imagined to lead to industrial opportunities within a decade or two.

"The scheme is designed to be attractive to those researchers who have reached a point of departure in their careers: those who wish to break away from their established track records and chance their arms with something new," explains Dr. Braben.

Dr. Braben will be visiting Washington on Friday, June 14, and would be willing to meet with those who may be interested. Anyone interested in submitting a proposal to Venture Research Unit or in meeting with Dr. Braben should contact him directly to make arrangements. He may be reached at the following address: The Venture Research Unit, BP International Limited, Brittanic House, Moor Lane, London. EC2Y 9BU. Tel: 01-920-8123.

Initial application for support may be made with a half-page note. There are no deadlines.

KING'S DOMINION COUPONS AVAILABLE FOR GW PEOPLE

Through the Hospital Council of the National Capital Area, discount coupons are available for all members of the University community to visit King's Dominion on selected dates in the month of June. The coupons provide a saving of $5.25 on the $14.50 entrance fee. The dates in June are 1, 2, 7, 8, 9, 14, 15, 16, 17, 22, 23, 28, 29 and 30. The coupons are available from the Student Activities Office, Marvin Center, Rooms 425-427.

NATIONAL LAW CENTER RECEIVES GIFT OF $100,000 TO ESTABLISH ROBERT N. MILLER SCHOLARSHIP

The George Washington University National Law Center has received a gift of $1000,000 for the establishment of the Robert Netherland Miller Scholarship Fund at the law school.

The gift comes from the Miller and Chevalier Charitable Foundation. The presentation was made June 3 to National Law Center Dean Jerome A. Barron by John Bixler, president of the Miller and Chevalier Charitable Foundation and a partner in the law firm of Miller & Chevalier.

Dean Barron, in expressing the University's appreciation, said, "More than most law schools, The George Washington Law School has extended its hand for many generations to those who needed to work either full- or part-time in order to secure a legal education. The legal profession has been thought of as a classic ladder for social mobility. The George Washington Law School in particular has been a willing and hospitable instrument in that mobility. That we have been open to all, regardless of economic background, is a proud part of our heritage. It is gifts like these which will enable us to continue to propel that heritage into the future."

Dean Barron noted that, for the past 30 years, the Rockport Fund, established by the firm, has provided student stipends in support of faculty research.

George Washington law alumni who are members of the firm of Miller & Chevalier on hand for the presentation included, Jay Carlson, Clarence Kips, Philip Neal and Gary Quintiere. Mr. Neal is managing partner of the firm.

Members of the University community present, in addition to Dean Barron, were Vice President and Treasurer Charles E. Diehl, NLC Associate Dean E.A. Potts and Assistant Dean for Career Development and Director of Law Development John S. Jenkins.

ASTRONAUT FREDERICK GREGORY, GW ALUMNUS, HONORED BY D.C.

Astronaut Colonel Frederick Gregory, who holds the degree of Master of Science in Administration with a concentration in information systems technology (1977) from the University's School of Government and Business Administration, was honored by the District of Columbia with a series of events June 3-5 following the historic space flight in early May when he and six other astronauts orbited the earth 110 times--once every 90 minutes. Colonel Gregory was the pilot on the mission.

In his response at the conclusion of the June 3 opening ceremony at Western Plaza, across from the District Building, Colonel Gregory said, "Thank you for your welcome. I want to tell you how proud it has been to grow up in a community such as Washington, D.C." He went on, "The schools in D.C. were fine and also taught me there is more to life than just being in a classroom. They took me out to the National Theatre, to Gettysburg, to the Capital, so that I saw there was more beyond the classroom. The Boy Scouts have been one of the most influential factors in my life. They took me out of D.C. and let me see the opportunities we all have. Those influences shaped my life."

A native Washingtonian, Colonel Gregory is a graduate of Anacostia High School (1958) and the Air Force Academy (Bachelor of Science, 1964).

GW STUDENT JANE CASEY NAMED 1985 HARRY S. TRUMAN SCHOLAR

Jane A. Casey, a junior majoring in international affairs in the School of Public and International Affairs (SPIA), has been named a 1985 Harry S. Truman Scholar. She is one of 105 Truman Scholars selected for 1985 from a nominee pool of nearly 900 and is the first GW student to be chosen a Truman Scholar.

"This has changed my life. It's a blessing," said Jane of the scholarship, which can provide her up to $5,000 in aid.

Ms. Casey has a special interest in international law and economics. By coincidence, she is originally from St. Louis, Missouri. She has worked as a secretary for undergraduate records in the SPIA Dean's Office and was a research associate for a Japanese scholar at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, Smithsonian Institution. In 1983, she was selected through a written competition in SPIA as one of two George Washington students to attend the annual Student Conference on United States Affairs, hosted annually since 1949 by the United States Military Academy at West Point.

After 10 years of professional experience, she has returned to George Washington to complete her studies for the undergraduate degree. During the 10-year

PRESIDENT ELLIOTT SPEAKS ON GW IN THE YEAR 2000

In a discussion of present strengths and future possibilities and opportunities, President Lloyd Elliott, in a speech to alumni during the June 8 reunion, took stock of the University's growing successes in many areas and outlined steps the institution will be exploring as a result of the recommendations of the Commission for the Year 2000.

Among present strengths, he enumerated the intellectual resources of the city of Washington; the university's favorable financial condition, which will be further enhanced when the indebtedness on our real estate holdings is paid; and the fact that gifts to the University have increased each year over the past 15 years. He further noted that growing numbers of faculty members are recognized nationally in their fields, that levels of research have increased, that our libraries are currently meeting the criteria which will qualify them for membership in the Association of Research Libraries in another year or two and that our student population, with its diversity and international character, is one of our greatest assets. President Elliott said that enrollments of full-time students have been rising at GW during a period of lower enrollments for higher education generally. He commented, "We are in a position where we need to begin to contemplate lowering, rather than increasing, enrollment."

Focusing on the most important roles of the University before moving on to specific recommendations of the Commission, the president named the University's emphasis on the importance of a liberal education for undergraduate students; the university's strong pre-professional and professional programs of study; the institution's continuing history of educating leaders and its role in advancing knowledge through research. Dr. Elliott emphasized the significance of the University's location to its purposes and missions, declaring Washington's "importance as an urban, national and international center offers unparalleled advantages to the University."

Speaking of the "agenda for action" set by the Commission, President Elliott outlined needs and plans that will be explored in the months and years ahead.

"First, we need to insure that our curricula and teaching methods are current and meet students' needs, he said, pointing out that the Commission recommended an expanded program in the field of communications. "Second, we need to build our research capability ... We can do more," he went on, noting that the University Research Committee has recommended that the University form research centers or institutes to provide the visibility and identification necessary for attracting sponsors for large scale research efforts. "Overall," he stated, "the goal is to develop into a research institution of the first rank.

"The Commission called for improvements in library services, particularly in using new technology, and in renovating and building the natural science and engineering facilities necessary to sustain quality programs in these disciplines," he told his listeners.

President Elliott said the Commission proposed that the University develop "distinctive emphases" in three areas: in international affairs; in government and public policy; and in technology.

Of the first area, he said, "Virtually all of our schools and colleges have significant international dimensions to their programs," adding that approximately 2,500 students, or 15 percent of the student body, come from other nations. He announced, "We will undertake a major expansion of our international programs ... The Commission proposed that the School of Public and International Affairs be reorganized to concentrate on international affairs only ... Urban public affairs, in turn, would be strengthened in Columbian College and the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences."

On the area of government and public policy, the president commented, "Being private, independent and non-sectarian, this University is strongly positioned to consider questions on government and public policy from all points of view. While we hold no institutional position on questions of public policy, we do have a significant number of faculty members ... whose research and scholarly interests center on these subjects." He said the Commission recommended the University develop a Center for the Study of Public Policy which would help launch new research programs ... and facilitate and strengthen current faculty research. "In the not too distant future, we can achieve distinction as a leading American institution in the study of our own government, other governments and public policy," he stated.

Of technology, Dr. Elliott said, "Any university which aspires to distinction in the 21st century must take into account technology and its consequences. In fact, by the year 2000 it is likely that universities will be judged to a substantial degree by how successfully they have adapted technology to their uses in research, education, and institutional management ... Each academic unit must insure that its curriculum contains opportunities for the study of important questions related to the development of technology ... We should encourage each school to develop emphases relating to technology which are critical to their disciplines or fields of study." He told the alumni that the Commission had endorsed the Center for High Technology established earlier this year in the School of Engineering and Applied Science. "We will have to: insure basic computer literacy; develop computer sophistication in every discipline; and build an administrative computing capacity which takes advantage of the most current knowledge in that field."

Of overall future prospects, President Elliott concluded, "This is the promise of The George Washington University for the year 2000 ... Now, proposals must be translated into reality. That task is already underway, and we share a spirit of excitement and anticipation about the University we are becoming."

COLUMBIAN COLLEGE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED

More than 125 people came out to celebrate the establishment of the new Columbian College Alumni Association on June 8.

In brief remarks, Dean Clara Lovett described the organization of the group and introduced the president and the chairpersons of the three committees which have been set up. They are: President, Abe Morris, (B.A. 1981, also J.D. 1984); Program Committee, Mrs. Sally Dessez Miller (B.A. 1948); Development Committee, Leslie Platt (B.A. 1966); and Student Support Committee, Associate Professor and Acting Chairman of Physics, Norayr Khatcheressian (B.A. 1960, also M.A. 1963). The dean noted that, after the first year with appointed officers, elections will be held annually.

Dean Lovett said, "With Leslie Platt, Development, will be Bob Guarasci, the immediate past president of the GW Student Association, who will run the (Columbian College) phonathon. Professor Khatcheressian, as chairman of the Student Support Committee, will work with the committee in giving intellectual, emotional and moral support to students. We will be telling students about some of the many things that graduates in the liberal arts can do. The faculty members who are also Columbian College graduates will provide role models for the student. Professor Khatcheressian will provide a role model from inside. He will need a variety of people. We'll be in touch with many of you to see if you are interested in working with this Student Support Committee," she told the assembled alumni.

"The essential ingredient in this undertaking is the enthusiasm and interest of the alumni," she concluded.

period, she worked as a lobbyist, as the director of the Municipal Energy Program in Columbia, Missouri, and did promotional work in the engineering industry. She is a state-certified energy auditor.

The Harry S. Truman Scholarship Foundation provided for her to travel to Independence, Missouri, for the 1985 Awards Ceremony, held May 12 at the Harry S. Truman Library. Margaret Truman Daniel, a trustee of the foundation, as well as a GW alumna and a GW trustee, presented the awards.

The Harry S. Truman Scholarship Foundation is the congressionally authorized federal memorial to the 33rd President of the United States. Public Law 93-642, enacted January 4, 1975, established the foundation. The scholarships are awarded on a merit basis each year to college students who show potential for leadership, academic ability, and an outstanding potential for a career in government.

PARKING FEES AND RENEWAL PROCEDURES FOR 1985-86

All current permanent payroll deduction parking contracts will automatically be renewed July 1, 1985. If any parker does not wish to have payroll deductions, parking privileges should be cancelled as outlined in the Parking Brochure for Faculty/Staff. Parking can be cancelled at any time. It is necessary to sign forms to stop payroll deductions.

New decals will be issued to all payroll deduction contract parkers. The new decals will be issued as follows: administrative staff, excluding University Garage parkers, from now through June 28; administrative staff assigned to the University Garage, July 1 through July 31. (Faculty members should have picked up new decals during the month of May.) All contract parkers should have the new decal displayed by August 1, 1985.

Note to faculty: Faculty members who do not wish to have payroll deductions during the summer months must follow the procedures for cancelling parking and sign the appropriate forms. Occasional parking is always available to faculty.

PERSONNEL SERVICES STAFF CHANGES ANNOUNCED

James E. Clifford, director of Personnel Services, announces two changes in his staff. Effective May 27, Tom Rogers assumed the position of manager of compensation. He has served in Personnel Services at the University for nearly eight years, most recently as manager of Records and Benefits. He replaces Colleen Snyder, who has re-located to Freeport, Bahamas.

Ms. Jan Carl has been promoted to the position of manager of Records and Benefits. Jan has been supervisor of Personnel Data at the University for the last year. She may be reached at Ext. 4474. Tom Rogers' extension is 6065.

SARP RECEPTIONS BEGIN

Members of the University faculty and staff are invited to attend informal receptions for the members of the class of 1989 and their families as part of the Summer Advance Registration Program (SARP). The receptions, called "Meet and Greet," will be held from 5 to 6 pm in the Marvin Center Ballroom on Monday, June 24; Thursday, June 27; Monday, July 8; and Thursday, July 11.

SPECIAL WALK AROUND UNIVERSITY GARDENS

There will be a special walk around the University gardens on Wednesday, June 19, at 7 pm, conducted by Grounds Supervisor Louis Smith.

Mr. Smith will guide those joining the walk in observing the varying landscape styles seen on the campus and will discuss the long-term objectives of the University's landscape plan. The tour will include the University's award-winning rose gardens, recognized by the American Rose Society. The three new varieties of roses being tested for 1986 will be pointed out.

The walk is sponsored by the Alumni Relations Office. There is no charge but those planning to attend are asked to call Ext. 6435. The walking group will meet in the lounge at Alumni House. (The rain date is the following Wednesday, June 26.)

HATCHET TYPESETTING SERVICES

The GW Hatchet is offering typesetting services to the University community. Kelly Eaton, general manager, says prices are very reasonable, that the service offers fast turnaround, and that no job is too small. For more information, call Ext. 7079.

PRESIDENT ELLIOTT ANNOUNCES OUTLINE FOR PLANNING, APPOINTS DR. PHELPS PLANNING OFFICER

President Lloyd Elliott has assigned responsibility for planning for the implementation of the recommendations of the Commission for the Year 2000 to the Office of the Provost. In addition, he has announced the appointment of Dr. Marianne R. Phelps, associate provost, as planning officer for the University, effective July 1, 1985.

The Commission recommended that "the University should develop a coordinated planning process to support its effort for significantly greater academic quality and distinction."

In announcing initial plans for follow-through on the Commission study, President Elliott said, "Academic plans must be coordinated and integrated with budget and facilities planning and with such activities as fund-raising, library and computer acquisitions, and student and administrative services. For this reason, the planning function will be based in the Office of the Provost, and Provost Johnson will have responsibility for ensuring that the process is implemented throughout the University."

In announcing the appointment of the University Planning Officer, President Elliott said that Dr. Phelps has "a comprehensive knowledge of University programs which has been reinforced by her outstanding work as the Chair of the Commission for the Year 2000. No one is better qualified to direct the translation of the Commissions's vision of excellence for the University into reality than Dr. Phelps," the president commented.

Provost William D. Johnson said, "Dr. Phelps' initial work will be to develop the process for planning and the mechanics necessary to ensure its successful operation. Since the process must preserve the strengths of the schools and divisions and support their ability to innovate, and since it must rely on the informed advice of the University's academic and administrative units at all levels, most of the actual planning will be done at the departmental and school level.

"The deans, under the direction of the Vice President for Academic Affairs, will be responsible for assigning priorities to academic plans on the basis of their potential contribution to meeting the goals of the University. Overall direction and coordination of planning, and the work of the various planning groups and task forces, will be the responsibility of Dr. Phelps. This centralization will preserve the ability to implement approved plans on a timely basis and will ensure the realization of University-wide objectives," he stated.

Commenting further on the president's announcement, Provost Johnson said that his office would be guided by several principles set forth in the Commission report, which he quoted: "As the University moves to more formal planning, care must be taken that all points of view are considered in the process. Planning should promote sound decision-making; it should not cut off debate. On-going communication among all levels of the University community is essential to good academic planning."

GW FORMS JOINT VENTURE WITH AMI FOR HEALTH CARE

The George Washington University has created a joint venture between its 13-year-old health maintenance organization (GWUHP) and American Medical International (AMI) in contracts effective July 1 of this year.

"AMI has the technical and monetary resources to help the GWU Health Plan expand and to provide better services for its members," says Jack Ott, M.D., medical director of GWUHP. "We will continue to provide a comprehensive health benefits package for our subscriber members," he says.

GW University retains responsibility for quality assurance and patient education for the main clinical site presently located at 1229 25th Street, N.W., and assumes the same responsibility for new clinical sites planned for the near future. The same group of physicians will provide care at the current location, while training medical and allied health students.

The governing structure of the GWU Health Plan is a 12-member board of directors that includes representatives of AMI, the GWU Medical Center and subscribers. The George Washington University Health Plan retains its name with the joint venture.

The GWUHP was started 13 years ago on May 16 as a site for a training program for postgraduate physicians in pediatrics and general internal medicine, as well as physician assistants, nurse practitioners and medical students in primary care under the Department of Health Care Sciences of GW. At that time, the GWUHP was considered a pioneering effort in the field of patient care and medical education and was one of the first health maintenance organizations created by a university.

GWUHP and AMI intend to develop a health care network in the Washington area. Patients who choose the GWUHP downtown clinical location, will, when necessary, be admitted to The George Washington University Hospital, as they are now. Patients who choose the future clinical sites located elsewhere will be admitted to nearby hospitals yet to be selected.

The possibility of a sale, lease, or a joint venture for GW Hospital continues as a separate matter, with three medical firms having expressed interest.

GW RECEIVES $5,000 AWARD FROM ALLIED FOUNDATION

The Allied Foundation has awarded a $5,000 grant to the University for the 1985-1986 academic year in recognition and support of work by Dr. Simon Y. Berkovich, associate professor of engineering and applied science, in the fields of fault tolerance and artificial intelligence.

A spokesperson for Allied Bendix Aerospace said, of the award, "We feel very strongly that Simon Berkovich is a leader in his field, and we wanted to support his university and his work." The award is part of an annual giving program by the Allied Foundation.

PROFESSOR EMERITUS FREDERICK H. GIBBS DIES

Professor Emeritus Frederick H. Gibbs, founder and first chairman of the GW Department of Heath Care Sciences, died on May 9 after a brief illness. He was 83.

Before coming to the University in 1959, Professor Gibbs had a long and active Army career. He rose from the rank of private in 1925 to retire as a full colonel in the Medical Service Corps, Army Medical Department in 1957. Through the 1940s and '50s, he was involved in organizing, performing and evaluating management research in the Office of the Surgeon General of the Army. Professor Gibbs contributed considerably to the development of conceptual frameworks and their application to military medical administration.

From 1952 to 1957, he was the director, Department of Administration, Medical Field Service School, and the course director for the Baylor University Graduate Program in Hospital Administration at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Professor Gibbs directed the Interagency Institutes for Federal Hospital Administrators and Veterans Administration Institutes from 1956 to 1967, This continuing education program for federal health care executives has recently returned to the University.

He is survived by his wife Lois; two daughters, Helen Justy of New York and Barbara Gibbs of Maryland; two sons, Frederick W. of Minnesota and Thomas C. of Florida; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

FELLOWSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

Several fellowship opportunities are available through the Graduate Fellowship Information Center. The National Science Foundation has announced the Presidential Young Investigator Awards. These awards are "intended to improve the capability of universities to respond to the demand for highly qualified scientific and engineering personnel for academic and industrial research." Approximately 100 awards will be given in the 1986 competition. They will be made for periods of up to five years. Faculty Awards will be made to those on or being considered for tenure. The Pre-faculty Awards will go to outstanding graduate students who are completing their graduate work. The National Science Foundation strongly encourages nominations in this category. The awards are federal and industry matching fund awards and will range from $25,000 to $100,000. The postmark date for applications is July 1.

The National Science Foundation is also offering grants for the support of doctoral dissertation research in the environmental, behavioral, biological and social sciences. Proposals are reviewed on the basis of scientific content, importance and originality. Proposals should be submitted through the University by the dissertation advisor on behalf of a graduate student. Up to six months should be allowed for normal processing. Grants are awarded for periods up to 24 months.

For more information, contact the Graduate Fellowship Information Center, Gelman Library, Room 621D, Ext. 6217.

He will chair the division for the academic year 1985-86 and has been nominated to stand for election to the presidency of the association in 1988.

SHIRLEY M. WRIGHT, Director, English for International Students (EIS) program, and EIS faculty hosted eight teacher trainers from Panamanian universities, April 4. She and faculty members met with the trainers for two hours to acquaint them with EIS and to exchange insights on the teaching of English to speakers of other languages. April 16, EIS hosted two teachers from Bolivia and Turkey.

1,224 TOTAL YEARS OF SERVICE RECOGNIZED WITH AWARDS

"This institution has been around since 1821, in differing forms, but still an institution," said Vice President and Treasurer Charles E. Diehl at the recent Service Awards luncheon. "We hope it will be around in 2021 and I want to express my appreciation to you individually and collectively, to all of you, for what you do for the institution. Without what you do, this place would be pretty dreary. When I come here, I feel I'm amongst friends and I look forward to seeing each one of you," Mr. Diehl told all those receiving awards for service at the event. He said the combined work of the awardees came to 1,224 years.

Recognition was given at retirement and for length of service to those in departments that come under the Office of the Vice President and Treasurer.

In the Department of Business Affairs, Bookstore Manager Monroe S. Hurwitz is retiring after 15 years with the University.

In the Department of Planning and Construction, Everett (Unk) Fellinger, who was the University's first campus architect, retired after 12 years. Those retiring from the Physical Plant Department (PPD) were: Irene Prester (36 years); William J. McGinn (20 years); Wealtha B. Davis (17) years; Pauline T.Coins (11 years); Gladys C. Lawrence (9 years); Elsie P. Cookman (7 years); and John W. Samborski, "our roof man" (11 years).

Vice President Diehl himself received a 15-year certificate and pin. The presentation was made by Assistant Treasurer Peggy Greene.

Robert Hairston and Ethel Honeycutt of PPD received 25-year awards. Director of Parking Joseph Mello was not present to receive his 30-year award.

From the Cashier's Office, Jacqueline Peterson (10 years) and Deirdre Harwell-Donovan (5 years) were recognized as was Julie Dysart of Student financial Aid (5 years).

Barbara Evans of the University Parking Office was thanked for 20 years service. D. Mark Carter (5 years) of the same office was on leave the day of the luncheon.

Five University Bookstore people received awards. They were: Mary Simmons (20 years); Myrtle Heard and Marvin Stukes (both 15 years); Doris Comfort (10 years); and Delaine Lincoln (5 years).

Sam Oliver Jr. of the University Mail Service received recognition for 15 years service.

Six members of the Procurement and Supply Department received awards: Dawn Jenkins and Joseph Reeder (both 15 years); Marie Plunket and Joseph Robinson (both 10 years); and Cheryl Amado and Randolph Crawford (both 5 years).

There were three awardees from Graphics and Printing: David Dickson (15 years) and Ronna Hammer and Hazel Hoggs (both 5 years).

From Planning and Construction, three associates had recognition for five years: John Cox, Kevin Muldoon and Leo Williams.

Physical Plart had a large number of people recognized, including PPD Director Robert F. Burch himself (15 years). In the 20-year group were Annie Campbell, Mary Fenner, Alverta Green, Willard Lent, Mary McCrimmon, Alice Montague, Elizabeth Moore, William Parnell, Leroy Payton, Lexie Riley, Mary Rue, Mary Smith and William Wilson. Those with 15 years service were Glenn Byrne, Thomas Davis, Annie Ellerbe, Theresa Fields, Lenoria King, Ida Peace, Willie Radcliff, and Mary Settle. There were a dozen with 10 years service: Melvin Atcherson, Richard Barber, Thelma Burch, Carolyn Burwell, Detroy Haigler, Allene Medlin, Thomas Monroe, Olema Oliphant, Wiliam Roberson, Glenwood Sickels, Ronald Smith and Bervil Wells. PPD's five-year group included Valerie Andrews, Hazel Blanford, Arnetha Brady, Almeta Cooper, Wendell Henry, Shirlene McCollum, Francis McMichael, Annie Moore, Larry Peterson, Joseph Sanders, Kevin Smith and Louis Smith.

The University's full-length portrait of George Washington, painted in 1800 by Gilbert Stuart, has been installed in the main lobby of 2000 Pennsylvania Avenue where it may be viewed by the public.

The portrait was purchased at auction by the University in 1949 and for some years hung in the reading room of the old library, now Lisner Hall at 2023 G Street, NW. It was removed during building renovation in the early 1970s and has been displayed infrequently since that time. It was included in the 1980 major San Francisco show, "The White House: Treasury of Our Heritage."

The painting, an important artistic legacy, is approximately 8 by 5 feet and has been recently restored by conservator Arthur H. Page IV, grandson of the University's late Dean Elmer Louis Kayser, who died April 28 of this year.

CURTIS W. GOODE NAMED DIRECTOR OF SAFETY AND SECURITY

Curtis W. Goode is appointed director of safety and security, effective today, July 1, 1985, Vice President for Administration and Research Carl J. Lange has announced. Goode has served as acting director since February 8 of this year, when Edward D. Kenney resigned.

Born in San Antonio, Texas, he studied at Texas A&M earning two degrees: Bachelor of Science (1973) in health and physical education; and Master of Education (1974). He joined the University in January, 1983, as assistant safety and security director. Immediately before that, he worked as a research scientist with National Public Services Research Institute in Alexandria, Virginia. Director Goode is a member of the International Association of Chiefs of Police and the International Association of Campus Law Enforcement Administrators.

Currently a candidate for the Master of Arts in the field of criminal justice at the University, he enjoys swimming and outdoor life.

TROUBADOURS RETURN FROM REPUBLIC OF IRELAND

The George Washington University Troubadours, our 14-member a capella singing group directed by Assistant Professor of Music Catherine Pickar, recently returned from the Republic of Ireland where they toured and performed under the sponsorship of the United States Embassy in Dublin.

The ensemble performed its blend of serious music and American vocal jazz for enthusiastic audiences who joined in singing and clapping during the closing Irish medley. Highlights of the tour included performances for the Lord Mayor of Dublin, the University College of Dublin and the Royal Irish Academy of Music.

In May of 1984, the Troubadours made a similar tour of Portugal, also sponsored by the United States Embassy.

They were: (20 years) Kenneth Baylor, Lucy Petty, Annette Plater, Lorraine Still; (15 years) Mary Scott and Franchot Woodward; (10 years) Peter Akwafo, Victor Arce, Henry Gaston, Mary Proctor and Theresa Ross.

Vice President Diehl and his department chairmen presented the awards together. The invocation and benediction were given by Reverend Leroy O. Payton.

"SURFACE AND ORNAMENT," DIMOCK GALLERY EXHIBITION

The Dimock Gallery, The George Washington University, Formica Corporation and Wall Products will present "Surface and Ornament," an exhibition of conceptual objects in COLORCORE(R) by Formica from Wednesday, July 10, through Friday, August 30.

For over 20 years, Formica Corporation worked on developing a surfacing material that would have all the characteristics of a laminate with the added dimension of being the same color throughout - eliminating the "dark line" at the edge. The result was COLORCORE(R), a surfacing material available in 94 colors.

The works in the exhibition have been done by well-known architect/designers and include lamps, tables, mirrors, chairs, a decorative column and a cart.

The exhibition has been organized by Susan Grant Lewin, creative director of the Formica Corporation. This exhibition has been seen in London, Paris, Milan and, most recently, at the Metropolitan Museum and Art Center in Miami, Florida.

"Surface and Ornament" is part of network of design exhibitions organized for the World Design 85/ICSID USA. ICSID stands for the International Council of the Societies of Industrial Designers. Gallery hours are 10 am to 5 pm, Monday through Friday.

—GRANT OPPORTUNITIES—

(Editor's Note: For the convenience of the University community, GW Report will periodically be providing information on grant opportunities beginning with this issue.)

The Office of Naval Research (ONR) has announced a new program to identify and support young scientists and engineers who show exceptional promise for doing creative research. During the Navy's fiscal year, (ending September 30, 1985), ONR will make 12 awards to academic researchers who received Ph.D. or equivalent degrees on or after January 1, 1980. The awards will be no less than $50,000 per year for three years with the possibility of greater support through matching funding. Awards will be based on research proposals and supporting material. Proposals falling within the broad scope of naval research interests as described in the ONR brochure, Guide to the Programs, will be considered. The guide is available for review in the Office of Sponsored Research, Rice Hall, 6th floor.

GRANTS (continued)

The Council on International and Public Affairs is sponsoring an essay contest to stimulate wide-spread debate on the underlying issues of peace and justice and how these goals can be achieved. The topic for 1985 is: "How can we, without adopting socialism or giving up our treasured freedoms, modify American capitalism to make it more equitable and reduce the level of ideological conflict with the Soviet Union so as to make possible an end to the nuclear nightmare?" The topic was developed in response to Stuart Speiser's book, How to End the Nuclear Nightmare. The contest is open to individuals from anywhere in the world. The prize amount is $10,000. This is the only year in which this opportunity is offered. The deadline is December 31, 1985. Entry forms are available from:

Council on International and Public Affairs
777 United Nations Plaza
New York, N.Y. 10017
(212) 972-9877.

LECTURE FOR OPENING OF DIMOCK GALLERY SHOW

Susan Grant Lewin, creative director of the Formica Corporation, will give a lecture/slide presentation in conjunction with the opening of the exhibition, "Surface and Ornament," in the University's Dimock Gallery on Wednesday, July 10 at 6 pm. She will speak in Lisner Auditorium. Admission will be free.

Ms. Lewin, who was formerly architecture editor of House Beautiful magazine will discuss current directions in furniture design, especially the impact of plastics in this area of design.

The gallery, off the lower lounge of Lisner Auditorium, will be open from 5 to 8 pm on July 10.

SARP RECEPTIONS CONTINUE

The informal receptions which are part of the Summer Advance Registration Program (SARP) continue this month. Members of the University faculty and staff are invited to come and welcome members of the class of 1989 and their families on Monday, July 8, and Thursday, July 11, from 5 to 6 pm in the Marvin Center Ballroom.

KENNEDY CENTER PARKING NOTE

Effective today, July 1, the GW parking fee for using the Kennedy Center garage will be $2.35 a parking ticket. Staff members may purchase these tickets at the University Parking Office. Students should buy their tickets at the University Bookstore or the University Newsstand, both in the Marvin Center.

SINO-SOVIET CO SPONSORS CONFERENCE WITH YOMIURI SHIMBUN

The GW Institute for Sino-Soviet Studies, with the Japanese Yomiuri Shimbun the world's largest newspaper, sponsored a five-nation conference, "A Search for Political Settlement in Asia," May 14-16, in Tokyo, Japan. Gaston J. Sigur, Jr., director of the GW Institute and special advisor on national security affairs to President Reagan, participated in the conference.

A total of 16 conferees from Japan, the United States, the Soviet Union, China and South Korea attended. The Daily Yomiuri noted that this was the first time that experts in responsible posts in countries differing in political principles and systems had met "to exchange straightforward views on key issues in the Asian region."

By the end of the three-day conference, the participants agreed on the need for "concrete efforts directed toward easing of tensions in the Asian region." In addition, most of the conferees agreed that there should be increasing direct and bilateral dialogue between officials from Seoul and Pyongyang aimed at easing tensions on the Korean Peninsula.

On May 15, a front-page article on Dr. Sigur appeared in The Daily Yumiuri and a front-page article on the results of the conference was published in the paper May 16.

JAMES BREEN RECEIVES DISTINGUISHED SERVICE AWARD

James Breen, professor of human kinetics and leisure studies, received the 1985 Distinguished Service Award of the International Relations Council at the Centennial Celebration Meeting of the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance. The meeting was held in Atlanta in June.

"Service and notable contributions to international or comparative physical education have been numerous and varied for Dr. Breen," the citation accompanying the award said in part. Dr. Breen has served in a variety of leadership capacities for the International Relations Council. He has traveled extensively overseas working for the development of many physical education and sports programs. The areas he has visited include Mexico, Taiwan (ROC), Puerto Rico, Iran, Hong Kong, Korea and the Philippines.

Dr. Breen came to the University in July of 1969, following 10 years at Tulane University. After completion of his undergraduate work at Eastern Illinois University in 1948, he was associated with the University of Illinois until 1957 when he worked for two years with the Chicago Cubs major league team, as director of research and also served as batting coach. He holds two advanced degrees from the University of Illinois (M.S. 1949 and Ph.D. 1959). A consultant to the Data Bank, a group of international specialists in physical education and sport, Professor Breen has served as advisor to the Department of State and is a special advisor to UNESCO and the Organization of American States on priorities and strategies in physical education as they relate to national legislation, programs for the handicapped and teacher preparation.

TWO GW ATHLETES NAMED TO ATLANTIC TEN ACADEMIC ALL-CONFERENCE TEAM

Bill Byrd, a senior member of the GW Men's Swimming and Diving Team, and Kathy Marshall, a senior member of the GW Women's Basketball Team, have been selected to the Atlantic Ten Conference All-Academic Team.

Byrd, a four-year letter winner, finished third in the three-meter diving competition at the 1985 Conference Championships and qualified for the NCAA Swimming Championships as a junior. The GW record-holder at the three-meter level, Byrd received the degree of Bachelor of Business Administration with an emphasis in marketing in May from the School of Government and Business Administration with a 3.6 grade point average.

Marshall, a four-year starter for the Colonial Women, ended her collegiate career this past winter as the University's all-time leading playmaker with 591

A bronze statue, cast from a wood sculpture, "Saint Joan," done by the late Professor Emeritus of Art Donald C. Kline, has been placed in the entrance lobby of the Robert C. and Clarice Smith Hall of Art by the family and friends of Professor Kline.

Speakers at a July 9 ceremony included Professor and Chairman of the Art Department Lilien F. Robinson, Curator of Art Lenore D. Miller and Professor Kline's son, Jon.

Professor Robinson said, in part, "Don's association with George Washington was lengthy and multifaceted. He was a GW student, an active, popular member of the student body; a GW faculty member, teaching both art history and studio arts courses; chairman of the department, which under his leadership, expanded from a two-man department to one of 10; he served, upon his retirement from full-time teaching and the awarding of emeritus status, as curator of the Dimock (Gallery), bringing to it exciting, imaginative exhibitions which significantly increased the position of the Dimock in the art community."

"It is especially appropriate that his memorial work was created by Professor Kline himself, an accomplished sculptor in his own right," said Curator of Art Lenore Miller. "'Saint Joan,' originally carved in redwood in 1950, cast in bronze by Jim Sanborn, is a moving and spiritual piece whose graceful simplicity and beauty will enhance the aesthetic environment of the entire university. This work reflects in concrete terms Donald Kline's contributions as a teacher and artist, and his aspirations for the University he so loved. It was one of his fondest hopes that an individual complex would be constructed as a center for the arts at GW."

Jon Kline, Professor Kline's son, said, "I know my father would have been proud to have a sculpture of his in the lobby of the art building. As you know the Art Department here was my father's whole life and I think it's especially fitting that a part of him is here to enjoy the building and perhaps enlighten others as they pass by."

Professor Kline came to the University in 1927, beginning an association which lasted until 1975. He became professor emeritus in 1973 and then served for the following two years as curator of art in the Dimock Gallery.

SINO-SOVIET COOPERATES WITH USSR ACADEMY OF SCIENCES

The latest in a series of conferences sponsored jointly by the Institute for Sino-Soviet Studies of The George Washington University and the Institute of Far Eastern Studies of the USSR Academy of Sciences was held in June in Moscow. Gaston J. Sigur, director of the GW Institute, was head of the American delegation, which also included Professor Young C. Kim, professor of political science and international affairs. The meetings deal with the subject, "Peace and Security in Asia," and are held every other year, alternating between Washington and Moscow. Participants from both countries are experts in a wide range of pertinent subjects and the conferences are seen to provide an opportunity for useful and important exchanges of information and viewpoints.

INSTALLATION TO BEGIN ON NEW GW PHONE SYSTEM

The University will have an entirely new communications system in approximately 18 months.

Vice President and Treasurer Charles E. Diehl announces that, after competitive bidding, the University has contracted with AT&T Information Systems to provide an integrated voice and data communications system for the entire University campus. The system should be in place and operating by early 1987.

The backbone of the communications system will be a University-owned distribution system composed primarily of fiber optic cable and copper wire.

As installation proceeds, almost every campus telephone will be replaced with touch-tone service, replacing the present dialing system.

Highlights of the new system include provision for both voice and data connections in every student residence hall room and video transmission facilities in major classroom buildings on campus. When the system is completed, The George Washington University will have the capacity to operate its own telephone and data transmission service, resulting in improved service and substantial savings to the University.

The work of installing the new system will begin in the next few weeks.

GW ROSE GARDEN JUDGED "OUTSTANDING"

The evaluation reports of the All-American Rose Selections' accredited public rose gardens for 1984, done by the AARS public Gardens Committee, show the George Washington University Rose Garden to be "outstanding" in all categories.

The University's rose gardens are located in the University Yard, along both the H Street and 21st Street sides, and in Monroe Court, behind Monroe Hall and the Hall of Government.

Grounds Supervisor Louis Smith has received a certificate of award from the AARS Public Gardens Committee in appreciation of our fine rose gardens.

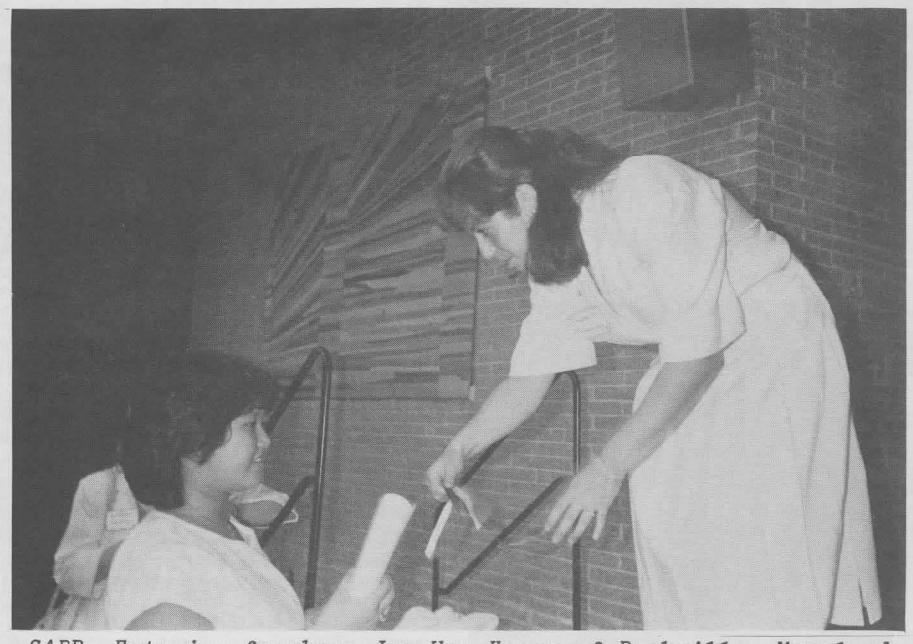
SARP HAS 805 PARTICIPANTS



SARP--Entering freshman Jee Won Hwang of Rockville, Maryland, left, learns from Jacqueline Hallow, peer advising coordinator, that she will have lunch with Dean of Students Gail S. Hanson.

805 entering students participated in the four sessions of SARP, Summer Advance Registration Program, held at the end of June and the beginning of this month. During the SARP program, 524 family members visited the campus with their sons and daughters.

A new feature this year was the Signature Game. The Sarpies, entering students, were to obtain signatures from people in four categories and to take some time to talk to each new person. The categories were: faculty members, with two signatures required; staff members, one signature needed; peer advisers/student leaders, one signature; and fellow Sarpies, two signatures. The game sheets were placed in a grab bag and prizes awarded to students whose completed forms were drawn. First prize was lunch with Dean of Students Gail S. Hanson. There was a Signature Game at each of the four receptions which are part of the SARP program. Four students will be lunching with Dean Hanson as a result of the game.

The game was created by Brian Selinsky, director of academic advising, and Jacqueline Hallow, peer advising coordinator/academic adviser.

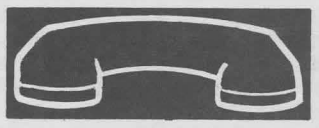
Kathy's cumulative grade point average was 3.74. She plans to attend Harvard Law School this coming fall.



NEW NUMBER FOR PHONE REPAIRS

As of tomorrow, Tuesday, July 23, there will be a new number to call for telephone repairs. The number is 676-5530 or Ext. 5530.

In placing a service call you will need to give the extension number in need of service; the number of phones on which this extension appears; the station numbers of these phones, where available; the location; and a clear explanation of the problem.

U&RP TEAM PLACES THIRD IN NATIONAL COMPETITION

A team of seven GW students in urban and regional planning has received third place in a national student competition on revitalization of post-World War II rental housing, sponsored by NAHRO (National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials).

Winners of the competition were announced by Robert W. Maffin, executive director of NAHRO, at a July 11 press conference held in GW's Department of Urban and Regional Planning. He observed that millions of rental housing units built during the post-war years are now a serious problem for occupants and local communities and noted that the 1980 Census showed that more than 10 million Americans live in substandard housing, with five million of these households in rental housing. Maffin said that it was for these reasons that NAHRO, in cooperation with the Association of Collegiate Schools of Architecture, the American Institute of Architects, the American Planning Association, and the American Society of Landscape Architects, sponsored the national student competition. The project was assisted by a $30,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

"It was hoped that students could provide new thinking which, in turn, would be communicated to those professionals with responsibilities in this regeneration process ... because it is vitally important that we find ways to preserve and extend the useful life of millions of rental units constructed since World War II," Maffin said.

Announcing the award to the GW students, he said, "The site chosen by the group is the Fay Apartments in Anacostia, a private rental housing development, with 66 percent of the units receiving Section 8 rental subsidies. This entry clearly and concretely illustrates the steps and commitments of time and dollars that are necessary to bring a revitalization project to successful completion. It shows an important strategy for having residents gain ownership of the project and make effective changes in its internal environment and in its connection to its surroundings."

The GW students who participated in the competition were Kimberly P. Brown, Michele F. Burbano, Patricia L. D'Angelo, William D. Guernier, Kelley S. Roark, Lisa S. Schwartz, and Douglas J. Woods. The third prize included a $750 cash award and placement in an international competition involving 32 countries, being conducted by the International Federation for Housing and Planning in Budapest, Hungary, in October of this year.

The first two winners in the NAHRO competition were individual architecture students; first, from the University of Illinois, Chicago, and second, from the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee. Both did studies of public housing complexes in Chicago for their entries. In addition to the three prizes, two special merit citations were awarded. All of the U.S. award winners will be entered in the October international competition.

GRANT OPPORTUNITIES

The Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences has detailed its basic research needs for next year. Applicants are urged to respond by Monday, September 30 for funding by spring and summer 1986.

Top priority is given to collaborative efforts of sufficient scale to have significant impact on an issue, although single-investigator projects are also invited. Multidisciplinary approaches are sought, including cognitive psychology, human factors engineering, educational or measurement psychology, systems analysis, computer and cognitive science, anthropology and software design.

Collaborative efforts may involve researchers at a single institution, several cooperating institutions, or joint university/industry partnerships.

Proposals are sought in the following broad categories: planning, problem solving and decision-making: unit performance; skill-building technique; and designing systems for people.

For information on applying for grants from the Army Research Institute, contact the GW Office of Sponsored Research, 6th floor, Rice Hall, Ext. 6255.

BIG SISTERS IN SCIENCE PROGRAM INITIATED IN DC

A program called Big Sisters in Science has been initiated in the Washington, DC, area by the Omicron (Greater Washington) Chapter of Graduate Women in Science (GWIS). The program's purpose is to provide guidance and career counseling to high school girls interested in science.

For several years GWIS has been giving awards to female students for projects presented at science fairs. It has been noticed that the quality of the girls' projects is usually inferior to those of the boys and that girls seem to receive little attention from their science teachers. To prevent girls from losing interest in science and also to provide female scientist role models, GWIS is trying to match girls and professional women (whether currently working or retired) who will become Big Sisters in Science. This is not a tutoring project. The contacts could be limited to telephone conversations and some occasional meetings between the big and little sisters.

The hope of GWIS is to extend the Big Sisters in Science program across the country.

Dr. Ariel Hollinshead, research professor of medicine (in pharmacology), is the current national president of Graduate Women in Science. She was honored as one of 200 women leaders at a White House reception on May 16, when she met and talked with Mrs. Nancy Reagan. As president of GWIS, Dr. Hollinshead hopes to build up the Big Sisters in Science program and to work toward an increase in donations for the grants and fellowships program of the organization. She is a past president of the Omicron Chapter of GWIS. The current president is Dr. Phyllis Kind, professor of microbiology and of medicine.

To become a big sister, call Nancy Brown at (301) 496-9740 (work) or (301) 229-8221 (home), or Alicia Mullor at (202) 473-7729 (work).

HOLIDAY RECIPES SOUGHT FOR FUTURE COOKBOOK

The Occupational Therapy/Therapeutic Recreation Department on 6-North in the University Hospital, GWU Medical Center, is planning to publish a cookbook of holiday recipes.

All University personnel are invited to submit recipes for inclusion. Planners are particularly interested in family recipes or those special to an individual's culture. Any explanation or story associated with the recipe will be included, as well as the name of the contributor. Patients on the psychiatric unit and day hospital patients will organize the cookbook as part of a pre-vocational skill-development group. It is expected that the cookbook will be published at the end of the year. Proceeds will be used to provide special programs and recreation equipment for psychiatric patients at GWU Medical Center. Recipes should be sent to "Cookbook" - 6-North, University Hospital.

Will coordinate tumor specimen and clinical patient course in intra-departmental GW liaison [pathology/surgery/medicine] and extramural sponsoring and collaborating groups [NIH, granting agencies]. Required: research experience, R.N. and preferably as nurse practitioner or physician's assistant. Available immediately.) Contact: Dr. Glenn Geelhoed, Director of Surgical Research, 2150 Pennsylvania Ave., NW, phone: 676-4427.

RESEARCH ASSISTANT, Department of Medicine, Gastroenterology Research Laboratory. (Person will work on experiments involving purification and characterization of digestive enzymes. Bachelor's degree in chemistry, biology or biochemistry required along with at least one year's relevant experience. Experience with protein purification techniques, radioisotope usage, animal surgical techniques and immunological techniques preferred.) Contact Dr. Ingram Roberts, 676-4214.

RESEARCH ASSISTANT, Department of Anatomy. (Position within a neuroanatomy research laboratory entails the study of the development of the vestibular system. B.S. and/or M.S. in biology or a related science required; individual must be independent and able to execute complex experiments. Should have expertise in transmission electron microscopy, especially thin tissue sectioning; knowledge of statistical analysis, computers, photography and accounting is highly desirable. Commitment of at least two years required. Available immediately.) Send resume and names of three references to: Dr. K.D. Peusner, Department of Anatomy, 2300 I Street, NW, 20037.

POSTDOCTORAL RESEARCH POSITION, Department of Anatomy. (Position available in a basic science, neuroanatomy research laboratory to study the development of the avian vestibular system. Research focuses on the morphology of the developing inner ear and vestibular nuclei using transmission electron microscopy and/or classical neuroanatomical methods (Rapid Golgi) and experimental manipulations. Strong background in neurobiology desirable. Commitment of at least two years required.) Send resume and three references to: Dr. K.S. Peusner, Department of Anatomy, 2300 I Street, NW, 20037.

RESEARCH ASSISTANT, Doctoral Program in Public Policy. (Person will participate in a cost and training effectiveness analysis for U.S. Army Training Technology Field Activities. Responsibilities include: conducting computerized literature search; abstracting technical articles; field travel/site visits; data development and acquisition; and model building and development. Will work with an interdisciplinary team of economists and psychologists. Bachelor's degree required.) Contact Eileen McKeon, 331-9044.

RESEARCH ASSISTANT, Department of Microbiology. (Required:bachelor's degree in microbiology/immunology with courses in biochemistry. At least one year's experience including: in vitro cultivation of protozoan parasites and mammalian cell lines; enzyme assay procedures; gel electrophoresis and chromatography of protozoan extracts; and computer-assisted storage and statistical analysis of laboratory data. Available immediately.) Contact: Dr. Julia W. Albright, Department of Microbiology, 676-3531.

ASSISTANT MANAGER - ENGINEERING ADMISSIONS, School of Engineering and Applied Science. (Position involves the recruiting of high school students and the managing of scholarship and minority programs within the school. Considerable recruiting travel in the northeast section of the U.S. is required during the fall and spring. Bachelor's degree in engineering or science required; knowledge of the engineering profession desired.) Send resume to: Manager, Engineering Admissions, School of Engineering and Applied Science, George Washington University, Washington, DC, 20052.

In the DEPARTMENT OF BIOCHEMISTRY, there are several positions available; address: 2300 I Street, NW, Washington, DC, 30027:

RESEARCH ASSISTANT, halftime. (Position entails the biochemical studies of neural and neuroendocrine peptides and their receptors. B.S. or B.A. in related field required. Previous experience in the use of radioisotopes is desirable.) Contact: Dr. Terry Moody.

RESEARCH ASSISTANT, halftime. (Person will study mitochondrial bioenergetics and cellular calcium homoeostasis. Experience in atomic absorption spectrometry and other techniques in analytical chemistry is required as well as B.S.) Contact: Dr. Gary Fiskum.

RESEARCH ASSISTANTS, halftime, two positions available. (Individuals will conduct studies in the area of prostaglandin and leukotriene metabolism as related to the pathogenesis and treatment of heart disease. B.S. or B.A. required; some lab experience in the above areas desirable.) Contact: Dr. J. Martyn Bailey.

RESEARCH ASSISTANT, halftime. (Position entails studies of the regulation of cellular lipoxygenases. Experience in analytical techniques (HPLC, TLC), tissue culture and other biosynthetic methodologies is desirable. B.S. or B.A. in related field required.) Contact: Dr. Jack Vanderhoek.

RESEARCH ASSISTANT, halftime. (Position involves the regulation of proteins required for intestinal lipid transport. B.S. required. Experience in work with small animals, organelle preparation, use of radioisotopes and radioimmunoassays and polyacrylamide gel electrophoresis is desirable.) Contact: Dr. George Vahouny.

In the PATHOLOGY DEPARTMENT, there are three positions available; address: 2300 I Street, NW, Washington, DC, 20037:

ELECTRON MICROSCOPE TECHNICIAN, part-time. (Individual needed with experience in tissue processing, thinning, printing, and use of electron microscope.) Contact: Dr. J.M. Orenstein, 676-2943.

RESEARCH ASSISTANT, part-time. (Person needed for project involving protein separation using SDS polyacrylamide gel electrophroesis. Required: B.S. in basic sciences and ability to work with small laboratory animals. Training in pathology highly desirable including experience in preparation of frozen sections, histochemical and immunohistochemical staining and protein electorphoretic transfer blotting [Western blotting].) Qualified individuals contact: Dr. Carleton Garrett, 676-3825.

RESEARCH ASSISTANT, halftime. (Project involves the pathology and chemistry of steroid-estrogen receptor interactions [preparation of cytosol extracts, binding experiments using filtration techniques, sucrose gradient sedimentation, histochemistry and slide preparation.] B.S. or B.A. with chemical and/or biochemical laboratory experience [for example, analytical and preparative centrifugation, UV-Vis spectroscopy, filtration assay, column chromatography and electrophoresis.] Computer experience helpful but not necessary.) Send resume to Dr. Arnold Schwartz.

GUSTAV AND ELSIE AMLING AWARD PRESENTED FOR THE FIRST TIME

The first annual Gustav and Elsie Amling Investment Award was presented to Mark E. Davis (B.B.A. candidate) on June 12 by Professor of Business Administration and Dean of the School of Government and Business Administration Norma Maine Loeser and Professor of Business Finance Frederick Amling.

The award has been established by Professor Amling in memory of his parents. It will be presented annually to an undergraduate student in the School of Government and Business Administration for the best research paper on investment analysis done as part or his or her course work.

Mark E. Davis, this year's recipient, expects to receive the degree of Bachelor of Business Administration with a major in finance in May of 1986. He has been on the Dean's List each semester that he has been at George Washington. He is a member of the National French Honor Society at GW and, as a freshman, was elected to membership in the freshman scholastic honor society, Phi Eta Sigma. He is associated with the law firm of Lane and Edson, P.C. of Washington, DC, as an accountant.

George Washington University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

1985-86 JENNY McKEAN MOORE LECTURER TO BE RIKA LESSER

Rika Lesser, an award-winning poet and literary translator, has been selected the 1985-86 Jenny McKean Moore Visiting Lecturer. 1985-86 will mark the 10th year of association between the University and the Jenny McKean Moore Fund for Writers.

"Lesser's expertise as a literary translator will bring a new dimension to the offerings of the Jenny McKean Moore programs," says Assistant Professor of English Ann Romines.

The new visiting lecturer has won critical acclaim for her translations of such works as Holding Out (Omaha: Abattoir Editions, 1975), a collection of poetry by the German author Rainer Maria Rilke. She has also translated Hours in the Garden and Other Poems (New York: Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 1975), the poetry of Hermann Hesse. Her translation of the Grimm brothers' picture book, Hansel and Gretel (New York: Dodd, Mead, 1984), illustrated by Paul O. Zelinsky, received a Caldecott Honor for 1984. She is the author of Etruscan Things (Brazillier, 1983), a collection of poetry.

Rika Lesser

Lesser will teach a free creative writing workshop in poetry in the fall semester and will lead a free workshop in the translation of poetry in the spring semester. She will also teach a university course, "Translation: Theory and Practice," in the spring semester.

Professor Lesser studied at Yale University, where she received her bachelor's degree with exceptional distinction in the Scholars in the House Program. She earned her M.F.A. from Columbia University's School of the Arts and has done research at the University of Gothenburg in Sweden.

Fluent in German and Swedish, Lesser has traveled extensively overseas. She received grants from various Finnish and Swedish agencies for research and poetry translation projects during the summers of 1981, 1982 and 1984.

A native of Brooklyn, New York, she has been a poetry workshop instructor at the Poetry Center of the 92nd Street Y in New York City and has taught at Baruch College of the City University of New York and at Yale University.

The recipient of such literary distinctions as the Ingram Merrill Foundation Award (1978-79), the Amy Lowell Poetry Traveling Scholarship and the John Courtney Murray Fellowship, she garnered numerous honors during her undergraduate years as well. She is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, American P.E.N., Poets and Writers and the Academy of American Poets.

CONFERENCE ON RELIGION IN SOUTH INDIA AT GW

The annual meeting of the Conference on Religion in South India will take place at the University from Friday, August 9, through Sunday, August 11. The conference theme is "Criminal Gods and Demon Devotees." Part of the national Festival of India in the United States, the conference will bring together scholars from India, France and Germany as well as from many U.S. universities.

Professor of Religion Alfred J. Hiltebeitel is coordinating the program and will give a paper, "Muttal Ravuttan: Draupadi's Muslim Devotee."

The Friday evening keynote address will be given by Madeleine Birardeau, director of studies, Indian religions, the Sorbonne, who will speak on "Brahmans and Man-eating Gods" in Corcoran Hall, Room 101. All other conference sessions will be held in Room T 204 of the Academic Center.

Further information on the conference is available from the Department of Religion, Ext. 6325.

GW-RED CROSS BLOOD DRIVE TO BE TUESDAY, AUGUST 13

"In one hour, you can be a hero. One hour is all it takes to make a blood donation and each time one of us gives, it helps several people who are critically ill to become well again," says Sandy Lear, director of alumni relations.

The Alumni Relations Office is coordinating the University-sponsored Red Cross Blood Drive scheduled for Tuesday, August 13, between 10 am and 4 pm. The location is Building C, 2201 G Street, NW, Rooms 220 and 222. To expedite processing time, donations are primarily by appointment. However, some walk-ins can be accepted. Please call Ext. 6435 to schedule a time. For answers to questions about donor eligibility, call the Red Cross at 857-3362.

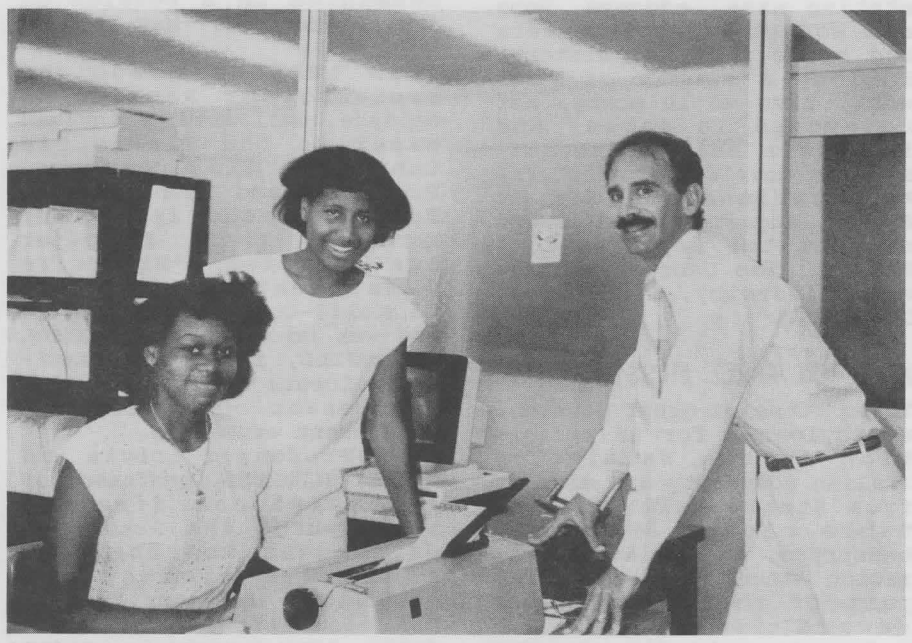
Members of the Alumni Relations Office urge all members of the University community to make a contribution to this worthy effort and remind us that the need for blood never goes on vacation. "We need you," they say, "there is no other source."

GW'S CAREER AWARENESS AND JOB EXPLORATION PROJECT HAS 44 PARTICIPANTS FROM D.C. AREA

With a grant of $26,000 from the District of Columbia Summer Youth Employment Program, the University has provided career education and work experience for 14- and 15-year old students from the District of Columbia through the GW Career Awareness and Work Exploration Project this summer.

Forty-four students from D.C. high schools have been participating in the project coordinated by Jay R. Shotel, assistant dean of the School of Education and Human Development, and William E. Ramsey, project director.

The purpose of the program has been to provide career education experience for the students selected. Participants have received a combination of classroom instruction and work experience designed to increase career awareness and to help develop employable skills. The participants, also called interns, have been assigned to a variety of work sites within the University and the GW Hospital system. Their schedule has included one and a half hours of classroom instruction followed by two and half hours at the work location. Interns have worked four days a week, with one day reserved for community exploration activities planned on a rotating basis. Career counseling sessions have been part of the program, which will conclude in mid-August.



INTERNS Shadonna Logan of All Saints High School, left, and Sharon Gibson of LaReine High School, with Assistant Dean of the School of Education and Human Development Jay R. Shotel. They are working in the office of SEHD Dean Eugene W. Kelly, Jr.

SGBA TO OFFER MASTER'S PROGRAM IN TAXATION IN FALL

The School of Government and Business Administration will offer a program leading to a master's degree in taxation beginning in the fall semester.

The objective of the program is to prepare students for careers as tax professionals in public accounting, private industry and government. Degree candidates must fulfill pre-requisite course requirements and complete a minimum of 33 semester hours of course work. Many classes will be offered in the evening.

According to Professor of Accountancy and Department Chairman Michael G. Gallagher, the program has evolved because of a growing demand for expertise in understanding complex tax law and the important tax consequences attached to many business decisions.

Professor Gallagher notes that the University enjoys an excellent location for such a program. "Few universities can locate a program where the laws are made," he says, citing our proximity to Congress, the U.S. Treasury Department, the Internal Revenue and the headquarters of the U.S. Tax Court.

OPPORTUNITY AT WOODROW WILSON CENTER FOR RESEARCH ASSOCIATES

There is still opportunity for GW graduate students to apply for positions as center research associates at the Woodrow Wilson Center for Scholars in the areas of U.S. and West European history and/or politics. The appointments involve research assistance for a fellow or staff member at the center and the opportunity to participate in special activities and events. For further information on applying, call Andrea Stewart at Ext. 6455.

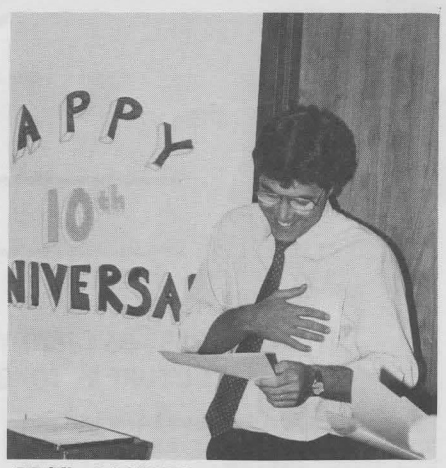
FREE CREATIVE WRITING WORKSHOP IN POETRY

Rika Lesser, 1985-86 Jenny McKean Moore Visiting Lecturer, will teach a free creative writing workshop in poetry during the fall semester. The workshop will meet on Thursdays from 8 to 10 pm from September 5 through December 5.

Applicants need not have academic qualifications. No fees are charged. The workshops are open to all members of the Washington community except registered university students. To apply, please submit a letter stating name, address, home and work telephone numbers and brief personal history. Enclose a sample of your work, five to 10 poems, not to exceed 10 pages, and include a self-addressed, stamped envelope for return. Applications are due by Friday, August 16, and should be sent to: Department of English, The George Washington University, Washington, DC, 20052.

QUERY ON THREE MISSING ITEMS

Three items of great personal worth,loaned for an exhibition on the Washington Italian community are missing from Stuart Hall: a white table cloth; a crochet bedspread; and an Americanization manual from the early part of this century. A reward is offered for information leading to the return of the three. Call Ext. 6073 during office hours.



RICK HASKINS, assistant vice president for development, was surprised by associates with an observance of his 10th anniversary with the University on July 25. He is shown reading a message of good wishes.

MARION DODD IS NEW GW BOOKSTORE MANAGER

A busy person these days is Marion A. Dodd, the new manager of the University Bookstore. She came to the position in late June, succeeding Monroe S. Hurwitz.

"She brings excellent skills and experience in university bookstores, retail operation and personnel management," says Don Runyon, director of auxiliary enterprises.

A graduate of the University of Illinois, where she earned a B.S. in management, she has furthered her professional development through NACS (National Association of College Stores) Management Seminars, Management by Objective Training (MBO) and a Systematic Management Seminar.

She comes to George Washington from the University of Illinois where she was, for the past year, director of university bookstores, with a staff of some 30 people and a sales volume of $6,000,000. Among the initiatives she introduced there were a general merchandise departmentalization in physical layout; computerization of the accounting function; complete computerization of textbooks to absorb all manual functions; the development of overall advertising and promotion; and a financial departmentalization of operations.

Marion Dodd

Prior to her association with the University of Illinois, she was general manager of the three campus bookstores at Montgomery College for three and a half years. Bookstore manager at Howard Community College for nine years, she also worked in all phases of personnel there. At Woodward and Lothrop, for two and a half years, she managed the Christmas Shop in the main store and its 13 branches and was also assistant buyer in the stationary department.

HEALTH FAIR '85 IS SET FOR FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6

Health Fair '85, sponsored by the Department of Human Kinetics and Leisure Studies and the GW Wellness Committee, has been planned as a celebration of the growing importance of "wellness." The fair is scheduled for Friday, September 6, from noon to 3 pm in the main arena of the Charles E. Smith Center.

President Lloyd H. Elliott will open Health Fair '85 at 12 noon. The event will mark the kick-off of the Smith Center's 10th anniversary.

A T'ai Chi demonstration will be presented at 1 pm. Warren Conner, T'ai Chi expert and instructor, will invite anyone who is interested to try out some of the techniques.

The fair will offer free health screening in a variety of areas including height and weight, blood pressure, oral health, lung capacity, vision, foot health, speech, fitness and breast examination. In addition, participants can sample "healthy food," take part in computer learning programs on nutrition and depression, learn about biofeedback and relaxation techniques, view films on health issues and take part in an artbreak, a spontaneous sketching program designed to reduce stress. Personal counseling and informational brochures on a variety of health topics will be available.

The September 6 fair is limited to the GW University community. (Other health fairs are offered to the community at large periodically by the University.) Bring your GW ID for free admission.

For further information, call the Department of Human Kinetics and Leisure Studies, Ext. 6280.

KATZMAN AND WASHINGTON ASSUME NEW POSTS IN SGBA

Marvin Katzman has been named assistant dean for undergraduate programs in the School of Government and Business Administration.

Charles Washington has been appointed assistant dean for graduate programs in the school. Both appointments were effective July 1.

Katzman joined the University in 1978 as a lecturer in business administration. Since 1981, he has been assistant professor of business administration. Co-author of Study Guide to Accompany Management, (sixth edition) with Carlene Sawyer, he has written numerous articles for professional publications. He worked recently as a consultant to the National Science Foundation on a project involving the recruitment of scientists. He has served as an aviator in the U.S. Navy. Professor Katzman earned his B.S. in accounting at the University of Louisville and his M.B.A. and D.B.A. from George Washington. He is active in professional and academic organizations.

Washington came to the University in 1976 as assistant professor of public administration. In 1979, he was named an associate professor and elected chairman of the Department of Public Administration. In 1983, he became assistant dean for undergraduate programs and held this

VICE PRESIDENT FRENCH TO SPEAK AT OPENING CONVOCATION

Vice President for Academic Affairs Roderick S. French will be the keynote speaker at the September 2 Opening Convocation scheduled for 1:30 p.m. in the Marvin Center Theatre. His subject will be "The Crisis in Higher Education: An Alternate Reading."

President Lloyd H. Elliott will make brief remarks as will Ira Gubernick, president of the GW Student Association; Professor of Philosophy William B. Griffith, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Faculty Senate; and John R. Manning, president of the General Alumni Association. Ameer Alibabaie, president of the International Student Society, will read a selection from Alan Paton's book Cry the Beloved Country. Lynn Hertel, who has been designated Barry Manilow Scholar in Music for this year, will perform "Syrinx," a composition for flute by Debussy. Rabbi Gerald Serotta, chairman of the University's Board of Chaplains, will give the invocation and benediction at the convocation. Ronald W. Howard, associate director of alumni relations, is serving as chairman of a 10-member committee for the event.

The convocation, which will last one hour, is open to all members of the University community.

LABOR DAY FESTIVAL 1985 TO OFFER VARIED ACTIVITIES

On Labor Day, Monday, September 2, everyone on campus can enjoy a barbecue, visit an activities fair, watch a parade, attend the Opening Convocation, and enjoy the Program Board Extravaganza.

From 11:30 to 1:30 there will be a Barbecue on the Block at the corner of 21st and H Streets, with unlimited service for a charge of $2.

At the same hours, the Project Visibility Activities Fair will take place along 21st Street, between H and I Streets, featuring displays and membership information provided by dozens of campus organizations.

The Fife and Drum Corps Parade and color-guard presentation by the GW NROTC Battalion is scheduled for 12:30 to 1:15 pm. The John Hanson Fife and Drum Corps of Prince George's County, Maryland, will move from Mitchell Hall on 19th Street through the campus to Lisner Auditorium where the corps will give a short concert at approximately 1 pm. The GW NROTC Battalion will be in formation there and the two units will lead the Academic Procession to the Marvin Center for the Opening Convocation.

Dr. Roderick S. French, vice president for academic affairs, will be the keynote speaker at the 1:30 pm convocation.

From 2:30 to 6 pm, the Program Board Extravaganza will offer free music and refreshments and a carnival-type atmosphere with rides and entertainment.

In the event of rain, all events will be held in the Marvin Center.

Everyone in the University community is invited to Labor Day Festival 1985. Except for the barbecue, all the events are free. The festival has been planned with the goal of opening the 1986-86 academic year with a program bringing together all elements of the University community.

CHEMISTRY DEPARTMENT INTERNS l to r, Vivian Lin, Cathy Carson and David Loh stand in one of the labs in which they conducted three weeks of research. They were three out of 65 student participants in the Admiral H.G. Rickover Science Institute's Summer Program. Established in 1984, the program is offered to students starting their senior year in high school who have demonstrated academic excellence in mathematics, the sciences and verbal skills. The students spend three out of the six weeks interning at research sites throughout the Washington, D.C. area. George Washington University was a participating site this year with Professors of Chemistry Michael M. King and Edward A. Caress and Assistant Research Professor of Chemistry William A. Lowenbach as advisors.

responsibility until July 1. Before coming to George Washington, he was associated with Syracuse University, Florida Atlantic University and the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations. The author of articles in the areas of public and urban administration and intergovernmental relations, Professor Washington has participated and held office in many professional organizations in public administration. He has presented numerous papers at seminars and conferences, both national and international. He is the managing editor of Public Budgeting and Finance, a professional public administration journal. Washington earned his A.A. from Hampton Junior College, Ocala, Florida; his B.A. and M.P.A. from Florida Atlantic University; and his Ph.D. from Syracuse University's Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs. He is an ordained deacon in the Mt. Olive Baptist Church, Arlington, Virginia.

DIANE DePALMA APPOINTED COUNSELING CENTER DIRECTOR

Dr. Diane M. DePalma has succeeded Dr. E. Lakin Phillips as director of the University Counseling Center. Her appointment was effective July 1.

Dr. DePalma had been assistant director of the center since August, 1980, and has held an appointment as assistant clinical professor of psychology in the University's Psychology Department since December 1983. She holds a Bachelor's degree from St. Peter's College and a master's degree and a doctorate in clinical psychology from the University of Rochester. In addition, she completed a two-year post-doctoral study at the University of Rochester Medical Center.

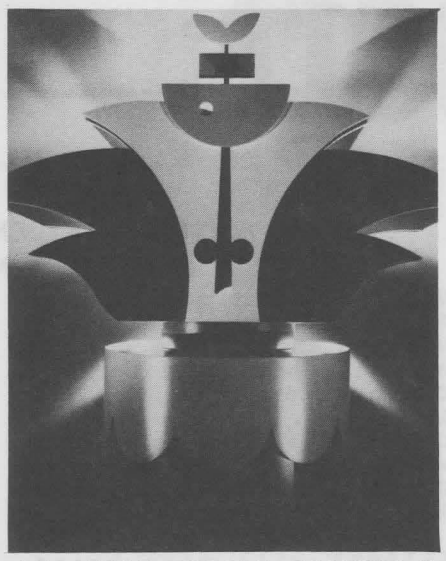
U&RP STUDENT PARTICIPATES IN DESIGN PLAN FOR ALEXANDRIA

Wendy Simmons, a second-year master's candidate in urban and regional planning, was one of 12 students from around the country who participated in a design and marketing planning project for the Alexandria King Street Metro station this summer.

The two-week intensive program, headquarted at the University of Virginia's Blandy Farm near Winchester, was sponsored by EDAW, Inc., a national landscape architecture and environmental planning firm.

Stephen Fuller, professor of urban and regional planning, directed this year's summer project. "The program provided excellent training for students," he explained, and after the work is completed, the students spend the rest of the summer working in one of EDAW's seven offices throughout the country, he added. Simmons has been working in EDAW's Alexandria office.

This year marked the first time that the five-year-old program was held on the east coast. Simmons was selected from a group of more than 60 students nationwide. After graduation in December 1986, she plans to pursue a career in urban design and planning.



"PRAIRIE SCHOOL COLUMNS," (detail) by Muller & Brown in COLORCORE (R) is one of the 11 works in the Dimock Gallery's current exhibition, "Surface and Ornament," which continues through Friday, August 30. Hours are 10 am to 5 pm.

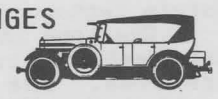
GRANT OPPORTUNITIES

The Department of Defense (DOD) is accepting applications for its program to upgrade research instrumentation; deadline for applications is Friday, November 15. DOD plans to award $30 million in fiscal year 1986 for the purchase of research equipment in such scientific fields as the life sciences, environmental sciences, engineering, chemistry and physics. Awards will range from $50,000 to $1 million.

The Office of Naval Research and the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency have issued an announcement aimed at identifying competitive sources for research in: 1) development of integrated interfaces for human interactions with computers; and 2) planning in dynamic environments.

For further information, contact Helen Spencer in the Office of Sponsored Research, Ext. 6255.

PARKING CHANGES



Temporary summer on-campus parking arrangements ended last Friday, August 23. Beginning today, Monday, August 26, parking at the Kennedy Center will be available to those staff members who have the proper decal displayed and the proper pre-paid parking tickets. Those staff members who are interested in Kennedy Center parking should go to the Parking Office where the appropriate information is available. New decals will be required except for those staff members who have a summer-only occasional decal for the University Garage.

PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

JONATHAN D. FIFE, professor of education, served as a distinguished visiting scholar at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Campus, April 25-26. He delivered a formal open-university lecture entitled, "Collaboration, Information Resources and Educational Clearinghouses"; delivered separate seminars for graduate students and the faculty at Teachers College on the "Past, Present, and Future of Higher Education Administration Program"; and had separate conferences with President Arnold W. Roskens, and Alan T. Seagren, vice president for administration of the University of Nebraska, Central Administration System Office.

He served on the pre-screening jury for the 1985 Professor of the Year award on June 16. The winner of this competition will be presented with the grand gold medal award from the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. The award includes $5,000.

MARY FOULKES, research assistant professor of statistics, and JOHN LACHIN, research professor of statistics, presented a paper, "Sample size determination for survival with non-uniform patient entry, losses to follow up, non-compliance and stratification," at the annual meeting of the Society for Clinical Trials, New Orleans, May 12-15.

LAURA FRANKLIN, Ph.D. candidate in Romance Languages, made an educational trip to Brazil, May 19-29. She read a paper, "Duas Indias Romanticas: Uma Comparacão estilistica e tematica de Iracena de José de Alencar e Atala de Chateaubriand" at the Centro de Letras e Artes da Universidade Federal do Pará. She also spoke to a group of faculty and students at the Centro de Estudos Superiores do Estado do Pará about the respective programs of that university and George Washington. During this last discussion, a Brazilian student gave Mrs. Franklin a copy of her work, "Myths and Legends of the Amazon" which she wished to have donated to the George Washington University library.

MURLI M. GUPTA, associate professor of mathematics, attended the Second SIAM Conference on Applied Linear Algebra at Raleigh, N.C., April 29-May 2. He presented a paper, "A Spectrum Enveloping Algorithm for Solving Central Difference Approximations of Convection Diffusion Equations." On May 17 and 18, he participated as a judge at the Second National Competition of MATHCOUNTS in Washington. MATHCOUNTS is a national mathematics competition for 7th and 8th grade students.

BOARD CHAIRMAN WILKINSON DIES

Glen A. Wilkinson, chairman of the University's Board of Trustees since 1978, died on Thursday, August 29, in Sibley Hospital. He was 74.

President Lloyd H. Elliott said, "In his quiet, dignified way, Glen Wilkinson provided the highest quality of leadership for George Washington University, and gave outstanding service to his profession and our community. He was a devoted friend and his loss will be deeply felt."

Nominated by the General Alumni Association, he became a member of the University's Board in 1975. He served first as a member and then as chairman of the Board Committee on Academic Affairs. He was elected Chairman of the Board in 1978 and had served continuously since that time.

Born in Ogden, Utah, April 17, 1911, Chairman Wilkinson attended public schools in Ogden and Weber County and was graduated from Ogden High School. He received the degree of Bachelor of Science from Brigham Young University in 1934, with a major in journalism and economics. He financed his undergraduate education by working as a stenographer and later as a newspaper reporter on campus activities for Utah and Colorado papers. He received a scholarship to attend New York University, where he stayed for a year, going to classes at night and working during the day in real estate management. At the end of that year, he came to Washington to attend George Washington University Law School.

He received the degree of Juris Doctor with honors from George Washington in 1938. While attending law school classes at night, he worked as an accountant at the Bureau of Reclamation of the Department of Interior and for a year thereafter until 1939. Then he was appointed law clerk for a year to Board Member Sole at the Board of Tax Appeals of the District of Columbia. In 1940, he was appointed assistant corporation counsel for the District of Columbia, a post he held until June of 1942, when he entered the Army of the United States as a second lieutenant. He served until 1946, when he was awarded the Legion of Merit and separated from military duty with the rank of lieutenant colonel. He had served with a special intelligence unit in the Pentagon, in England, (where he was liaison officer with a British intelligence unit) and finally in France.

Immediately following his military service, he re-entered the practice of law in association with Ernest L. Wilkinson (a brother) in 1946, and, in 1951, he joined in establishing the law firm of Wilkinson, Boyden & Cragun, now called Wilkinson, Barker, Knauer & Quinn. At the time of his death he was of counsel to the firm.

JULIE MANGIS APPOINTED TO COLUMBIAN COLLEGE POST

Dean Clara Lovett of Columbian College has appointed Julie Mangis as coordinator of alumni affairs for the college. Mrs. Mangis will be working closely with the board of the newly formed Columbian College Alumni Association. She officially joins Columbian College today, September 9.

Julie Mangis began her association with the University in 1960 as a freshman. She served in an advisory capacity to the George Washington chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma in the 1960s and 1970s. In the past year, she has been a career information coordinator in GW's Career Services Center, providing job search and career planning information to GW students and alumni. After an interruption of some years, she completed the work for her degree and received a Bachelor of Arts with a major in political science from Columbian College in 1984.

A Foreign Service wife, Julie has lived in Rio de Janiero, Paris and Caracas. She brings to her new position experience in the leadership of community groups, having served as president or chairman of five groups here and abroad. She has also chaired such diverse events as an art show for METRO's Orange Line opening, a regional convention for the Kappas, and a benefit ball in Paris to raise scholarship money for French women to study in the United States. From 1967 to 1970, she was a banquet manager at Washington's Shoreham Hotel where she planned and carried out the arrangements for local and national association meetings as well as social functions.

In addition to her work with organizing groups and events, Julie has edited several newsletters and is the author of chapters in three books for young people published by the editors of Army Times. She enjoys French cooking, which she studied at the Ecole Hoteliere Jean Drouant in Paris, and classical music, especially opera. In 1982, she was awarded a Department of State Tribute of Appreciation for her volunteer work abroad. She can be reached at Ext. 6130.

VICE PRESIDENT FRENCH RESPONDS TO CRITICS OF HIGHER EDUCATION

"The passion for excellence must be embedded in a vision of wholeness. Great research requires rigor but also vision. Great teaching requires competence and high standards, but also character and understanding. This is a university. We of all places should locate our drive for disciplinary excellence in a conception that stresses the connectedness of knowledge and life," Vice President Roderick French told his listeners at the September 2 Opening Convocation in the Marvin Theatre.

In an address titled, "The Crisis in Higher Education: An Alternate Reading," Dr. French took issue with many current criticisms of higher education.

Noting the large number of reports on what is wrong with education in America in recent years, he commented, "There has been no shortage of doctors to diagnose our diseases." He observed that today's critics stress the social failure of schools and colleges, having much to say about the personnel needs for high national productivity and rather little to say about personal needs of students for rich and satisfying lives in contrast to the critics of the 1960s who averred that universities were failing the individual student in his/her needs for self-realization. He said he found the prescriptions in the various reports rather easily summarized in a set of code words: "excellence, quality, standards, basics (as in back to), coherence, integrity and national interest."

"I do not propose to bore you with a review of this literature," he went on. "Intrinsically it does not warrant your time or mine ... but it is exceedingly interesting as a collective

ALUMNI ACHIEVEMENT AWARDS NOMINATIONS DUE

Friday, September 20, is the last date nominations for Alumni Achievement Awards can be received for consideration by the Alumni Awards Committee for awards to be presented in February 1986.

The purpose of the awards is to honor those alumni who have an earned degree from the University and who have attained notable achievement in their field or fields of endeavor. The Alumni Awards Committee would welcome assistance in having brought to its attention any alumni who merit consideration. Forms and further information on making nominations are available from the Alumni Relations Office. There is a need for as much supporting information about nominees as possible. Nominations should be addressed to the Alumni House, The George Washington University, Washington, D.C. 20052, Attention: Alumni Awards Committee.

Chairman Wilkinson's practice of law spanned a number of fields including litigation in communications, appeals from FCC rulings, Indian tribal claims cases, tax and government contracts cases, general legal work for American Indian tribes, and legal work in criminal and other cases before the United States Supreme Court. He was engaged, in the 1970s, in considerable activity on legislation before the Congress, including work on behalf of the American Association of Presidents of Independent Colleges and Universities. His law practice was regarded by many as especially noteworthy for his work on behalf of American Indian tribes and clients in the broadcasting field.

Active in GW alumni affairs, he was a past president of the GW Law Association and had served as a member of the GW General Alumni Association Governing Board. In 1965, he received an Alumni Achievement Award from the University, and in 1973, a General Alumni Association Service Award. In 1978, he was honored with the Distinguished Alumnus Award of the GW Law Association.

A member of the American Bar Association, the Federal Bar Association and other legal groups, he served as chairman of several committees of the Bar Association of the District of Columbia.

He is survived by Mrs. Wilkinson, the former Katherine McKinnon of Brunswick, Georgia; four sons: Frederick McKinnon of Fort Bragg, California; Malcolm Glen of Baltimore, Maryland; Richard Claude of Atlanta, Georgia; and Charles Symmes of Chevy Chase, Maryland; a brother, Woodrow A. Wilkinson of Salt Lake City, Utah; and five grandchildren.

The family requested that in lieu of flowers, gifts be made to the Glen A. Wilkinson Fund at the University. Gifts may be sent to Room 701, Gelman Library.

NOTE ON SMITH CENTER FLOORS

Over the summer, the floors of the two gymnasiums in the Charles E. Smith Center, both the main arena and the auxiliary gymnasium, have received expensive and painstaking resurfacing. Because of this, the following policy has been established in the Smith Center: No street shoes, running shoes, cleated shoes or waffle-type soles will be allowed in the playing areas. This policy will apply to the main arena and the auxiliary gymnasium. Smith Center Director John Harper asks everyone's cooperation in helping to protect the floors and to preserve their safety and function.

expression of contemporary political anxieties and the translation of those anxieties into a misguided agenda for educational reform."

Identifying what he called, "a kind of neurotic obsession with quality," French told his audience, "Quality is a goal to be pursued for the sake of the lives of those who are to be educated and for the good of the society that makes it possible. Neither is quality in a university something produced by faculty independent of the contribution of students," he declared. "Students by virtue of the motivation and the preparation they bring to the transactions of education set the limits of excellence at every institution."

"If we are really committed to achieving national excellence in higher education, then we must renew our commitment to equality of access to quality education at every level," he stated. Terming the various reports' "prescriptions" for the attainment of higher quality "almost unanimously uninspired," he disagreed strongly with the emphasis on content or basics of the reports, stating, "Little is said about the quality of the actual experience of teaching and learning." He deplored the emphasis on subject matter without the spirit of inquiry, saying "The implication is that American culture no longer has the resilience to assimilate new elements."

"In their overreaction to vocationalism, the authors of these reports seem never to have grasped the concept of a liberal professional education," he continued. "This is what I believe we should strive to create at GW ... We of the faculty will do our best both to seduce you and to force you to educate yourselves beyond the boundaries of your immediate interests," Dr. French said to the students.

In further discussion of the Back to Basics group, he said, "They are retrospective without historical foundation. They want to return to a period that never was. (Their) antipathy for the 1960s has led them to posit a false opposition between innovative and traditional education. It would be disastrous for GW to act on that proposition. Great colleges and universities with strong traditions are perpetually changing. Their changes become the norms for institutions that lack a strong sense of identity. GW has changed dramatically over the last century and one half, and we are all the beneficiaries of that fact. I would wager ... In the year 2000, those institutions that will display the most continuity with the essence of the great liberal university tradition will not be those which have turned back to reclaim an idealized and therefore irrevocable past, but those which have bent every effort to constructively adapt to the demands of the present and the challenge of future. To do so is not to abandon the tradition. That is the tradition of the university in the west."

Vice President French said he had learned in the last week that a group of citizens, whom he called "vigilantes," nervous about what goes on in universities, plans to invade our classes this fall. He

A.F. ROCCO GRANDE BECOMES SECURITY CAPTAIN

Captain A. F. Rocco Grande, right, with Director of Safety and Security Curtis W. Goode.

Anthony F. Rocco Grande has been appointed captain in the Office of Safety and Security. He assumed his new post September 1, succeeding Captain Prentice Jones who retired in May of this year.

Captain Rocco Grande joined Safety and Security in May of 1982 as a lieutenant and since that time has handled a wide variety of responsibilities in security work at the University. He was in charge of security arrangements on separate occasions for President Fernando Belaunde-Terry of Peru, for Presidential Candidate Walter Mondale and for U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren Burger when they came to campus. He also handled the security detail both last year and this year when ABC's network program "Nightline" originated from the Marvin Theatre.

The new captain was a member of the Metropolitan Police Department of Washington, D. C. from 1961 to 1981. He has had experience in every facet of police work in the District of Columbia. He worked with the Field Operations Division, 5th Precinct; with a Special Operations Division; with the Field Operations Bureau as 7th District Field Supervisor; and with the Criminal Investigations Unit. From 1978 through 1981, he was supervisor of the Communications Division on the midnight tour of duty. He was commended for working 72 hours without relief during the blizzard of 1979 which crippled the city.

A resident of Camp Springs, Maryland, he is married and the father of a boy, 10, and a girl, 8. He enjoys reading, weightlifting, tennis and water skiing.

was referring to a group called Accuracy in Academia. "It is essential that we, above all other institutions, retain a shared confidence in our enterprise because we are uniquely situated to exemplify the role of the university in a free society," he concluded.

President Elliott, in brief remarks, said, "Our goal is not modest. We expect GW to be one of the greatest universities in the world within the shortest possible time. To that end, I invite both students and faculty and all alumni and friends of the institution to devote their interest and best efforts." He spoke with pride of 70 fine new faculty members.

Professor of Philosophy William B. Griffith, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Faculty Senate, said, in greeting the students, "We hope this will be the year you fall in love -- with mathematics, with literature, or even philosophy."

John R. Manning, General Alumni Association President, noting that we live in an age of high tech and that he believes it began with the transistor in the 1940s, and continued with the copying machine and the computer, told the students, "If you are a reader and a printer (with copying machines) and an author (using computers), the university will make you a scholar."

GW Student Association President Ira Gubernick spoke of two separate issues: the University's commitment that the Dean's Council consider the implementation of interschool majors and minors; and his concern that the university consider divestiture of any investments in South Africa. He said he felt the racial discrimination in South Africa now is the antithesis of what we stand for as a university. He commented, "Working for a university in any capacity is one of the most admirable occupations in the world." (Dr. French, who spoke last, acknowledged Gubernick's comment and stated that new provisions for interschool fields of study are now being developed by the deans.)

Omicron Delta Kappa President Catherine M. Topper of the class of 1986, introduced the speakers. The GW NROTC Color Guard led the academic procession into the Marvin Center.

HEALTH FAIR '85 DRAWS NEARLY 300 PARTICIPANTS

AT THE HEALTH FAIR -- Dr. Sheldon Konecke, D.P.M., gave a foot health screening to Craig Voise, a graduate student in exercise science, who works as a medical technician in the Obstetrics and Gynecology Laboratory in Ross Hall. A runner, Voise had just returned from Reykjavik, Iceland, where he ran in a marathon.

"Wellness is something about which we, as individuals, can do something," President Lloyd Elliott said at the opening of Health Fair '85, September 6 in the Smith Center.

"I'd like to suggest that we try this year to do one thing -- make GW a healthier place to live and work than it was last year and then make further progress next year," he went on. Dr.Elliott noted that the fair was the first event of those planned for the 10th anniversary of the Smith Center and commented, "We wonder how we got along without it and now it's used so much we need a second Smith Center."

The fair, sponsored by the George Washington University Wellness Committee and the Department of Human Kinetics and Leisure Studies (HKLS) drew nearly 300 participants. Among those who had a major part in the success of the event were Jeanne Snodgrass, professor and chairman of Human Kinetics and Leisure Studies, and Katharina Grande, research assistant for special projects in HKLS, who served as coordinator for the health fair. There were 32 separate stations or booths at the fair, offering a wide variety of opportunities for checking, screening and obtaining information.

GW TO HOST CONFERENCE ON LATIN AMERICAN BUSINESS

"Business Management in Latin America" will be the focus of a conference at the University, September 19 through 21. Sponsored by the School of Government and Business Administration and the Business Association of Latin American Studies (BALAS), the conference will take place in the Marvin Center.

Experts from the United States and six Latin American countries will take part in the conference, discussing current practices in Latin American business and examining future opportunities. Major topics of discussion will include counter trade, energy, technology and financial issues.

An international teleconference on Friday, September 20, at 1 pm will bring together Latin American and U.S. oil company executives via satellite. The two-hour session will be devoted to discussion of alternative energy sources and the attainment of maximum productivity in oil production.

GWTV (George Washington University Television) will produce the audio and video transmission of the teleconference, which will link a panel discussion at GW with a simultaneous symposium at the School of Business Administration (ESAN) in Lima, Peru.

Those with a special interest are welcome to attend. There will be registration at the Marvin Center. For more information on the conference, call Catherine Seller at Ext. 6300.

FELLOWSHIP INFORMATION MEETINGS

Fellowship information meetings to acquaint students with the various fellowship and grant opportunities available to them will be held on Wednesday, September 18, and Friday, September 20, Fellowship Coordinator Avery Andrews informs us.

The September 18 meeting will be held at 5:30 pm in Marvin Center, Room 415. The September 20 meeting will be at 3 pm in Marvin Center, Rooms 410-415.

Preliminary information on the national fellowships is available from the Information Desk at the Gelman Library (1st floor) or students can call Ext. 6217 for an appointment to discuss one or more of the awards.

DEVELOPING DIRECTIONS OUTLINED AT FACULTY ASSEMBLY

The 1986 freshman class will be smaller than this year's and admission standards will begin to be raised, those attending the September 5 Faculty Assembly learned.

Vice President for Academic Affairs Roderick French said, in the course of his remarks at the assembly, "Beginning with the fall of 1986, we will inaugurate an enrollment policy that will essentially stabilize the size of the undergraduate population ... the number of entering students in 1986 may well be 20 percent fewer than this year's class. A task force in the central administration is working on broad undergraduate enrollment goals for our various schools and colleges. Deans and faculties may set internal program limits as those are called for. One implication of this policy is that our admission standards will be raised, perhaps significantly in some schools. We will become known to prospective students as an even more selective institution."

Dr. French called attention to the need for the University to be more representative of the diversity of American society both in the student body and the faculty. He noted that growing numbers of black and Hispanic young people are finishing high school while the number going on to college is declining and stated that extraordinary measures both in admissions and financial aid will be needed to bring more of these talented young people to the University. He said he will be asking the deans, and through them the departments, to renew their commitment to affirmative recruiting in the coming year.

Commenting on the issue of conflict of interest with regard to faculty members' professional activities beyond the campus, the vice president stated he will be following the Faculty Senate discussion of this matter and will be talking with the Council of Deans about the development of new guidelines and new forms of disclosure in this area.

He outlined the progress made in the last year by the Office of Sponsored Research in supporting faculty applications for grants and contracts and urged faculty members to take advantage of the services available. The office has subscribed to a computer service called SPIN (Service Information Research Network) which gives information on government and private support for sponsored research. Several awards have already been received in response to proposals submitted to sponsors identified through SPIN.

A survey of all existing research "centers" or "institutes" on campus has begun, French told the assembly and outlined the review procedures set up for them. Faculty members who wish to establish a new organized research unit should submit requests to his office, he said, for review with the Vice President for Research and Administration and forwarding to the President.

GW WORKS WITH D.C. PUBLIC SCHOOLS IN MATH AND SCIENCE

D.C. TEACHER Mrs. Eva G. Donaldson of Ballou Senior High School, left, with Dr. Holliday Wagner, coordinator of the GW Program for D.C. Public School Teachers in Math and Science

A group of 10 teachers from District of Columbia Public Schools are enrolled in mathematics and science courses at the University.

With the desire to contribute to the strengthening of the mathematics and science programs of the D.C. Public Schools, George Washington offered tuition remission to selected math and science teachers for regular courses in these subjects. Under the program, the University will be granting 10 one-course tuition awards each fall and spring semester to teachers chosen by the D.C. Schools. A teacher may be selected for no more than one semester.

There are six science teachers in the program and four math teachers. The teachers come from McKinley Senior High, Dunbar Senior High, Ballou Senior High (3), Wilson Senior High, Jefferson Junior High, Calvin Coolidge Senior High and Fletcher Johnson Education Center (prekindergarten through 8th grade).

Assistant Dean for Special Programs, Columbian College of Arts and Sciences, Holliday Wagner is coordinating the program. Associate Professor of Education Dennis Holmes assisted the teachers in selecting their courses.

PROFESSOR EMERITUS CRANE DIES, MEMORIAL SERVICE THIS FRIDAY

Professor Emeritus of English Milton Crane died August 12 at the Washington Home. There will be a memorial service for Dr. Crane on Friday, September 20, at 12:30 pm in the Marvin Theatre.

Dr. Crane had been a member of the university's part-time teaching staff since the 1950s and became a full-time member of the faculty in September, 1964. He had previously taught at the College of William and Mary, Hunter College and the University of Chicago. At the University, he served as a member of the Faculty Senate from 1971 to 1973. Dr. Crane retired in 1975 because of ill health. He was awarded emeritus status in May of 1976.

Born in Hartford, Connecticut, he was graduated from Columbia University and earned his doctorate in English at Harvard University. He moved to Washington in the early 1940s and joined the Office of Strategic Services, the World War II predecessor of the Central Intelligence Agency. He worked at the Bureau of Intelligence and Research at the State Department from 1952 to 1964.

Professor Crane specialized in Shakespearean literature. He was the author of the book, Shakespeare's Prose. He edited a number of anthologies including 50 Great Short Stories, 50 Great American Short Stories and The Roosevelt Era. He is survived by two sons: John T. of New York City; Peter G. of Chevy Chase; and one granddaughter.

FACULTY ASSEMBLY

In a progress report on the George Washington University seminars, Dr. French said the first one, on the subject of socio-economics, led by University Professor Etzioni, has been meeting since January. He added that the seminar on ancient Mediterranean cultures, led by Professors Robert Jones, Elizabeth Fisher, Ormond Seavey and John Ziolkowski, held its organizational meeting in the spring and will start regular sessions next month. Other seminars are under consideration. "The program is taking root," he observed.

At the beginning of his remarks, Dr. French made the announcement that a new system for the assignment of class times and the allocation of classrooms will go into effect later this month and that, as of the 1986 fall semester, all classes (except those in law and medicine) will be required to meet in one of the new authorized time bands. He affirmed that he believes there will be "long-run benefits" to the new system.

President Lloyd Elliott, in brief remarks, told the assembly that the final report of the Commission for the Year 2000 was accepted by unanimous resolution at the Board of Trustees' May meeting and commended to the administration and faculty for working out details and establishing priorities. He noted that a major recommendation of the Commission calls for a coordinated planning process and stated, "This means financing and facilities must be planned alongside academic programs and the planning process must also provide for an orderly consideration of the Commission's recommendations and the opportunity to weigh all points of view." He said that during the summer a small group of key people has been working on the required organizational structure and that their tentative proposal will be reviewed by the Executive Committee of the Faculty Senate, the deans and others during the next two weeks. "By October 1, we anticipate having an appropriate organization in place which will, among other things, provide for faculty involvement at all levels of the planning process," he announced.

EVENING READING SERIES OPENS

Rika Lesser, 1985-86 Jenny McKean Moore Visiting Lecturer in Creative Writing, will open the university's Evening Reading Series this Thursday, September 19, at 8 pm, in Room B-120 of the Academic Center. The series is sponsored by the English Department, with this Thursday's presentation co-sponsored by the Columbian College Alumni Association.

WOMEN'S STUDIES TO HOST MEETING ON PLACEMENTS

The Women's Studies Program and Policy Center is hosting a meeting about its spring semester paid field placements that train women as policy makers on Thursday, September 19, from 4 to 6 pm in Alumni House, 714 21st Street, NW.

Susan J. Tolchin, professor of public administration, School of Government and Business Administration, will speak briefly on "Who Does It? Demystifying the Policy Process." Students interested in applying for the field placement and practicum will be able to chat with project staff and former interns over wine and cheese. For more information, call Dr. Roberta Spalter-Roth, Ext. 6942.

WEIGHT MANAGEMENT PROGRAM TO BEGIN

On Wednesday, September 18, there will be a Weight-Management Program Orientation beginning at 12 noon in Building K, 817 - 23rd Street. The program, sponsored by the Department of Human Kinetics and Leisure Studies, consists of procedures to improve physical and mental health as well as to correct weight problems. The program seeks to strengthen an individual's resolve and motivation and to modify behavior in eating and exercise patterns.

WASHINGTON AREA INVITATIONAL EXHIBITION IN DIMOCK GALLERY

An exhibition of works in various media by Washington area artists will be on view in GW's Dimock Gallery through October 4. Titled "Tradition and Innovation: A Washington Area Invitational Exhibition," the show marks the re-instituting of regularly scheduled area invitational shows at GW. Washington area exhibitions were frequently presented at the Dimock in the 1960s, and the gallery is proud to continue this tradition with its opening exhibition for the year 1985-86.

The show includes painting, sculpture and mixed media pieces which make references to past artistic trends and other cultures. The works reflect technical, aesthetic and spiritual ties to civilizations as remote as the Shang Dynasty in China (circa 1350 B.C.), as well as to American art history of this century.

Artists represented in the exhibition include: Benita Berman, Michael Clark, Leslie Exton, Susan Firestone, Fred Folsom, Gary Irby, Leslie Kuter, Anne Marchand, Jerry Monteith, Tom Nakashima, Thach Nguyen, Carolyn Orner, Maria Velez, William Willis and Lenore Winters.

The Dimock Gallery, off the lower lounge of Lisner Auditorium, is open from 10 am to 5 pm weekdays.

NEW FACULTY MEMBERS Deloris Saunders, left, assistant professor of education, and Cynthia Rohrbeck, assistant professor of psychology, were welcomed by Roderic Davison, professor of European history, at the September 12 Friends of the University Libraries reception.

A selection of books and articles by faculty members is on exhibit in the Gelman Library first floor with the title "Scholarly Vitality, Research and Creativity." The exhibit will run through Saturday, October 12.

The faculty works are shown at several locations on the first floor as well as in the windows on the building's H Street side. There is a listing of works by faculty members which were published in calendar year 1984 on the Faculty Publications Database in Gelman's Special Collections Department. The titles listed were provided by department chairmen for the University Archives (Special Collections) in response to an August query.

"I think it's fitting that we recognize some of the scholarly works of our ongoing faculty, that we honor our own," commented Friends of the University Libraries President Gail Hanson in informal remarks at the September 12 reception which opened the exhibit, sponsored jointly by the Friends and the Faculty Senate Committee on Research. New faculty members were special guests at the reception.

Professor of Classics John Ziolkowski, chairman of the Faculty Senate Committee on Research, noted that this is the fourth annual exhibition of faculty works and said, "The Senate Committee recommended this in 1982. We started off with a modest display of 36 books and about 26 articles over a three-year period. I understand this year we are doing much better. We have 160 authors represented." He spoke with appreciation of the work of Margaret Trexler, assistant vice president for faculty personnel and academic publications, in preparing bibliographies of faculty works, compiled through extensive research, which, he said she had done "almost single-handedly."

University Librarian Sharon Rogers, speaking of the Faculty Publications Database, said, "Only the data for 1984 is presently in the database but now we have the capability of going back and including the work that Margaret Trexler did in earlier years. While we know the data base is incomplete at this point, we do intend to have it as comprehensive as possible." She told those attending the reception, "Our subject specialists are here today. This is a new program for Gelman Library where all of our professional staff have assignments as subject specialists -- of liaison with various departments and programs on campus and I hope you'll find these people, the ones that work with your programs."

GW COMMITTEE ON MEDICINE, SOCIETY, ETHICS ESTABLISHED

A University Committee on Medicine, Society and Ethics has been established with Professor Jonathan Moreno as chairman. At the same time, Professor Moreno has received a joint faculty appointment as associate professor of philosophy and health care sciences.

Committee members for the 1985-86 academic year are: Mary Ann Baily, adjunct associate professor of economics, who also has a joint appointment in the Department of Health Care Sciences; Kurt Darr, professor of health services administration and of health care sciences; Elizabeth Herz, associate clinical professor of obstetrics and gynecology and of psychiatry and behavioral sciences; Michael M. King, professor of chemistry; Joanne Lynn, assistant clinical professor of health care sciences and of medicine; Gail Povar, associate professor of health care sciences and of medicine; and Harry E. Yeide Jr., professor of religion.

Vice President for Academic Affairs Roderick French, commenting on the formation of the committee, said, "Dean Lovett and Dean Bowles and Dr. Ott are to be commended for making this possible in institutional terms. Substantial inter-school academic programs are among the most difficult from an organizational point of view. Modern medical practice and modern medical research are clearly inter-disciplinary both in

FRANCIS CONLON IN CONCERT

Francis Conlon, pianist, adjunct assistant professor of music, will appear in a concert on Monday, September 30, at 8 pm in the Marvin Center Theatre. His appearance is the first in the fall's Faculty Concert Series, sponsored by the Music Department.

He will perform works of Mozart, Beethoven, Chopin, Ravel, Schumann and Liszt. Tickets, available at the door, will be: $4, general admission; $2, GW faculty, alumni and staff; and $1, students and senior citizens.

COMMITTEE SEEKS HISPANICS FOR PHOTO

In connection with the upcoming Hispanic Heritage Week activities (October 10 through 17), the GW Committee on Historical Observances plans to photograph a small group of University faculty, administrators and staff members of Hispanic background.

If you are interested in being a part of this photograph, please telephone Ms. Denise Jones in the Equal Employment Activities Office, Ext. 7402, by 4 pm on Wednesday, September 25.

FOREIGN SERVICE HISTORY CENTER OPENS AT GELMAN

The University has established a new research center to collect the oral histories of the men and women, in the private as well as the public sectors, who have had an involvement in American foreign affairs since the end of World War II. It will also be collecting the private papers of such Americans, which should be useful to historians of foreign relations. The center is called the Foreign Service History Center and is an adjunct of the Gelman Library.

"Although specialized oral history projects exist concentrating on certain events, such as the Viet Nam War, the Iranian crisis or a Presidency, there is presently no long-term oral history program to document America's participation in world affairs since 1945," says Charles S. Kennedy, one of the center's two managing directors.

"Of prime interest to the center is the fact that each year scores of professional Foreign Service Officers (FSOs) retire without leaving any record of their experiences and insights on often significant episodes in the history of the foreign relations of the United States," observes Victor Wolf Jr., the other managing director. Both Kennedy and Wolf are retired FSOs.

The center will concentrate initially on men and women of the Foreign Service who were involved in areas of particular interest to the various faculties of the University. As the program expands, the center will also collect oral histories and papers from significant groups of Americans in the private sector who have served abroad, for example oil company executives in the Middle East, missionaries in the Far East, AID contractors in Africa, and businessmen in Latin America.

The concept of this oral history program was discussed at last year's annual meeting of the Society for Historians of American Foreign Relations (SHAFR), held at The George Washington University, where the idea was received with enthusiasm by the assembled historians.

The Foreign Service History Center came into existence on July 1 of this year and is located on the sixth floor of the Gelman Library. The center's executive committee consists of: the chairman of the History Department, who will chair the committee; the dean of the School of Public and International Affairs; the director of the Institute for Sino-Soviet Studies; the university librarian; the vice president for development; and the two managing directors.

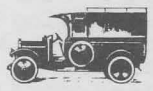
During this academic year, the center plans to sponsor several colloquia dealing with issues leading to oral history projects. Experts in specific fields of inquiry, such as decision making in Eastern Europe or the role of the smaller countries in NATO, will be invited to participate.

STUDY ABROAD OFFICE IS MOVED TO SPIA

Effective with the Fall Semester, 1985, (this semester) the Study Abroad Office has been transferred from Columbian College to the Office of the Dean of the School of Public and International Affairs according to a joint announcement from Deans Lovett and East.

Dr. Gregory Ludlow, associate professor of French and assistant dean for study abroad, continues to be in charge of the foreign programs. The Office of the Assistant Dean for Study Abroad is located in Stuart Hall, Room 101, telephone, Ext. 6240.

PARKING SURVEY COMING



Around the week of September 30, next week, that is, there will be a telephone survey regarding parking.

The University has contracted with Callow Associates of Reston, Virginia, to conduct a survey of the parking usage and needs of the University community. A random sample of students, faculty and staff will be contacted and asked to respond to a series of 12 questions. The responses should take only a few minutes to complete, according to Donald Runyon, director of auxiliary enterprises. Runyon would like to ask the cooperation and assistance of members of the University community in providing accurate responses for those conducting the survey.

COMMITTEE ESTABLISHED

their intellectual foundations and their implications for society. GW is now in a position to take a leading role in research and teaching in this field."

Committee member Povar has just received a three-year fellowship from the Kellog Foundation for the study of the integration of ethical analysis into current methods of technology assessment and policy development with regard to emerging medical and biotechnology. Professors Baily and Lynn are both former staff members of the Presidential Commission on Biomedical Ethical Issues. Professor Yeide has been active for many years in the Society for Health and Human Values.

In a related development, Dr. Richard Riegelman has been instrumental in the establishment of a Medical Decision Center. Current sources of outside funding include the National Center for Health Statistics and a Federal Faculty Development Contract. The center, a division of the Department of Health Care Sciences, is described by Chairman John E. Ott as a focus for interdisciplinary projects in the areas of technology assessment, health services research and bioethics. Dr. Riegelman, associate professor of health care sciences and of medicine, has been appointed associate chairman for research in the Health Care Sciences Department, and is serving as director of the center. Professor Moreno has joined the center as senior associate for bioethics and social policy.

"The Medical Decision Center is expected to catalyze interdisciplinary activities in such areas as clinical research, technology assessment, cost-effectiveness studies, computer applications and health policy studies," says Dr. Ott.

WASHINGTON ARTIST Michael Clark, left, talked with Vice President and Treasurer Charles E. Diehl at the opening of the Dimock Gallery's current exhibition, "Tradition and Innovation: A Washington Area Invitational Exhibition." Behind them is Clark's oil on wood, "19th Century, Don't Fade Away." The show will run through October 4.

PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

ALEX ANCKONIE, III, associate professor of business administration, addressed the Computers and Policy for Development Seminar at the International Law Institute, July 26; his topic was "Impact of Computers on the Ability of Developing Country Industries to Remain Competitive." The seminar was attended by 35 senior officials from developing countries including China, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Egypt, Nigeria, Peru, Sri Lanka, Trinidad and Tobago.

AMITAI ETZIONI, university professor, headed a panel discussion on "Science as a Basis for Public Policy" at the Annual Meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, in Los Angeles on May 27. June 20, he participated in a White House awards presentation to nine great American families; he had been one of the judges who had selected them. Also on June 20, he chaired a panel on "Socio-Economics: The Relationship Between Psychic, Social and Political Factors and Economic Ones," at the Eighth Annual Meeting of the International Society of Political Psychology and participated in a Roundtable on "Small Groups and Organization Theory: Patterns and Prospects from Particular Perspectives."

He was the principal speaker at a press conference, June 21, arranged by Montgomery County Executive Charles Gilchrist announcing the establishment of a Johns Hopkins graduate education center in Montgomery County, MD.

ROY GUENTHER, associate professor of music, and EILEEN MORRIS GUENTHER, studio instructor in organ and piano, presented a recital of organ and trombone music in Topeka, Kansas, at St. John's Lutheran Church, June 23. Included on the program were three arrangements of Bach chorale preludes for trombone and organ by professor of music ROBERT PARRIS.

ULF GRAHN, adjunct associate professor of music, had two compositions premiere in June: Concerto for Guitar and Orchestra, Northern Virginia Chamber Orchestra, Reston, Virginia, with Michael Smith as the guitar soloist, June 15; and "A Due" for piano (four-hands) at the National Gallery of Art, with pianists Barbro Dahlman (Mrs. Grahn) and Ingrid Lindgren, June 16.

PETER F. KLARÉN, professor of history, spoke to the Peru Group of Washington (embassy, World Bank and Peruvian scholars) on "The Old and the New APRA." He appeared on the program, "Temas y Debates" on SIN (channel 14) and was interviewed on "America Today" (USIA World Net Cable), both appearances related to the July 28 election and installation of the new president of Peru, Alan Garcia Perez, of the APRA party.

DORN C. McGRATH Jr., professor of urban and regional planning, gave a keynote address in June at the Science City Symposium in Kyoto, Japan under the sponsorship of the Japan Association for the International Exposition, Tsukuba, Japan, 1985. He addressed the subject of "Emerging Science Cities in the United States."

AHMED K. NOOR, professor of engineering and applied science, presented two papers at the Workshop on Computational Structural Mechanics and Dynamics, June 19-21, NASA Langley Research Center, Hampton, Virginia. The papers were entitled, "Global-Local Methodologies and Their Application to Nonlinear and Postbuckling Analyses," and "Exploiting Symmetries in the Modeling and Analysis of Tires."

At the Joint ASCE/ASME Mechanics Conference in Albuquerque, New Mexico, June 24-26, he presented a paper, "Mixed Models, Operator Splitting and Reduction Methods for Nonlinear Analysis of Anisotropic Structures," co-authored with Jeanne M. Peters. July 8-10 at Texas A&M University, he presented a paper entitled, "Anisotropic Continuum Models for Beamlike Lattice Trusses" at the Third Forum on Large Space Structures.

MICHAEL S. SHAPIRO, associate professor of American civilization, attended the Annual Meeting of the American Association of Museums, June 9-13, in Detroit, Michigan. SUSAN TOLCHIN SPEAKS AT WOMEN'S STUDIES EVENT

"I think mysteries provide a certain methodology for solving public policy puzzles," Professor of Public Administration Susan J. Tolchin told a group of some 20 young women exploring the idea of field placements in public policy at a September 19 meeting in Alumni House.

In a wide-ranging address to the group, brought together by the Women's Studies Program and Policy Center, she likened work in the field of public policy to the work of a good detective. Dr. Tolchin said she would give "clues as to how we can solve some of the public mysteries" and that in figuring out how public policy works we can go a long way toward doing something to rectify some of the problems that plague us.

"You have to look for clues, villains, heroes and approaches outside the ordinary way of looking at things," she declared. "You'll have to accept a lot of rejection as a researcher," she told her listeners. "When you probe into the reality of things, especially when you get near to solving the case, as it were, you'll find that you're going to be very unwelcome."

"You have to be willing to poke around the nooks and crannies to find information and you also have to be willing to go with the data, even when that information defies conventional wisdom," she stated. Professor Tolchin raised several questions or mysteries about public policy: "Why isn't public policy rational? and Why doesn't policy always serve the public interest?" and then commented, "You have to look beneath the surface to see what makes up the policy process and then you might get at least some tentative answers."

"Occasionally the merits of an issue do take precedence," she said, "but the merits of an issue will only take precedence if there is enough of a constituency behind it."

She raised the question of why the results of policy are so different from planners' expectations and explained that this is called in political science an "unanticipated outcome." She pointed out the area of implementation of policy as one in which legislation can be distorted.

Professor Tolchin said "You will hear someone articulate a policy and it bears no relationship whatsoever to the actual policy -- this is an example of manifest versus latent policy."

"Americans are wonderfully naive and delightful people," she observed, "but they also tend to take things on face value. They don't probe beneath the surface." The behavioral approach is very useful, the professor said and recommended, "Look at the policy, look at the manifestation of that policy and you'll come much closer to the truth than most people do. You have to look for clues that are not evident, that are not there on the surface."

Dr. Tolchin's advice for solving mysteries in public policy included the following admonitions:
"Dare to be different; look at the key players, sort out who they really are and what their vested interests are; be, as some of the most talented detectives have been, cynical and suspicious of everyone until you draw your own conclusions; look at the influentials, the lawyer lobbyists; be your own person; know who you are and seek constantly to prevail, at least intellectually; remember that justice doesn't always triumph so don't be surprised; use your knowledge to further progress; operate within the context of reality and win; remember in Washington information is power; and don't be afraid to fight because you may eventually prevail."

Two travelers from Berlin, Germany, Ulrike Legner and Sonja Vahrenhorst, were interested observers at the

GWTV LINKS U.S.-PERU CONFERENCE ON ENERGY

BEFORE THE TELECONFERENCE -- l to r, President Lloyd H. Elliott; OAS Secretary-General Joao Clemente Baena Soares; Peruvian Ambassador Luis Marchand Stens; Peruvian Embassy Second Secretary Gonzalo Gutierrez; and GWTV Producer/Director Larry Ashley.

One of the first teleconferences between academic programs in the United States and Latin America took place at 1 pm, Eastern Time, on Friday, September 20, when panel discussions on "Energy Issues in Latin America" were linked between Washington, D.C. and Peru. Panelists included executives from U.S. and Latin American oil industries.

The two-hour symposium, taking place simultaneously at The George Washington University and the School of Business Administration (ESAN) in Lima, Peru, was part of a three-day conference on "Business Management in Latin America" at GW. The teleconference portion of the three-day meeting was sponsored, in part, by the Center for Advanced Studies of the Americas.

GWTV, the University's television facility, produced the audio and video transmission of the teleconference.

Introductory remarks at the beginning of the teleconference were given by President Lloyd Elliott, the Secretary General of the Organization of American States Joao Clemente Baena Soares and the Peruvian Ambassador to the United States Luis Marchand Stens. They were introduced by Professor of Business Administration Fariborz Ghadar, who served as moderator. All three speakers expressed satisfaction at taking part in the teleconference and voiced the hope that the discussions and exchange of information would contribute to economic advancement and to the well-being of the peoples of the Americas.

Approximately 100 schools in the United States affiliated with the National University Teleconference Network (NUTN), based in Stillwater, Oklahoma, were able to view the teleconference.

The international linkage was made possible by a contribution from "Project Share," an effort by COMSAT and INTELSAT to provide teleconferencing services for education programs. Communications Technology Management, Inc. (CTM), based in suburban Washington, D.C., provided the domestic satellite linkage. ENTELPERU provided the broadcast services in Peru.

The signal was microwaved to CTM from Washington, D.C. CTM transmitted the signal to a domestic satellite for reception by NUTN members. The signal was also uplinked to INTELSTAT's 332.5 satellite for reception in Peru.

Discussion revolved around alternative energy sources, investment incentives, oil exploration and the role and impact of state oil companies versus private industry in Latin America.

Co-chairmen of the overall three-day conference, sponsored by GW's School of Government and Business Administration and the Business Association of Latin American Studies, were Fernando Robles, GW assistant professor of business administration, and Bert Valencia, assistant professor of business administration at Texas Tech University.

DR. MARY H. McGRATH IS FIRST WEDNESDAY LECTURER

"Plastic Surgery and the Psyche" will be the topic addressed by Dr. Mary H. McGrath, associate professor of surgery and chief, Division of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery, GWU Hospital, when she opens the fall's First Wednesday Lecture Series on October 2. She will speak at 8 pm in the Marvin Center's Continental Room under the auspices of the Alumni Relations Office.

Dr. McGrath will explore the importance of psychological issues for persons seeking elective cosmetic surgery and examine the question of whether or not a changed appearance can bring increased happiness or personal effectiveness. Admission is free. However, those planning to attend are asked to call Ext. 6435 to reserve seating.

Dinner in the GW University Club will be available for both members and non-members beginning at 6:30 pm before the lecture. Call Ext. 6610 for dinner reservations.

Ulrike came to the United States in April under the auspices of the Council of International Programs, headquartered in Cleveland, Ohio, and worked until mid-August in a shelter for abused women in West Virginia. The two women, who were only in Washington for the day, will return to Germany shortly to begin a new project of providing individual housing for women in emergency situations, to be financed with public and private support in Berlin.

GW FORUM FALL 1985 TO STUDY IDEA OF FAILURE

The impact of large and small failures in life and ways to work with, learn from and benefit from these failures has been chosen as the theme for the fall 1985 GW Forum by its editorial board.

Serving on the editorial board of the magazine for 1985-86 are A.E. Claeyssens, professor of English; Ali B. Cambel, professor of engineering and applied science; Alan C. Wade, associate professor of communication and theatre; and John Dias, a Columbian College senior majoring in dramatic arts.

The editors ask a number of questions to start writers thinking. Among their questions are: How do you let these failures, large and small, specific and general, shape your life? Have you aimed yourself at professions that fit society's standards of success? Are you willing to risk failure and society's disapproval in order to achieve aims and ideals of your own? Have you occasionally changed your behavior or values to become better liked, to no effect? Can failure be a positive force? Have you ever felt freer to try something because you had "nothing to lose"? What part do ethics play in success and failure? Can failure be its own form of success?

Those who would like to write for the fall 1985 issue of GW Forum are invited to shape their ideas and opinions into a personal essay of 1,000 to 2,000 words and send them to Professor A. E. Claeyssens, editor-in-chief, GW Forum, Department of English, The George Washington University, Washington, D.C., 20052. The deadline is Monday, October 28.

TIAA-CREF RETIREMENT PLAN OFFERS ALLOCATION CHANGE

On October 1, TIAA-CREF's Retirement Plan allocation change service (ACS) becomes operational. Participants now will be able to redistribute their established allocation between TIAA and CREF using the new toll-free service. This service will apply only to premiums due on and after October 1, 1985.

An announcement letter from TIAA-CREF has been mailed directly to participants' homes, along with a brochure containing detailed instructions explaining how the ACS will work.

POETRY READING OCTOBER 4

Lynne Dreyer and Susan Sonde will appear in the Friday Poetry Reading sponsored by the Department of English on Friday, October 4, from noon to 1 pm in the atrium of 2000 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW. Admission is free.

Elliott and Women's Tennis Team Captain Kathy Walton are shown following some opening volleys September 23 at the new GW Tennis Courts on F Street between 21st and 22nd, NW. Call Ext. 7460 to reserve a court.

SENIOR RECEPTION OCTOBER 2

All members of the GW faculty and administration are invited to join President Lloyd Elliott and members of the Student Activities Office at the first activity recognizing our 1985-86 prospective graduates. The reception will be held on Wednesday, October 2, in the George Washington University Club, Marvin Center, third floor, from 5 to 7 pm. For further information, call the Student Activities Office, Ext. 6555.

THE GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY THEATRE OPENS WITH NEIL SIMON PLAY

"The Last of the Red Hot Lovers," by Neil Simon will be presented in the Marvin Theatre from Tuesday through Saturday, October 8 through 12, at 8 pm. There will be a 2 pm matinee on Sunday, October 13. The play will be performed by the Masters Acting Company of GW.

Tickets are: $6 general admission; and $3 for students and senior citizens. Faculty, staff and student subscriptions are available. Beginning Wednesday, October 2, the theatre box office will be open from 11:30 am to 1:30 pm weekdays and also beginning at 6:30 pm before the evening performances. Call Ext. 8072.

DIMOCK GALLERY ART SYMPOSIUM

In conjunction with it's current exhibition of works by 17 Washington artists, "Tradition and Innovation," the University's Dimock Gallery is sponsoring a symposium on art historical references in current works.

The Wednesday, October 2, discussion will be led by art historian and GW Assistant Professor of Art Kim Hartswick at 7 p.m. in the gallery, off the lower lounge of Lisner Auditorium, 21st and H streets, N.W. Admission is free.

Symposium participants will include Washington area artists whose work is represented in the current Dimock show. Among them will be Lenore Winters, whose work, "Phaestos Disk IV," is directly inspired from a disk discovered on the middle Minoan island of Crete nearly 4000 years ago and still not fully deciphered.

JESSE JACKSON SPEAKS IN ANTI-APARTHEID RALLY

In an impassioned speech to a largely student audience of approximately 1,000 here at the University, the Reverend Jesse Jackson said, "I call for national sanctions and national divestment. I call right now on all college students to take their stands in their schools. I ask you to lend your voices and hands and anger and compassion to ensure the safety of basic human liberties throughout the world."

He was the principal speaker at a September 27 rally against apartheid in South Africa, sponsored by GW College Democrats, GW Program Board, GW Voices for a Free South Africa, GW Black Peoples Union and the Ecumenical Christian Ministry. He was introduced by Rick Santos, president of GW College Democrats, who said, "We are here to lend our voices to the struggle for an end to the evil of institutionalized injustice."

George Mvenge, president of the GW African Students Organization, and Lynn Fuller, president of GW's Black Peoples Union, spoke briefly before the Reverend Jackson.

Mvenge said, in part, "In coming to GW as an international student, one feels one is joining an international community which has international responsibilities. . . .When this period is over, blacks in South Africa are going to remember who their friends were. One hopes GW will be counted among friends and not among enemies."

Lynn Fuller traced the history of the Free South Africa movement and referred to the more than 3,000 people who have been arrested at the Embassy of South Africa in Washington. She read Langston Hughes' poem "Go Slow," which does not advocate waiting, and emphasized that she feels "The Time is Now," as a song says. "I say that freedom will not come through hatred, war and fear," she stated.

The Reverend Jackson declared, "The first fact with which we must deal is justice. The slave trade with Africa was foreign policy,

WORKS OF OZDOGAN, A.H. SMITH TO BE SHOWN IN DIMOCK GALLERY

The Dimock Gallery will showcase two distinct styles with its upcoming exhibition of works by Turker Ozdogan (sculptural ceramics) and Arthur Hall Smith (paintings and drawings) to be seen from Thursday, October 10, through Friday, November 8.

The artists -- Ozdogan, associate professor of ceramics, and Smith, associate professor of painting -- work in diffeent styles, media and subject matter.

Ozdogan works in large-scale freestanding ceramics that often depict images from his native Turkey, such as "Hora," a large bowl that features a group of men and women dancing on the rim to suggest a traditional dance at a village well. A familiar theme in his work is that of elongated musicians, a style largely fostered by his experience as a professional saxophonist in college. The 12 pieces of Ozdogan's work that will be shown consist of musicians, dancers and abstract group pieces that relate to architectural imagery, such as his "After Stonehenge."

Arthur Hall Smith's paintings and drawings will especially appeal to those who love Paris and the vitality of its street life. His favorite subject is the sixth arrondissement (district) where he records with accuracy the dense architectural elements of the area and aspects of its daily life. Eleven of his recent works will be shown, all Parisian scenes except two, "Study: Foggy Bottom Rooftops" and "The Canals of Chartres: Moon After Rain." Smith works in a finely detailed ink and wash technique which he developed from his study of Japanese Sumi ink painting.

Both artists have had one-man shows in the Washington area. Ozdogan's works have been shown at the Embassy of the Republic of Turkey, the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and the Franz Bader Gallery. Smith's paintings have been exhibited at the Chrysler Museum, the Franz Bader Gallery and the Corcoran Gallery of Art.

Hours of the Dimock Gallery, off the lower lounge of Lisner Auditorium, 21st and H Streets, NW, are 10 am to 5 pm weekdays.

trade policy, but not justice." In a far-reaching discussion, he pointed out that most of the people in the world are non-Christian, female and do not speak English and that U.S. foreign policy should take this into account. He differed with American foreign policy towards the Philippines and Nicaragua and spoke of the ever-present nuclear threat. "South Africa is a threat to the human race. They are much too insane to have nuclear power," he said. "We must choose the human race over the nuclear race and everybody must be measured by one yardstick. . . .Our character is on trial."

He quoted the verse from Psalm 127, "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it," and said, "We must end apartheid because it is immoral, it is ungodly and it is not right . . . We must end apartheid on both sides of the Atlantic, whenever it manifests itself. We fight to free South Africa because we fight to free everybody for the right of self-determination." Jackson said the labor unions at the docks and in the shipyards should be asked to refuse to load goods going to South Africa or unload goods coming from there. "We must cut off apartheid at the juglar vein."

Jackson told the students, "You have the power to be the generation that cares. With tough minds and tender hearts, we must stand up and fight tall in South Africa."

At the beginning of his remarks, Jackson asked the audience to rise for a moment of silence "for our brothers in Mexico," who had suffered in the recent earthquake. At the end of the rally, following remarks by Reverend William C. Crawford of the Ecumenical Christian Ministry; Rabbi Gerald Serotta, director of the GW B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation; and Reverend Kristen Aiken, an ordained minister in the Methodist Church; Jackson asked everyone to unite in spoken prayer for an end to violence, hatred and injustice, ending with the words, "Let us cry out until all of our children are free."

WAGON JOURNEY -- Jennifer Roy arrived in Washington in late September after a two-year walk from California. Accompanied by her dog, Tawainee, and her burro, Walter, she covered approximately two and a half miles a day. Mrs. Roy is raising money to build a home in California for disabled veterans. The firehouse next to the Hall of Government provided accommodations for Mrs. Roy; her son is a firefighter in Los Angeles.

OPEN ENROLLMENT PERIOD FOR HEALTH CARE INSURANCE

NATIONWIDE TELECONFERENCE ON WORLD FOOD DAY AT GWTV

More than 150 colleges, universities and other institutions in all 50 states will take part Wednesday, October 16, in the second annual World Food Day satellite teleconference to consider problems of world hunger.

The three-hour teleconference, called a "national town meeting" by its organizers will originate, as it did last year, from the studios of GWTV here at the University.

World Food Day, now in its fifth year and observed in 150 countries, marks the anniversary of the founding of the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) of the United Nations in 1945. World Food Day is sponsored in the United States by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the Agency for International Development and a coalition of 350 private voluntary organizations making up a National Committee for World Food Day.

The teleconference will feature a panel of four speakers: Peter McPherson, administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development; Senator Paul Simon (D-Ill.); Barbara Huddleston, chief of the Food Security and Information Service of FAO; and Marie Savane, president of the Association of African Women for Research on Development in Dakar, Senegal. Ms. Savane is also international vice president of the Society for International Development.

Moderator of the panel will be Rene Poussaint, Emmy Award-winning anchorwoman of WJLA-TV, who recently returned from covering the African famine for the Washington ABC affiliate station.

In the first hour of the teleconference, panel presentations will focus on the relationship between poverty and hunger, the impact of environmental degradation on world food security, and the problems of attaining long-term, sustainable agricultural development in the Third World.

The second hour will be devoted to activities at each of the 150 college receiving sites. The third hour will be used for an interchange between the participating schools and the panel of experts in Washington.

"For those who work to end hunger, this is a symbolic year and the teleconference will be an important opportunity to explore global food and hunger issues," according to Patricia Young, coordinator of the National Committee for World Food Day here. "This is the 40th anniversary of FAO, the main organ of the international community in the fight to end hunger ... The teleconference provides a new way for the American college community to be involved in the search for new ideas and answers."

In addition to the teleconference, World Food Day ceremonies are planned by the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Education and the Agency for International Development. Wednesday evening, October 16, at 7:30 pm, a special interfaith service is scheduled at the Washington Cathedral.

The teleconference event has been organized by the National Committee for World Food Day and the National University Teleconference Network, located at Oklahoma State University in Stillwater, Oklahoma.

ANNUAL FUND CAMPAIGN FOR 1985-1986 BEGINS

The 1985-1986 Annual Fund Campaign officially began on Thursday, October 3, with the traditonal kick-off luncheon held at the National Geographic Society.

"Last year's Annual Fund Campaign surpassed the goal of 3 million dollars. We look forward to an equally successful campaign this year with a goal of $4.5 million," said Robert G. Perry, who is serving an unprecedented third term as National Annual Fund chairman.

The luncheon was hosted by the National Geographic Society in its newly renovated wing, Hubbard Memorial Hall. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, invited all the University's deans and the volunteer chairmen representing each of the individual colleges and divisions.

The "George Calling" Phonathon, which gives all members of the University family the opportunity to participate in the annual campaign, is scheduled for March, 1986.

OPEN ENROLLMENT PERIOD FOR HEALTH CARE CONTINUES

The open enrollment period for all regular full-time and regular part-time faculty and staff to make changes in current health care coverage, or to enroll, in any of the plans offered, begins, today, October 14, and will continue through Friday, November 15.

Representatives of all of the health plans will appear jointly at the four group meetings that have been scheduled. The meetings are: today, October 14, from 1 to 4 pm in the Hospital Auditorium; Wednesday, October 16, from 8 am to 1 pm, in Marvin Center, Room 405; Tuesday, October 22, from 1 to 4 pm, also in Marvin Center, Room 405; and Thursday, October 24, from 8 am to 12 noon, in the Hospital Auditorium.

If you have not received your copy of the 1986 Open Enrollment Announcement and Health Insurance Premium Schedule or if you wish further information concerning your coverage and the various health plan options available, please contact or visit the Records and Benefits Division of the Department of Personnel Services, 2125 G Street, NW, Building GG, for assistance during this period.

The effective date of coverage or changes in coverage will be January 1, 1986.

GW Music

FACULTY RECITAL OCTOBER 21

The next recital in the Music Department's Faculty Concert Series is scheduled for Monday, October 21, at 8 pm in the Marvin Theatre.

The department will present Jane White, soprano; and Stephen Wellman, baritone, in concert along with Richard White, oboe; and Francis Conlon, piano. Guest artists for the occasion are Richard White, who will also serve as narrator; Edward Jackson, tenor; and Jo Ann Stephano-Young, mezzo.

The program will include duets and arias from J. S. Bach's Mass in B Minor, St. Matthew Passion and Christmas Oratorio as well as two G.F. Handel operas, "Amadigi" and "Julius Caesar" and his oratorio, The Messiah.

Tickets, available at the door, will be $4, general admission; $2, GW faculty, alumni and staff; and $1, students and senior citizens.

LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE NOTE

The GWU Colonial Telephone Network informs us that recently there have been problems with the long distance telephone system. These problems had arisen from hardware malfunctions in our call processing equipment. The equipment has been replaced and the system has been operating satisfactorily since the beginning of October.

During testing of the network and consultation with some of the users, it was found that some users were not waiting for a second dial tone after dialing "11." It is important to wait for this second dial tone before dialing the long distance area code and telephone number. If you do not hear the dial tone, hang up and try dialing "11" again.

If you consistently have trouble on the long distance system, please call Ext. 5530 and report precisely the problem and the symptoms so that the cause can be isolated.

UNIVERSITY RED CROSS BLOOD DRIVE IS OCTOBER 29

The University sponsored Red Cross Blood Drive is scheduled for Tuesday, October 29, between 11 am and 5 pm in the Marvin Center third floor ballroom. The Student Activities Office, which is coordinating the drive, informs us that donors are greatly appreciated. Those planning to give should call Ext. 6555 or stop by Marvin Center, Room 427.

As a token of recognition, the Red Cross is offering a grand prize trophy to the campus organization, academic department or administrative office which recruits the most volunteers. Volunteers do not have to be official members of an office or organization in order to sign up under a group's name. Donors must identify their group affiliation at the time their appointment is initially scheduled. They will be counted in their group's total after completing a successful donation.

The Red Cross Blood Services' philosophy includes the concepts that it is the responsibility of healthy individuals to donate blood voluntarily, that blood as a readily available human resource should be available to anyone needing it, and that individuals should have the security of knowing that blood will be there without obligation when they need it. We are told that currently less than five percent of the eligible donating public gives blood and that the need for donors is a continuing one.

RICHARD HOWARD, PULITZER WINNER IN POETRY AT GW

Richard Howard, Pulitzer Prize Award winner in poetry, will appear on campus twice on Thursday, October 17. He will give a slide lecture on "Baudelaire Inside and Out" at 4 pm in Marvin Center, Room 413, and will appear in a poetry reading at 8 pm in Room B-120 of the Academic Center. His appearances are sponsored by the English Department as part of its Evening Reading Series.

The department's Noon Poetry Series continues this month with Dan Johnson and Caroline Marshall on Friday, October 18, and Merrill Leffler and Jacklyn Potter on Friday, October 25. The noon readings are held in the Atrium of 2000 Pennsylvania Avenue.

Admission to all the events is free.

OCTOBER 18 IS DEADLINE FOR TWO FULBRIGHT-HAYS GRANTS

The Department of Education competition for 1985-86 Fulbright-Hays training grants is now in progress. Funds are available for faculty research abroad and for doctoral dissertation research abroad. Faculty members must be U.S. citizens and have experience in foreign languages and area studies. Awards are made for full-time research of three to 12 months. Students must also be U.S. citizens or nationals of the U.S. or be an alien having "immigration status and personal plans indicating that he/she is in the United States for other than a temporary purpose."

Applicants to both programs should contact Avery Andrews, coordinator, National Fellowship Awards at Ext. 8094, or Andrea Stewart, executive coordinator, at Ext. 6455. The on-campus deadline for materials is Friday, October 18.

PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

JAMES R. BARTH, professor of economics, was one of two invited lecturers from the United States participating in the Economics Institute for College Teachers held in Madras, India, during May-June. The event was sponsored by the United States Information Agency and the Educational Foundation of India. In July in Los Angeles, he presented two co-authored papers at the Western Economic Association Meetings: "Insolvency and Risk-Taking in the Thrift Industry: Implications for the Future"; and "Federal Debt and Capital Formation: Some Empirical Results."

He was an invited speaker on monetary policy at the Annual Meeting of the National Conference of State Legislatures, August 5, in Seattle, Washington. August 7, he presented a co-authored paper, "A Time Series Approach to Estimating the Relationship between Capital Stock and Federal Debt," at the Annual Meeting of the American Statistical Association in Las Vegas.

EDWARD BERKOWITZ, associate professor of history, participated in a symposium, "Social Security at Fifty: An Enduring Institution," at Carnegie-Mellon University, August 13. At this event, a publication, "Fifty Years of Social Security: Past Achievements and Future Challenges" was presented. It was prepared for the Special Committee on Aging of the United States Senate; Professor Berkowitz wrote a chapter for the paper entitled, "Emerging Issues in Disability Policy." August 20, he participated on a panel on "Social Security 50 Years Ago" sponsored by the National Archives.

CHARLES F. BINGMAN, distinguished visiting professor of public administration, conducted a one-week seminar for the senior faculty of the Institute of Public Administration of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia in Riyadh, S.A., July 28-31. The seminar covered how to evaluate the programs and management of public agencies more effectively and how to improve the Institute's consultant role and capabilities.

BEN BURDETSKY, professor of personnel and labor relations, recently served on the Air Force Sergeants Association (AFSA) 1985 Screening Committee for the selection of the 1985 AFSA Scholarship recipients. Other committee members included NORMA M. LOESER, professor of business administration, JAMES THURMAN, associate professor of business administration, and MARVIN KATZMAN, assistant professor of business administration. HARRY PAGE, professor of business administration, served on the AFSA Scholarship Board.

ALI BULENT CAMBEL, professor of engineering and applied science, made a presentation on "Engineering Applications of Non-equilibrium Thermodynamics" at the Workshop on Opportunities for Engineering Research Focused on Emerging Engineering Systems, held by the National Science Foundation, July 15-16. He has been appointed to the Organizing Committee of the 7th Miami International Conference on Alternative Energy Sources, to be held December 9-11 in Miami Beach, Florida.

JONATHAN CHAVES, associate professor of Chinese, gave a lecture, "Poetry, Painting, Calligraphy: The Scholarly Arts of China," to the Luce Scholars, Princeton University, August 21.

GARY E. CRUM, associate professor of health services administration, was recently appointed as Director of the Office of Family Planning in the Department of Health and Human Services. This is a two-year appointment.

HERBERT J. DAVIS, associate professor of business administration, recently completed an assignment with the University Grants Commission of Bangladesh as a World Bank advisor involved in the transition of Faculties of Commerce to the U.S. model of business education. He traveled to the Universities of Dhaka, Chittagong and Rajshahi.

AMITAI ETZIONI, university professor, co-chaired an international meeting on socio-economics at Bath, United Kingdom, July 25-26.

STEPHEN S. FULLER, professor of urban and regional planning, has been elected to the Board of Directors of EDAW, Inc., an urban planning and design firm headquartered in San Francisco, with offices in other major cities including Alexandria, Virginia.

PHILLIP D. GRUB, Aryamehr Professor of Multinational Management, has become a member of the DC Board of Trade and has been selected for listing in "Who's Who in International Business." He presented a paper,"Pedagogy: The Art of Successful Teaching in International Business," at the Academy of Management Conference held in San Diego, California. He was also named Co-Chairman of the National Conference on Citizenship being held in Washington in October.

FREDERICK GUTHEIM, adjunct professor of American civilization, received the first award "For Distinguished Service to the Conservation of America's Natural and Cultural Resources" from the Mary Washington College Center for Historic Preservation, June 7.

WALTER HAHN, futurist-in-residence and visiting professor of government and business, gave the keynote address at an SGBA-hosted conference, "Exploring the Frontiers of Issues Management," July 31-August 1. It was sponsored by the Electric Power Research Institute in cooperation with the Issue Management Association (IMA) of which Professor Hahn has served as president. He is now the organization's board chairman. NORMA M. LOESER, professor of business adminstration, spoke at the luncheon session.

JAMES O. HORTON, associate professor of American civilization, presented a paper, "Black Americans and the Constitution during the Nineteenth Century" at the Constitutional Bicentennial Conference at Catholic University. In August, he visited the Sackville School Project, an archaeological project supported by the Ontario Ministry of Education in Toronto. The site is the first Afro-Canadian urban site to be excavated. He provided the project's archaeologists with historical information about the nineteenth-century occupants of the area.

PRESIDENT ELLIOTT SPEAKS OF FUTURE AT PARENTS' DAY

"We're proud of this university. We're particularly proud of the programs which we have built here and we're also delighted that a student who comes to this campus has such a rich, fertile field of intellectual, academic, cultural and educational activities throughout the greater Washington area from which to choose and into which to delve," President Elliott told parents at the President's Reception on Parents' Day, October 12. "I'd like to ask parents to join with me, while you're here this weekend, in encouraging, further encouraging, your son or daughter to take full advantage of everything that is available in Washington," he said.

Dr. Elliott told of a conversation he had with an usher at the Kennedy Center about 10 years ago. A young lady introduced herself to him as a GW student. In talking with her, he learned that she was in her fourth year at the University and in her fourth year of ushering and that she had seen--free--every production at the Kennedy Center in those years.

"On another side," he continued, "I will call your attention to the fact that during the past two years, we have had an in-house, faculty-administrative study of this university's next 15 years aiming at what we call the year 2000. That commission has come forward with some very substantial recommendations as to how this university may move forward, taking advantage of the momentum which we have been able to generate in the last few years to add the enrichment which I think every campus is looking for and which a few, including this one we feel, will be able to provide... It is a short report of 50 pages or so and I would encourage students and I would invite parents to read the report and catch a glimpse, a little of the flavor, of what we're up to within the next five years.

"One point I want to end with and this brings us down home. It is a matter of fact that this year's freshman class, of about 1350, is the largest in the university's history. It is also the strongest class academically in the institution's history and this obtains whether we're talking about entering freshmen in engineering, or entering freshmen in Columbian College or in the other colleges that accept freshmen. What we have learned, however, is that next year's freshman class must be reduced. We now expect to take about 1150, 200 fewer freshmen next year than we were able to accommodate this year. With applications moving up each year, over the past five years, we anticipate, therefore, that admissions standards next year will take a sizeable step up the ladder. In a way this is a

GRADUATE AND PROFESSIONAL SCHOOL FAIR OCTOBER 22,23

Representatives from nearly 100 law and graduate schools will come to campus for the Graduate and Professional School Fair, sponsored by the Washington, D.C. Metropolitan Area Universities and Colleges, on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 22 and 23.

Topics will include: How to Apply to Law School and Survive; Careers in Law; How to Apply to Graduate School; and Financing Graduate Study.

Law School Day is Tuesday, October 22. Graduate School Day is Wednesday, October 23. Hours both days will be from 2 to 7 pm.

Hosted by The George Washington University, the fair will be held in the Marvin Center, third floor. The event is being coordinated through the Gelman Library.

The fair is open to anyone interested in applying to law or graduate school. Admission is free.

GW ENDOWMENT RISES TO $170 MILLION, BOARD IS TOLD

The University's endowment is now in excess of $170 million, members of the Board of Trustees learned at their October 17 meeting. This was one of several financial reports the Board received.

According to President Lloyd H. Elliott, as of June 30, 1984, only 32 universities in the United States had endowment funds with market values greater than $170 million so that the new figure should put The George Washington University in the top one or two percent of all American colleges and universities with regard to endowment. He noted that the endowment was $135 million a year ago.

Provost William D. Johnson said, "As of the beginning of this year, the University was in its strongest financial position in history and we expect a balanced budget for the current year and for the next year."

Provost Johnson and Director of the Budget Robert Shoup told the Board that since a small freshman class is planned for the fall of 1986, this change, along with increased expenses for student aid, graduate stipends, instructional costs, salaries and other improvements--including equipment and physical plant improvements--will necessitate a 9.8 percent tuition increase. This will bring the tuition to $8070 for full-time undergraduates. An increase in law tuition of 8 percent will bring that tuition to $10,540. These increases are within the 10 percent limitation approved last year for currently enrolled students.

Board members were told that a general increase in salaries is planned at the level of 6 percent as well as an increase in fringe benefits equivalent to approximately 0.5 percent of salaries. The fringe benefit increase is the result of a review by a special committee during the past year and includes a higher allowance in monthly disability benefits, a larger maximum for major medical insurance and an increase in life insurance coverage paid for by the University. The Board learned about other proposed incremental increases which include 5 percent for expenses and equipment, 15 percent for graduate student stipends and a 9.8 percent increase in student aid.

EVERETT H. BELLOWS ELECTED CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD

Everett H. Bellows was elected chairman of the Board of Trustees and presided at the Board's October 17 meeting. Previously vice chairman, Bellows had been serving as acting chairman following the death of Chairman Glen A. Wilkinson in August.

A native of Toledo, Ohio, Trustee Bellows was elected to the Board in January of 1970 as an alumni trustee and subsequently became a charter trustee. He was elected vice chairman effective July 1, 1972. Chairman Bellows holds two degrees from the University: a Bachelor of Arts from Columbian College of Arts and Sciences (1939) and a Master of Arts from the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences (1941). He is a former vice president of the Olin Corporation and was previously associated with Booz, Allen and Hamilton.

Chairman Bellow's term runs through the remainder of the academic year, and another election will be held at the Board's annual meeting in May.

very good step for any college or university. In another way, it means that applicants will have to be stronger academically and that fewer of them can be admitted. From the high schools and the prep schools around the country which have been supplying this university with a major part of its applicants, we're putting out the word that it will be to their advantage to apply earlier and to recommend their stronger students. This bodes well for the institution. It bodes well for the future and, ladies and gentlemen, we're proud that this university is moving in that direction at a time when a number of colleges, because of the demographics of the population of the country, are by necessity hurting a bit... There are a number of faculty and administrative officers in the audience anxious to visit with you and answer your questions. Have a good weekend," Dr. Elliott concluded.

FELLOWSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

Dumbarton Oaks is offering fellowships in Byzantine studies, Pre-Columbian studies and the history of landscape architecture as well as summer fellowships. The deadline for applications is Friday, November 15. For more information, contact: The Assistant Director, Dumbarton Oaks, 1703 Thirty-Second Street, NW, Washington, DC, 20007.

The St. Andrews Society, which awards fellowships for graduate study in Scotland, has invited the University to nominate only one student for an award. Fellowships go to students who are of Scottish descent and who have financial need in addition to an excellent academic record, a record of participation in extracurricular activities and demonstrated leadership qualities. Interested applicants are asked to contact Andrea Stewart at Ext. 6455 for more information. The campus deadline is Friday, November 29.

BLOOD DONOR APPOINTMENTS

Those who wish to participate in the University's October 29 Blood Drive can make appointments through the Student Activities Office. Hours of the drive will be 11 am to 5 pm. The location is the Marvin Center third floor ballroom. For an appointment, call Student Activities at Ext. 6555 or visit the office, Marvin Center, Room 427. More donors are always needed.

SGBA STUDENT RECEIVES 1985 RIGGS TRUST AWARD

Philip S. Colangelo, an M.B.A. candidate in the School of Government and Business Administration, has won the 1985 Riggs' Trust Award at the University. He expects to receive his graduate degree at the 1986 Winter Convocation.

The Riggs Award encourages excellence in research in the areas of portfolio management and investment analysis, in the finance investments program in the University's Graduate Department of Business Administration. The award was given for Colangelo's winning paper which addressed the question: "Does the Federal Deficit Really Matter?"

Colangelo completed his undergraduate studies at Georgetown University, where he received a B.S.-B.A. in 1976 with a major in finance. He is an assistant secretary with Weaver Brothers Insurance, Inc. specializing in commercial insurance.

BOB HOPE charmed and intrigued a large Smith Center audience in a benefit for GW Men's and Women's Athletics Saturday night, October 12. Before his on-stage appearance, the comedy legend posed with Lynn George, director of intercollegiate athletics for women, and members of the GW Women's Gymnastics Team, which performed briefly as an opening act.

FAMILY AND EDUCATIONAL EXCELLENCE IS SEMINAR TOPIC

Questions such as, "Where will today's children be tomorrow? What is the role of families in educational reform? Why have recent reports on our nation's schools paid so little attention to the family?" will be among critical issues addressed during the Family and Educational Excellence Seminar here at the University on Thursday, October 24.

Co-sponsored by the University's School of Education and Human Development and the Home and School Institute of Washington, DC, a non-profit educational organization, the seminar is designed to provide policy makers with information they need to make decisions about controversial school-family issues today.

The seminar, scheduled from 9 am to 4 pm in the Marvin Center, will bring together key education leaders who are concerned with educational excellence in this country and who often have contrasting perspectives on family-school issues. Policy makers will be able to hear and react to these varying points of view in an immediate way.

Speakers will include Mary Futrell, president of the National Education Association; Congressman Dan Coats (R-Ind), ranking minority member of the House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families; and William Kristol, special assistant to the Secretary of Education.

Urie Bronfenbrenner of Cornell University, cross-cultural expert on family and child development, and Edward Zigler of Yale University, former director of the Office of Child Development, will talk about the translation of research into effective social action.

Seminar discussion groups will focus on a number of topics, including federal policy and parent involvement, magnet schools, before and after school child care, the Hatch Amendment and the needs of single parents.

Seminar participants will include legislative staff at the federal and state levels, leaders of education organizations and school board members.

It is expected the seminar will conclude with a series of recommendations which participants can use to chart a new course of action to help schools and families work together more effectively.

Members of the University community, who are especially interested, may visit the 9 am section of the seminar and the 1:30 pm presentation by Urie Bronfenbrenner as observers on a space available basis. For further information, call Ext. 6160.

IT'S ALCOHOL AWARENESS WEEK

The University's Alcohol Education Committee and the Residence Life Alcohol Awareness Task Force have planned a varied program in observance of National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week, October 21-27.

Schedules of the week's activities, titled Take A.I.M. (Alcohol in Moderation) are available at the Marvin Center first floor information desk and in the Housing Office, 4th floor, Rice Hall, as well as in many locations around campus.

The program includes films and discussions as well as tastings of non-alcoholic beverages and wine. There will be a free aerobic workout following by free samplings of fruit juices. Dr. Victor Cohn, professor of pharmacology, and Dr. Martin J. Valaske, adjunct professor of health care sciences, will both serve as discussion leaders during the week. Many of the programs will take place in the residence halls.

CHINA TRAVELERS TO MEET

A meeting of University faculty and administrators who have recently traveled in the People's Republic of China is scheduled for Wednesday, October 23, beginning at 9 am and continuing until approximately 10:30 am. The location is Marvin Center, Room 402.

The meeting is sponsored by SPIA Dean Maurice East to give those attending an opportunity to share experiences and exchange ideas about the University's various relationships with China. Any recent visitors to China who have not yet been invited are asked to call Jean Marie Byerly, Ext. 7049.

UNIVERSITY FAMILY ART EXHIBIT PLANNED FOR DECEMBER-JANUARY

The Governing Board of the Cloyd Heck Marvin Center is planning a juried exhibition to display the art works of University students, faculty and staff who are not currently enrolled in an art degree program.

The exhibition, to be called "The Artistic University Family: First Annual Exhibition," will run from December 3 to January 10, 1986. All full-time or part-time members of the George Washington University community are encouraged to submit their artwork for consideration by the jury. The exhibit will be placed in the Colonnade Gallery on the third floor of the Marvin Center. Works will be accepted in accordance with the stated eligibility criteria for the show. The exhibition is intended to show the diverse abilities within the GW community, planners tell us.

Entry forms and criteria for eligibility are available from the Administrative Offices of the Marvin Center (second floor). If there are questions, contact Ellen Hackney, assistant gallery coordinator, at Ext. 6780 on Monday or Friday, between 1 and 3 pm. Deadline for submissions is Thursday, November 7.

A NEW LOOK AT AN OLD FACE ON NOVEMBER'S FIRST WEDNESDAY

Arthur Hallet Page IV, private conservator of paintings, will take a new look at an old face in his First Wednesday Lecture on November 6, at 8 pm, in Marvin Center Rooms 410-415.

Mr. Page will give a slide presentation of his conservation treatment of the University's portrait of George Washington by Gilbert Stuart. The painting is currently on exhibition at 2000 Pennsylvania Avenue. Conservator Page is the grandson of the late University Historian, Dr. Elmer Louis Kayser. A graduate of the University of North Carolina and of the Cooperstown Graduate Program in the Conservation of Historic and Artistic Works, he has had a long association with the Walters Art Gallery in Baltimore.

Admission to the lecture is free, but call Ext. 6435 to reserve seating.

The George Washington University Club will be serving dinner before the lecture beginning at 6:30 pm for both members and non-members. Call Ext. 6610 for dinner reservations.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT RECITAL

In the Department of Music's next faculty recital, Monday, November 4, Scott Fearing, studio instructor in French horn and a member of The National Symphony Orchestra, will be the featured artist. Accompanying artists will be Francis Conlon, piano, and Leslie Fearing, violin. The works selected for the recital are Beethoven's Sonata for Horn and Piano and Brahms' Trio for Piano, Violin and Horn.

Tickets, available at the door, will be: $4, general admission; $2, GW faculty, alumni and staff; and $1, students and senior citizens.

SGBA AUTHORIZED TO OFFER PH.D. PROGRAMS IN SIX FIELDS

The Board of Trustees, at its October 17 meeting, unanimously authorized the School of Government and Business Administration to begin offering the Ph.D. in the fields of accountancy, business administration, health services administration, information sciences, management and organization, and public administration, starting in the 1986-87 academic year.

As a condition of the authorization, SGBA will report annually for the next four years to the new Council on Doctoral Programs with respect to matters specified by the committee.

The action was taken on the recommendation of the Academic Affairs Committee of the Board. The committee had had under consideration, for over a year, a request from SGBA for authorization to discontinue the D.B.A. (Doctor of Business Administration) and D.P.A. (Doctor of Public Administration) degree programs in favor of a Ph.D. program, noting that this request is consistent with a national trend.

After extensive review of the reports of a subcommittee and an outside consultant, at its March Meeting, the Academic Affairs Committee informed SGBA of those modifications that would have to be made in order to gain the committee's approval. As of the October 17 meeting of the Board, it was the judgement of the committee that these changes had been made.

HUELLAS OPENING -- L to R, Olivia Cadaval, director of Centro de Arte, and Gabriela Frings, Director of Galeria Inti of Centro de Arte, talked with Dr. and Mrs. Julio Gonzalez at the opening of the Spanish art exhibit in the Colonnade Gallery, part of Hispanic Heritage Week. Mrs. Gonzalez is assistant campus planner in the Office of the Vice President and Treasurer. The group is standing next to Rose Auld's painting, "Where are You from Honey?" The exhibition, Huellas, continues through November 30 in Marvin Center's third floor Colonnade Gallery.

DR. SARA CASTRO-KLARÉN SPEAKS: "ON BEING HISPANIC"

Dr. Sara Castro-Klarén, Chief, Hispanic Division of the Library of Congress, addressed the topic, "On Being Hispanic," as part of Hispanic Heritage Week, October 10-18. She spoke in the Marvin Center on October 16.

In opening, she showed a 16th century painting depicting the Italian explorer Vespucci upon his arrival in this Hemisphere. He is shown in front of a woman whom he names America. Dr. Klarén said, "In a way, this story has a little to do with the history of the name 'Hispanic' and its current use, because it is a question of naming--naming something unknown to the person doing the naming."

Dr. Klarén explained that although the word "Hispanic" attempts to indicate a oneness, it actually delineates a difference. "The word is an enormous umbrella for the diversity that simply represents otherness; people from Panama, Guatemala or Argentina are all categorized with one term."

To better understand "the people who have come to be known as 'Hispanic'," Dr. Klarén highlighted elements of Spanish history. Even the origin of the word "Hispania" is not firmly established. Some believe the origin is Greek because it is first found in Greek geography books and spelled "Span." Others believe the word is of Phoenitian origin. When the Phoenitians settled the Iberian Penninsula, before the Romans, they named that territory "Hispalia" or land of rabbits.

She continued, "Spain is a country which has been invaded, settled and destroyed by many people. In 1492, Queen Isabella expelled the Moors and Jews in an

SGBA HOSTS CHINESE VISITORS

VISITORS from Fudan University, l to r, Vice Dean Zhi, SGBA Dean Norma Maine Loeser, Dean Zheng, and Professor Lu.

Three visitors from the Fudan University School of Management in Shanghai, Peoples' Republic of China, came to the School of Government and Business Administration for two days, October 10 and 11. They were Dean Shao Lian Zheng, Vice Dean Jing Xing Zhi, and Professor of Accounting Ting Gang Lu. A full program had been planned for them, including meetings with SGBA faculty, class demonstrations, campus tours, and receptions, luncheons and dinners.

Fudan University, known as the "Harvard of China," is 80 years old, but the School of Management is newly founded. Established less than a year ago, the school has 80 faculty members and 856 students. The university has approximately 10,000 students.

The group's SGBA visit was one of their first stops on a seven-week cross-country trip that will take them to the campuses of SUNY Albany, the University of Maryland, Tufts, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the University of Chicago and the University of Illinois.

attempt to unify the country. And those not of 'pure Spanish descent' suffered great discrimination." This passion for homogeneity affected many people in different ways. The life of the Inca Garcilaso de la Vega, is a case in point.

Born in 1542, the son of a Spanish warrior and an Inca noble woman, he was considered neither Spanish nor Incan. When sent by his father to live with relatives in Spain, they ignored him, calling him "Indiano." He tried for over 40 years to return to Peru, but was not allowed to do so because the Spanish crown was afraid that he and other mestizos, would claim the lands based on their mothers' rights.

Garcilaso de la Vega went on to write the history of the Spanish exploration of Florida and a history of the Spanish civil wars that ensued in Peru after the arrival of Francisco Pizarro in 1532. Dr. Klarén commented, "In this writing, the Inca set in place the contradictions and polarities that have marked Latin American history and identity."

Dr. Klarén explained that the term "Hispanics" is used only in the United States, to designate people who speak Spanish. In such countries as Argentina, Spain and Brazil, people do not regard themselves as Hispanic--they identify with their own nationality.

"The term tries to establish an homogeneity but in fact only succeeds in masking great differences," Dr. Klarén concluded.

SATURDAY SERIES ON FINANCIAL PLANNING

The Office of Research Support and Continuing Professional Education is sponsoring a Saturday series on personal financial planning. The three-part seminar series will be held on successive Saturday mornings beginning November 9. Seminars will run from 8:45 am to 12:30 pm with coffee breaks.

Each seminar will feature Professor of Business Finance Frederick Amling as moderator and will include other experts in financial planning and investment. All sessions will be taped by GW Television. Videocassettes will be available for purchase. There is a registration fee which will cover all three seminars and a copy of the latest edition of the Dow Jones Guide to Personal Financial Planning by Frederick Amling and William Droms.

University tuition benefits may be used for the series. For more information, contact Catherine Seller at Ext. 6300.

GW STUDENT SWEDLOW GOING TO ISRAEL FOR INTERNSHIP

Alexander Swedlow, a candidate for the degree of Master of Health Services Administration in SGBA, has received a fellowship for an internship in Israel.

The fellowship was made possible by a grant from the United Jewish Appeal Endowment Fund and comes to Swedlow through the Department of Health Services Administration. This is the department's first international internship and is in accord with the memorandum of understanding signed by Israel and the United States promoting cooperation and exchange in health care.

Swedlow will leave for Israel in December for a period of four to six months. He will work for Kupat Holim, Israel's largest health insurance provider. Swedlow will be located at the Beilinson Medical Center campus, near Tel Aviv, where he will be working on planning one of the first children's hospitals in the Middle East. A native of Brooklyn, New York, Swedlow is studying hard and working part-time this semester to prepare for what he calls a "terrific opportunity" in Israel.

CONTINUING ENGINEERING TO HOST SYMPOSIUM ON INDUSTRY

The University's Continuing Engineering Education Program is sponsoring a symposium on "Improving the Quality, Productivity and Competitive Position of American Industry" on Thursday and Friday, October 31 and November 1.

The symposium is designed to provide a forum where representatives of some of the best managed American companies can share their insights on re-establishing American industry's international reputation for quality and productivity. The sessions will include speakers from IBM, Westinghouse, The Corning Glass Works, General Electric, General Motors and the U.S. Air Force Systems Command.

Sessions will be held at the Hyatt Regency/Crystal City. A final panel will have as its topic "Revitalized Goals and a Roadmap--Future Forecasts."

For more information and for registration details on the symposium, call the Continuing Engineering Program, Ext. 6106.

GRANT OPPORTUNITY

The Office of Sponsored Research informs us that the Office of Naval Research is once again looking for eligible applicants for its Young Investigator Program. This is said to be an excellent opportunity for those scientists and engineers who have received their Ph.D. degrees since January 1, 1981, to do creative research. To be eligible, individuals must be U.S. citizens in tenure-track positions. The award offered is no less than $50,000 per year for three years, with the possibility of greater support through matching funds. Criteria for selection are: a) a creative proposal; b) past performance; and c) a long-term commitment by GW to the applicant and the research proposed.

Interested applicants need to submit a research proposal and a supporting letter from their department chairpersons through the Office of Sponsored Research (OSR). The closing date for this award is Wednesday, December 18, 1985. Interested individuals should contact Helen Spencer, OSR, Ext. 6255.

BOARD COMMITTEE APPOINTED FOR GW-AMI DISCUSSIONS

A committee of members of the Board of Trustees has been appointed by Chairman Everett H. Bellows to monitor discussions between the University and American Medical International (AMI) relating to a proposal from AMI to lease the University Hospital.

The Board of Trustees Executive, Finance and Medical Center Committees met on September 19 to receive a report on the proposal from AMI to lease the hospital. The Trustees authorized President Lloyd H. Elliott to "commence negotiations" with AMI and Chairman Bellows subsequently appointed the oversight committee.

The committee will work with the already existing Advisory Committee to establish the University's initial negotiating position; in addition, the oversight committee will be responsible for reporting directly to the Board or the Executive Committee on significant developments or questions that may arise. The negotiations could lead to a long-term lease of the University Hospital by the private medical firm. The University administration emphasizes that no final commitment by the University can be made without acceptance and approval by the full Board of Trustees.

PROFESSOR HOBBS TO LECTURE FOR COLUMBIAN COLLEGE ALUMNI

"Comets: Something for Everyone" will be the topic when Professor of Physics Herman H. Hobbs speaks Thursday, November 7, at 8 pm, under the sponsorship of the Columbian College Alumni Association. The lecture will be given in Room A114 in the Robert H. and Clarice Smith Hall of Art. The presentation is described as a broad, non-mathematical discussion of comets, their behavior and their significance, with special reference to Halley's Comet.

The event is primarily for Columbian College alumni however, members of the University community who are especially interested may attend the lecture on a space available basis. Please call Ext. 6130.

NEWSNOTES

PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

HERBERT J. DAVIS, associate professor of business administration, recently completed an assignment as World Bank Advisor to the University Grants Commission of the People's Republic of Bangladesh. He was responsible for advising on appropriate curriculum and pedagogy in the transition to a U.S. business school model.

LANCE J. HOFFMAN, professor of enginnering and applied science, organized and chaired a meeting of 25 experts from the U.S. and Canada, September 18-20 in Laurel, Maryland, on developing a research agenda for risk analysis in computer security.

CHRISTOPHER C. JOYNER, associate professor of political science, recently presented a paper entitled, "Protection of the Antarctic Environment: Problems and Prospects" to a regional conference of the American Society of International Law held at Cornell University. The proceedings of the meeting will be published as a special Antarctica symposium issue by the Cornell International Law Journal.

Professor Joyner presented a paper, "Arab Boycott Against Israel: Lessons for Law and Politics in the 1980s," to the American Political Science Convention, in New Orleans, in early September. He also recently testified before the National Commission on Space on the international legal implications of the United States establishing a manned base facility on the moon.

JILL KASLE, associate professor of public administration, was sworn into the Telecommunications Advisory Council of the District of Columbia on September 19. The purpose of the council, created by Mayor Marion Barry, is to develop a city-wide telecommunications system and to develop policies for awarding a multi-million dollar contract to a vendor to design and install the system.

EUGENE W. KELLY Jr., professor of education, delivered the keynote address, "Enhancing the Teaching Profession," to the general session of the 1985 Arkansas Education Association Convention in Little Rock, Arkansas, October 10.

JOHN M. LACHIN III, professor of statistics, recently spoke on the topic "Design and Analysis of an Intervention Trial to Assess the Effects of Control of Blood Glucose on Early Vascular Complications" at the Diabetes Research Center's Clinical Trials Symposium in Seattle, Washington.

HAROLD LIEBOWITZ, professor of engineering and applied science, has been appointed to the Strategic Planning Committee's Executive Group of the Accreditation Board for Engineering and Technology, Inc.

DIANA LIPSCOMB, assistant professor of biological sciences, completed a study of microorganisms associated with the red mangrove communities, at the Smithsonian Research Station, Carrie Bow Cay, Belize, Central America, in midsummer. The research was funded by the Smithsonian project for the study of mangrove communities.

JOHN LOGSDON, professor of public affairs and political science, was recently elected a member of the International Academy of Astronautics, a 688-person body composed of individuals who have made distinguished contributions to astronautics, at the 36th Congress of the International Astronautical Federation, October 7-12, in Stockholm, Sweden. He presented a paper on "Space Commercialization in the United States: a Status Report" at the Congress. On the same trip, he lectured at the Copenhagen School of Business and Roskilde Univesity at the invitation of the Danish Social Science Research Council.

Professor Logsdon was recently named as the first non-scientist member of NASA's Space and Earth Science Advisory Committee.

DORN C. MCGRATH, Jr., professor of urban and regional planning, gave a keynote address at the Science City Symposium held in Kyoto, Japan, this summer, under the sponsorship of the Japan Association for the International Exposition, Tsukuba, Japan, 1985. He addressed the subject of "Emerging Science Cities in the United States." He recently participated in a panel at George Mason University, sponsored by the National Capital Area Chapter and Northern Virginia Chapters of the American Planning Association, on the implications of the recently decided Occoquan Basin Zoning Case.

KHALID MAHMOOD, professor of engineering, has been awarded the Sitara-i-Imatiaz by the President of Pakistan for academic excellence in the field of civil engineering, during Pakistan's 1985 Independence Day honors. The award, for research in new technology for irrigation works, is "one of the highest awards in Pakistan..." and is equivalent to knighthood in Britain, according to Dr. G. Safdar Butt, Chairman of the Pakistan Water and Power Development Authority.

AKBAR MONTASER, associate professor of chemistry, organized and chaired four symposia on "Advances in High Temperature Plasma Spectrometry " for the 1985 Conference of the Federation of Analytical Chemistry and Spectroscopy Societies, September 29-October 2, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. At the same meeting, S. CHAN and R. Van HOVEN, who work with Dr. Montaser, presented a paper, "Progress Report on the Generation and Characterization of Helium Inductively Coupled Plasmas."

S.H. NASR, university professor of Islamic studies, participated in a conference on tradition and modernism entitled "Encuentro de Cultures," in Lima, Peru in August. He delivered the opening lecture, "What is Tradition," a second one on "Tradition and Science," and the closing lecture as well.

GRADUATE AND PROFESSIONAL SCHOOL FAIR attendance reached approximately 1,000 during the two days, October 22 and 23. It looked like this early the first day.

AHMED K. NOOR, professor of engineering and applied science, presented an invited paper, "Reduction Method for the Nonlinear Analysis of Symmetric Anisotropic Panels," at the Europe-U.S. Symposium on Finite Element Methods for Nonlinear Problems, at the Norwegian Institute of Technology in Trondheim, Norway.

YURI OLKHOVSKY, associate professor of Slavic languages and literatures, has returned to the University after a two-year leave of absence during which he served as assistant to the director of Radio Liberty in Munich, West Germany.

ROBERT PARRIS, professor of music, narrated a two-hour program on the keyboard music of J.S. Bach, on WGMS AM/FM, 9 pm, July 26. It was part of a regular weekly series honoring Bach's 300th birthday.

RAYMOND L. PICKHOLTZ, professor of engineering and applied science, presented a paper, "Application of a Bulk Queuing Model to the Dealy Behavior of a CSMA/CD Protocol with Priority Channels," at the International Symposium on Information Theory held in Brighton, England, last summer. Another paper, "Delay Behavior of Reserved Priority Channels Operating on a CSMA/CD Protocol," Proc. ICC IEEE 1985, pp. 1099-1104, was given at the International Conference on Communications (ICC '85) in Chicago, also last summer. He was recently elected vice president of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers Communications Society. He will serve a two year term.

LEO RIBUFFO, professor of history, gave a lecture, "The New American Right in Historical Perspective," under the sponsorship of the United States Information Agency at the Centre Lincoln in Buenos Aires, Argentina, August 22.

FREDERIC R. SIEGEL, professor of geochemistry, presided over the symposium session, "Remote Sensing and Geophysical Investigation" at the International Symposium on "Management of Hazardous Chemical Waste Sites", October 9-10, sponsored by the International Association of Engineering Geology at Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

JUDITH SCHLOEGEL, executive director of the National Center for Innovation in Corrections (NCIC), appeared on a taped session with the Wall Street Journal Report, September 21, WDCA-Channel 20. The program focused on the prison industry and she discussed the role of the NCIC in promoting the concept of "factories with fences."

DEBRA R. SHELDON, associate professor of accountancy, and ALAM E. HAMMAD, professorial lecturer in business administration, presented a paper, "A Strategic Approach Toward Developing Audited Situational Financial Forecasts," at the Twentieth International Atlantic Economic Conference held in Washington, DC, August 29 to September 1. They both also participated as discussants in sessions on business finance and investment, and quantitative approaches to managerial decisions.

LAWRENCE E. SOMER, visiting assistant professor of mathematics, presented a paper, "On Fermat and Lucas d-Pseudoprimes," at the Computational Number Theory Conference jointly sponsored by the American Mathematical Society and the Society for Industrial and Applied Mathematics. The conference was held at Humboldt State University in Arcata, California, August 26-30.

RICHARD F. SOUTHBY, professor of health services administration and of health care sciences, made a presentation on "Recent Changes in the Financing and Delivery of Health Services in the United States" to the Chief Medical Officer and senior staff of the Greater Glasgow Health Board, Glasgow, Scotland, August 20.

ROBERTA SPALTER-ROTH, research associate and assistant professorial lecturer in women's studies, presented a paper entitled, "Dollars, Dirt and Time Alone: Struggles Over Living Standards in Dual-Earner Households" at the annual meetings of the Society for the Study of Social Problems,

Anne N. Suydam, assistant editor

WASHINGTONIAN MAGAZINE PROFILES PRESIDENT ELLIOTT

In the November, 1985, issue of The Washingtonian, there is a profile of President Lloyd H. Elliott by James Reston Jr. titled "The Making of a University." The article traces the history of the University's advances in the last 20 years under President Elliott's leadership. The author talked with many representatives of the University community and others in conducting his research.

At the conclusion of the five-page profile, Reston quotes President Elliott as saying, "A university is a place where there is always a bit of unease, a continuous disorder, jealousy and competition among its parts. It is not an institution that comes together in graceful confluence. In this kind of situation, glamour and facelift are pure advertising and have no substance. They add nothing to the university.

"In the long pull, a university gains or loses on the substance of its scholarship and its teaching. That speaks for itself. It needs no spokesman. A college president cannot get by for long by simply glamorizing his institution. Progress on the academic and financial side will erase this sense of inferiority. We have to learn how good we have become."

ASTRID MERGET IS PRESIDENT, PAD NATIONAL ORGANIZATION

Astrid Merget, professor and former chairman of the Department of Public Administration, was inducted as president of the National Association of Schools of Public Affairs and Administration (NASPAA) at the association's annual conference, November 2, in Miami.

Dr. Merget will serve one year as president of NASPAA, called one of the nation's premier public administration organizations. NASPAA's membership includes 213 public affairs and administration schools, ranging from small colleges to state universities and Ivy League schools. Dr. Merget joined the University's faculty in 1977. She served as departmental chairman in public administration from 1981 until July of this year. Both her Ph.D. and M.P.A. degrees are from Syracuse University's Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs. Her undergraduate degree is from Mount Holyoke College. Before coming to George Washington, she served in both local and federal government posts. She was a member of the faculty at Barnard College, Columbia University, where she was deputy director of the Urban Studies Program there. A member of the American Society for Public Administration, Professor Merget was elected to the National Academy of Public Administration in 1983.

GW TO HOST ELECTRONIC NETWORKING CONFERENCE

The first major conference of the Electronic Networking Association will bring together some of the "pioneers of the electronic universe" at the University, November 7 through 10. The theme of the conference is "Using the Medium."

Members of the association are users of electronic mail or computer conferencing networks such as MCI Mail, The Source and Compuserve. These networks are being used by educational institutions, corporations, associations and government agencies.

At the conference, leaders in the field will explore computer conferencing applications, current and future technology, telecommunications law and policy, and marketing of computer services.

Speakers expected to participate include John Podesta, legislative aide to Senator Patrick Leahy (D-VT), sponsor of the Electronic Communication Privacy Act of 1985; Eric Williams, president of Participation Systems; and Fred Dubben and Diana Campbell of Mile High Media, the Unison Network in Denver.

The Electronic Networking Association (ENA) is a non-profit organization, formed earlier this year "to promote electronic networking in ways that enrich individuals, enhance organizations and build global communities."

There is a registration fee for the conference. Registration forms are available by contacting the Electronic Networking Association, c/o the Meta Network, 1401 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Virginia 22209. For more information, call Kate Wholey at (703) 247-8301 or Associate Professor of Management Science Stuart Umpleby at Ext. 7530.

SPIA EXTENDS OFFICE HOURS

The School of Public and International Affairs, 101 Stuart Hall, informs us that the Office of the Dean will now remain open from 8:30 am until 6 pm, Monday through Thursday and that these extended office hours are planned to accommodate undergraduate and graduate student needs.

FIVE ARGENTINE TEACHERS, visiting this country through USIA, came to the University recently to learn about GW's English for International Students (EIS) Program. L to R, Alberto Morales, Beatriz Quiroga, Susana de Colombo, Marianna Legname, Lucila de Gasso, and EIS Director Shirley Wright.

EDUCATIONAL EXCELLENCE SEMINAR ASKS MANY QUESTIONS

Some 130 key education leaders and policy makers attended the October 24 Family and Educational Excellence Seminar sponsored by the School of Education and Human Development and the Home and School Institute of Washington, DC, and held in the University's Marvin Center.

Participants at the day-long event discussed issues such as the futures of today's children, the role of families in educational reform, and the lack of attention to the family in recent reports on the nation's schools.

During the question and answer period at the end of the morning session, the subject of day care centers was introduced. National Education Association President Mary Futrell shared the observations she had made in her travels in France and China. She said that she had been impressed with the fact that in one day care center in France, children were accepted whether or not the parents were employed and that in China, the center she visited had been right on the grounds of the factory where the parents worked and that the parents were encouraged to visit their offspring frequently. Mary Futrell is a George Washington alumna (M.A.E. 1968).

In the same session, a questioner asked whether or not the richness of the elderly population had been tapped as a source of staffing for day care centers, either at low salaries or on a volunteer basis. Congressman Dan Coats (R-Ind), a panelist, agreed that the talent of the elderly "is a rich resource" and commented that now more elderly people are looking for avenues to continue to work and to contribute to society. "It occurs to me that this is a resource that has largely gone untapped and that ought to be utilized. I question where the funding would come from. You might have, with the elderly, a more cost-effective service. It's an area that ought to be explored," he said. Congressman Coats is the ranking minority member of the House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families.

"It's a store of great wisdom," said Dr. Edward Zigler, of the elderly. Now at Yale University, he is a former director of the Office of Child Development. "We'll see many more visiting programs in the future. Those who wish to be involved are willing to give their services. You need screening and training but when you do get them involved, they more than pull their weight."

Professor Urie Bronfenbrenner of Cornell University, speaking on the subject, "Where Will Today's Children be Tomorrow?" added another question, "and the day after?" In a searching analysis of today's problems relative to education and the family, he emphasized that nothing is as significant as the poverty change. He noted that one out of every four children in the nation under six years old is living in a family under the poverty line. "The changes that have taken place in the American family at an accelerated rate since World War II present an extraordinary phenomenon," he said. Commenting that we are becoming a two-class society, "those with credit cards and those without," he asked, "what will be the consequences of that tomorrow and the day after?" Referring to the problems of single-parents, he asked "How do we treat them?" Dr. Bronfenbrenner touched on the subject of caring and said, "Caring is becoming a lost art but a growing profession." He pointed out the importance of caring in child care and questioned what will be the effects on children of the fact that those providing professional care must not show favor. At the beginning of his remarks, he said, "If we are to continue to thrive as a community and as a nation, we must confront and carry out two tasks: first to understand the nature, scope and possible consequences of the revolution that is taking place around us and second to define a vision of the new that merits the destruction of the old, a view of the future that conjures a phoenix out of the fire." In the course of his presentation, he urged his listeners to continue to work for the advancement of society through education.

UNIVERSITY THEATRE TO DO "TWELFTH NIGHT"

William Shakespeare's comedy "Twelfth Night" will be presented by The George Washington University Theatre in seven performances this month.

The play will be done Thursday, November 14, through Saturday, November 16, and again the following weekend, Thursday, November 21, through Saturday, November 23, in the Dorothy Betts Marvin Theatre. Curtain time will be 8 pm. There will be one matinee performance, Sunday, November 17, at 2 pm.

For reservations and ticket information, call Ext. 6178.

GRANT OPPORTUNITY

The Arms Control and Disarmament Agency has announced its competition for scholars interested in participating in the agency's activities during the 1986-87 school year.

Specialists in the relevant disciplines with an interest in active participation in arms control and disarmament are invited to apply. Assignments to the Bureau of Multilateral Affairs, Bureau of Verification and Intelligence, Bureau of Strategic Programs, and the Bureau of Nuclear and Weapons Control are possible. The award consists of a salary, travel expenses, a per diem amount and other costs. The application deadline is January 31, 1986. For further information, call Helen Spencer at Ext. 6255.

SGBA DISTINGUISHED LECTURER

"Banking System Weakness and Deposit Insurance Reform" will be the topic addressed by Dr. Stanley Silverberg, research director for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, in a lecture at the University, Thursday, November 7.

Dr. Silverberg will be the first speaker in the Distinguished Lecturers Series for 1985-86, sponsored by the School of Government and Business Administration. The lecture will be given in a session from 2 to 4 pm, in Lisner Auditorium. Following Dr. Silverberg's presentation, there will be a question and answer period. The event is open to both the University community and the general public.

FELLOWSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation will award approximately 45 "Charlotte W. Newcombe" Fellowships for doctoral dissertation research to students in the humanities and the social sciences. They are designed to "encourage original and significant study of ethical or religious values." Fellowships will provide stipends of $8,000 each for 12 months to begin in either June or September 1986.

Applicants must have completed all doctoral requirements except the dissertation by January, 1986. Applications may be obtained from The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, Newcombe Fellowships, Box 642, Princeton, NJ 08542. All applications must be requested by December 20, 1985 and completed no later than January 3, 1986. For more information, contact Andrea Stewart at Ext. 6455.

DELIVERY SERVICE ESTABLISHED BY PHYSICAL PLANT DEPARTMENT

The Physical Plant Department (PPD) has established a new service to provide same-day delivery of parcels, packages and small items within the metropolitan area. This is being done through Allstate Courier Service under contract.

To use the service, call Messrs. Hicks, Webb, or Simmons at Ext. 7391, and give the following information: what is to be delivered; from where to where; and the code and account to be charged for the service. Journal vouchering will be done on a monthly basis.

PPD Director Robert F. Burch tells us that those presently using the service find it fast, efficient and reasonably economical. He says PPD will be exploring possibilities with United Parcel Service, which delivers nationwide.

EDUCATORS FROM PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA VISIT GW

A LIBRARY VISIT was one of the stops for the group of 11 visitors to the University from the People's Republic of China on November 1. Vitus Tang, acting head of the Cataloging and Systems Department, seated, demonstrated one of Gelman Library's databases for the group.

An 11-member delegation from the Provincial Colleges and Universities of the People's Republic of China visited The George Washington University on Friday, November 1. The visit was arranged under the auspices of the National Committee on United States-China Relations, Inc., which is headquarterted in New York City.

President Lloyd H. Elliott received the group at 9:30 am for the day-long visit. The delegation was made up of administrators from 10 of China's provincial and municipal institutions of higher learning and two officials of the State Education Commission who were visiting the United States from October 19 to November 10. They were invited by the United States Department of Education and their program was administered by the National Committee on United States-China Relations.

The day's agenda included a welcome and brief orientation to George Washington by President Elliott; a presentation by Reverend John P. Whalen, executive director of the Consortium of Universities; remarks by Provost William D. Johnson on financing a private university; a presentation by Richard T. Haskins, director of development, on raising funds for a private university; a talk by SEHD Dean Eugene W. Kelly Jr. on the education of teachers and other school personnel; and remarks by Acting Dean G. Edgar Jones of the Division of Continuing Education on that subject area. There were also sessions on the organization and role of faculty and on the organization and governance of the private university. The group visited the Gelman Library and the Center for Academic and Administrative Computing.

At the morning session, President Elliott asked the guests whether or not they would like to follow the proposed agenda. The answer, through the group's interpreter was, "We'll take everything on the menu." There was a great interest in the concept of the consortium of universities and questions as to whether there would be conflicts between the member institutions. Father Whalen explained that there are many areas of common concern and outlined the many services the consortium provides to both institutions and students.

The leader of the delegation was Mr. Deji Che, president and associate professor, Zhengzhou University, Henan Province. The group's interpreter is a George Washington University alumna, Ms. Rota Lee, who holds the degree of Master of Accounting (1983) from the School of Government and Business Administration. She is associated with the Department of State as a free-lance interpreter.

STEPHANIC TO LECTURE ON ANSEL ADAMS NOVEMBER 17

Jeffrey L. Stephanic, assistant professor of photography, will give an illustrated lecture on the current exhibition in the National Gallery of Art, "Ansel Adams: Classic Images," on Sunday, November 17, at 2 pm, in Room 108 of Building C, 2201 G Street.

This special event is sponsored by the Alumni Relations Office and is open to the University community, alumni and friends. The Ansel Adams exhibition in the National Gallery will continue through January 12, 1986.

Professor Stephanic will comment on the Ansel Adams collection, the first museum exhibition in America said to represent all aspects of Adams' career. He will also discuss the rarely seen large images, lent by Mrs. Ansel Adams for the exhibition.

Admission is free. Call the Alumni Relations Office, Ext. 6435, to reserve seating.

DR. RUSSELL EDGERTON SPEAKS ON UNDERGRADUATE EDUCATION

At a Faculty Colloquium on Undergraduate Education, sponsored by Columbian College, Dr. Russell Edgerton, president of the American Association for Higher Education, in his October 31 keynote address, presented a number of new ideas and approaches as a basis for discussion.

Dr. Edgerton said that with regard to faculty hopes about the outcomes of student learning, "expectations are everything." He also discussed the four undergraduate educational traditions of general knowledge, general intellectual abilities, character including values and social skills, and specialized knowledge and skills.

Characterizing many students as long on superficial information, he said they are short on self-discipline, motivation and other qualities that result from structured learning. Commenting on general education as contrasted to specialized study, he said, "In an ever increasingly specialized society, we take it for granted we have to be a specialist. I'm arguing that is not enough. The more fluid the society, the more these general capacities are in the student's interest. You also have to have that specialty to walk around with." Speaking of working in the new economy, Dr. Edgerton said, "We have been focused on specialties and unfocused on the abilities, initiative and character that are involved in moving ahead. It's not technicians, it's enterprising amateurs and flexible workers who are needed. The way we're going to earn our livings in the future is to keep ahead of the pack."

Dr. Edgerton said there is a move from passive to active learning and, "Almost anything you can do in increasing involvement is good." He went on, "If we could challenge the lecture model (of teaching), we could move from that to very bold restructuring." He emphasized the importance of constant assessment and feedback. To the rhetorical question, "How can we do something about developing character?" his answer was threefold: how you teach in you own classrooms; by being self-conscious about how you are as a role model; and through the whole campus surroundings.

He concluded with the story of two medieval stone cutters, who had different answers to the question, "What are you doing?" The first said, "I'm squaring this darned stone." The second said, "I'm building a cathedral."

Respondents represented the students, the faculty and the academic administration.

GW Student Association President Ira Gubernick disagreed with Dr. Edgerton's characterization of students. He pointed out that the Gelman Library is much used, that students help each other, that there are more pressures on today's students than formerly and said, "We feel as if world events will depend on our future actions and, to me, learning takes place every day of my life, not only in the classroom."

Professor of History Peter P. Hill, chairman of the Curriculum Committee of Columbian College, said in part, "Dr. Edgerton has given us not just food for thought but a banquet... The questions are: Are we countering these centrifugal forces--those tendencies to specialize--simply by offering interdisciplinary courses and interdisciplinary programs? Or are there other, better ways, to make ourselves as well as our students, aware of the tangencies of our individual enterprises? If the faculty of this college supports the recent (and unanimous) action of its Curriculum Committee, we will soon be offering students cross-divisional minors and secondary fields."

Vice President for Academic Affairs Roderick French, accepted Edgerton's challenge to think in terms of "outcomes." He said that in his view, the goal of general education is to create a broad population of educated citizens who have one common capacity, namely, the ability to converse with one another in a meaningful way about a wide range of subjects that are important to them. He agreed with Edgerton that it is fruitless to try to reinstate general education on the "common learning" model. He thanked the speaker for offering a plurality of contemporary models.

The second day of the colloquium consisted of faculty workshops followed by a plenary session.

ALLIANCE SCHOLAR TO LECTURE

The Department of Human Kinetics and Leisure Studies is sponsoring a lecture, "Social Development through Physical Activities (Myth and Realities)," November 14, in Building C, Room 103, 8 pm.

The speaker, Dr. George A. Sage, this year's Alliance Scholar of the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance, will examine the study of sport sociology and the contribution of physical activities to social development. Dr. Sage is a well-published author on the topics of sports, sociology, coaching and competition, and is currently professor of physical education and sociology at the University of Northern Colorado.

Reservations are recommended. Call Ext. 6280 for more information.

GW RECEIVES AT&T GRANT FOR TELECOMMUNICATIONS

The University has received a gift of $75,000 from the AT&T Foundation. The gift will establish a fund in the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs to be called "The AT&T Fund for Telecommunications." The fund is intended to support research in the field of telecommunications and graduate programs in SGBA, GSAS AND SEAS.

SURDNA FOUNDATION GRANT TO AID GWU MEDICAL STUDENTS

A $100,000 grant has been awarded to the University by the Surdna Foundation, Inc., for endowed financial aid for medical students.

"The deans's office is extremely grateful for this generous consideration of the needs of our students," said Dr. L. Thompson Bowles, the Medical Center's dean for academic affairs. "The interest from this grant will be used as financial aid for medical students."

Headquartered in New York, the foundation supports education, health, arts and welfare. It provides financial assistance for medical education, hospitals, research laboratories, mental health and outpatient health care facilities.

Wellness Resource Center

WALK YOUR WAY TO BETTER HEALTH

The Wellness Resource Center, in an effort to promote fitness throughout the GW community, has designed campus walking maps showing 3/4, 1 and 1.5 mile campus loops. A brisk walk can burn up calories and reduce tension, besides being one of the easiest, non-strenuous and most convenient forms of exercise, we are informed.

Noon-hour walking groups and a point progress walking program are two new activities for participating walkers. For more information or to obtain a map, call Sue Lewis, Ext. 6927.

HEALTH SURVEY COMING IN JANUARY

In January, a health questionnaire to be self-administered will be randomly distributed among GW faculty and staff. The survey will be conducted by the Wellness Resource Center and the Department of Human Kinetics and Leisure Studies. The tool being used for the study will be a Health Risk Appraisal, distributed from the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Georgia; this tool identifies risk factors in one's life.

The study will be confidential and all participants will receive a computerized analysis of their health status.

1985 UNITED WAY CAMPAIGN BEGINS ON CAMPUS TODAY

"I thank you for what you will be doing for our community," President Lloyd H. Elliott, told the assembled University coordinators at the November 12 kick-off meeting of the 1985 GW United Way Campaign. The campaign officially begins today.

"GW has played a leading role in the United Givers Fund-United Way in the city," he went on. "This is a way for us to say that we, too, are a part of the city. We are recognized as citizens of the Washington area. As part of the GW community, it is particularly significant for us to be so identified. What you are doing is a fundamental service to people of our community and its many organizations."

Speaking of co-chairmen James E. Clifford, director of Personnel Services, and Michael M. Barch, administrator of GWU Medical Center, who are serving once again this year, President Elliott said, "These two men have done a wonderful service for the University in the last several years."

Bennie H. Dixon, special assistant to the vice president for mortgage accounting at Fannie Mae (Federal National Mortgage Association) and the United Way Organization speaker for the kick-off, commented, "The United Way is a very effective way of giving." He talked about Socrates' concept of the web of interrelatedness and the relationships in nature such as that of the clover and the bumblebee. Mr.Dixon said, "In the web of life, we all have to pay your dues sometime and the United Way is just one of the webs, one of the strands, that allows us to make a contribution to our community."

There was a screening of the film, "Keep the Spirit Alive," featuring Jim Varney, the nosey neighbor, telling stories of United Way service.

Serving as coordinators for the campaign are Leslie O'Bryant, executive assistant to Personnel Services Director Clifford, (for the University side) and Leslie Mitchell, assistant to Medical Center Administrator Barch, (for the medical side).

LAWRENCE P. LEITE MEMORIAL PRIZE FUND IS ESTABLISHED

In recognition of the accomplishments and contributions to the study of art history of Professor Emeritus of Art Lawrence P. Leite, who died in February of this year, the Department of Art is establishing the Lawrence P. Leite Memorial Prize Fund.

The late Professor Leite's association with the University began in 1956. He pursued his studies in art history at the University of Chicago and at The Johns Hopkins University, where he received his Ph.D. Department members recall that his classes, ranging from classical to modern art, drew enthusiastic students. An active member of the University community, Dr. Leite served as department chairman from 1967 to 1972 and was instrumental in establishing academic goals, direction, and major programs in both art history and studio arts.

Those wishing to contribute to the fund in his memory may do so care of: The Department of Art, The George Washington University, Smith Hall of Art, Washington, D.C. 20052.

"REFLECTIONS ON THE SUMMIT" SYMPOSIUM, NOVEMBER 21

The GW School of Public and International Affairs Alumni Association and the Institute for Sino-Soviet Studies are sponsoring a symposium, "Reflections on the Summit," Thursday, November 21, from 2-4 pm in Room 405 of the Marvin Center.

Panelists will be: David Aikman, Soviet and Asian affairs reporter for Time Magazine; Herbert Ellison, secretary of the Kennan Institute for Advanced Russian Studies; and Edward Warner, senior Soviet analyst at the Rand Corporation. They will discuss issues expected to arise at the upcoming summit. A question and answer period will follow the panel's presentation.

Everyone is invited to attend. Admission is free but call Ext. 6435 for reservations.

FRIENDS OF THE LIBRARIES FORUM THIS WEDNESDAY

Dorothy C. Massie, inquiry specialist with the Office of Human and Civil Rights, National Education Association (N.E.A), will speak on "Attacks on the Freedom to Learn" this Wednesday, November 20, at 10 am, in Room 202 of the Gelman Library. The event is sponsored by the Friends of the University Libraries.

Ms. Massie, who has been with N.E.A. since the mid-sixties, will focus on several court cases dealing with the issues of censorship and academic freedom. Her major assignment over the last 10 years has been to monitor the activities of extremist groups as they affect public education. A short documentary on censorship will be shown immediately before Ms. Massie's talk.

The Forum is free and open to the University community. Coffee will be served. For further information, call Ext. 6455.

This volume is one of a series, edited by Joseph Gibaldi, titled Approaches to Teaching Masterpieces of World Literature.

PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

The Department of Operations Research co-sponsored the 22nd Annual Symposium of the Washington Operations Research/Management Science Council on "Revolution and Evolution: New Directions in OR/MS" held at the Marvin Center on October 16. BARRY SILVERMAN, associate professor of engineering administration and director of the Institute of Artificial Intelligence, and REFIK SOYER, assistant professorial lecturer in engineering, who is associated with the Institute for Reliability and Risk Analysis, participated. The conference focused on the areas of artificial intelligence, expert systems, decision support systems, and planning and projection techniques.

JOHN G. ALLEE, professor of English, presented a paper, "Speculation(s) about the Bible(s) in medieval Greenland" at the 19th Annual Conference, October 18-19, at CEMERS, State University of New York at Binghamton. This year's conference topic was the "Bible in the Middle Ages: Its influence on Literature and Art."

WILLIAM H. BECKER, professor of history, has been chosen general editor of the Biographical Encyclopedia of American Business. Over the next 10 years the project will publish 50 volumes. Each volume will be devoted to a specific industry and include biographies of about 100 representative historic and contemporary figures in that industry.

PETER J. CAWS, University professor of philosophy, presented the following papers: on October 6, "Sartre, The Last Philosophical Manifesto: Volume III of the Idiot" at the inaugural meeting of the North American Sartre Society, New School for Social Research in New York; on October 19, "Institutions, Normalization, and Power: The Work of Michael Foucalt" at the Greater Philadelphia Philosophy Consortium meeting, University of Pennsylvania; on October 31 and November 1, two papers at the University of Toronto: "What Psychoanalysis is the Science Of" and "Whatever Happened to Structuralism and Who Needs Deconstruction?"

ANTHONY COATES, professor of geology, has been selected for appointment as a Short Term Visitor at the Smithsonian Tropical Research Institute (STRI) in Panama during December 1985-January 1986. He will work with Dr. Jeremy Jackson of STRI, on the development of a project which will analyze the effect of the closing of the Isthmus of Panama, 3.4 million years ago, on the evolution, ecology and biogeography of selected tropical marine organisms in the Caribbean/East Pacific region.

He also was a member of the International Association of Biological Oceanographers' Coral Reef Committee, which organized the 5th International Congress on Coral Reefs in Tahiti, French Polynesia, in June 1985. Professor Coates presented three papers at this meeting: 1) with Dr. Jackson of the Smithsonian Tropical Research Institute, Panama, and Dr. Judith Winston of the American Museum of Natural History, on coral biogeography, 2) with Dr. Jackson on coral evolution and 3) with Stephen Schindler, who received his M.S. in geology from G.W. in 1985, on coral ecology at Discovery Bay, Jamaica. During this meeting, he participated in a live panel discussion, in French, on the ecology of coral reefs for French Polynesia Radio, and chaired one of the technical symposia. Five hundred delegates from 50 countries attended the meeting.

RAYMOND R. FOX, professor of civil engineering, spoke at a Coastal Construction Workshop for Engineers, Architects, Builders, and Public Agencies, October 17, in the San Francisco Bay area. His topic was, "Techniques to Construct New Buildings in the Coastal Zone." The workshop was sponsored by the Federal Emergency Management Agency, assisted by U.S. Army Corps of Engineers - Los Angeles District, and the California Department of Water Resources.

HOWARD GILLETTE, associate professor of American civilization and director of the Center for Washington Area Studies, conducted a lecture and tour of Washington's historical sites for 30 foreign scholars of American life, September 17, sponsored by the University of Mississippi in cooperation with the U.S. Information Agency. On October 10, he opened a mini-course on contemporary Washington, co-sponsored by GW's Center for Washington Area Studies and the Institute for Policy Studies, with a lecture on the history of Washington's urban development. October 23, he participated in a conference for District teachers of Washington history, "Using 19th Century House Museums for Teaching Washington History," sponsored by the D.C. Community Humanities Council. Professor Gillette also conducted a walking tour of Mt. Pleasant, October 26, for the Mt. Pleasant Historical Association.

GAIL SHORT HANSON, dean of students, was one of 26 women from across the country to participate recently in an ACE National Forum sponsored by the American Council on Education's Office of Women in Higher Education in cooperation with the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators and the National Association of Women Deans, Administrators, and Counselors. Dean Hanson was selected because of her "strong record of accomplishment as well as her potential for the highest levels of leadership in higher education."

CALVIN LINTON, professor emeritus of English, was one of two major speakers at the annual "Writing and Literature Conference," at Wheaton College, Illinois, October 3-5. He delivered two major lectures and participated in seminars and workshops.

RICHARD LONGSTRETH, associate professor of architectural history, lectured on design guidelines at the inaugural meeting on commercial rehabilitation in metropolitan areas sponsored by the National Main Street Center in Washington, August 13. He gave a lecture entitled, "Custard's Last Stand" at the School of Architecture and Planning, Cornell University, on October 18. On October 24, he spoke on, "The Origins of Art Deco Architecture" at the National Portrait Gallery, and on October 25, he lectured on "Preservation in the United States" as part of the U.S. Information Agency's "Preservation of Historic Buildings, Neighborhoods, and Monuments" program for distinguished visitors from the Near East, in Washington DC.

CLARA M. LOVETT, professor of history, has been appointed to the advisory committee for a newly established Program on Western Europe at the Wilson Center.

CHRISTINE MELONI, adjunct instructor in English in the English for International Students Program, was elected vice-president of the Washington chapter of the Fulbright Alumni Association at its meeting held in the University Club on October 19.

JOSEPH PELZMAN, associate professor of economics, recently presented two papers. On October 10, "The Impact of the U.S.- Israel Free Trade Area on Israeli Trade and Employment" was presented at the International Business and Economics Seminar, The Graduate School of Business and Economics, New York University. On October 24, "The New Wave of Protectionism: An Assessment" was given at the National Economists Club.

PLANNING TEAM PLACES IN INTERNATIONAL ARENA

A team of seven GW students in Urban and Regional Planning which received third place in a national competition in July of this year, later placed in an international competition in Budapest, Hungary.

In the United States, the team received its award from NAHRO (National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials) for plans for revitalization of post-war rental housing. Their project focused on the Fay Apartment complex in southeast Washington. In order to foster cooperation and responsibility, which would, in turn, bring a feeling of security and pride for residents of the deteriorating housing, team members proposed that the local government establish ALLIANCE (ALL In a New Cooperative Effort), a coalition of financial institutions and local government, community and civic leaders, housing professionals and residents. It was proposed that ALLIANCE would set up a finance, management and physical plan to rehabilitate the community.

Part of the NAHRO third place prize, in addition to a $750 cash award, was entry into the International Competition 1985 for Students of Architecture, Urban Studies and Design, and Urban/Regional Planning on "Improving Large-Scale Post-War Housing Developments." The competition was organized by the International Federation for Housing and Planning in connection with its 1985 International Congress in Budapest, Hungary, in September.

The GW team's proposal was the only U.S. entry to place in the international competition, receiving the Hungarian Government Grant for a one-week study visit in Hungary. This was one of three prizes given at the conference. The other two were the Gulbenkian Travel Grant which went to a student from Poland and the Hungarian Grant for a three-week study visit in Hungary, which went to a team from Japan. There were entries from 18 countries.

The students were members of a special project team, organized by Professor of Urban and Regional Planning Sherwin Greene. The project was a cooperative effort with Associate Professor of Urban and Regional Planning Dennis Gale, who assisted the team. The seven students included six in urban and regional planning (three concentrating on community planning and design and three in housing and community development) and an MBA candidate in finance.

PRESIDENT ELLIOTT COMMENTS ON SERVICE AWARDS PROGRAMS

SERVICE AWARDS -- L to R, Personnel Services Director James E. Clifford, left with Shirley B. Hawkins, center, benefits specialist in Personnel Services, and Leah Valadez, office manager, Office of the Vice President for Administration and Research, who both received 10-year awards at a recent ceremony.

Commenting on the Service Awards events now being held throughout the University to recognize the many members of the University family who have given long service, President Lloyd H. Elliott says: "At this Thanksgiving season, I want to express the appreciation of the University and convey my own personal thanks to each and every individual who is receiving an award. I look forward to our continued association and working together for the benefit of our institution."

(Editor's Note: Some 350 awards for periods of service beginning with five years and lasting as long as 30 years and beyond are being presented at the various events.)

GRANTS INFORMATION: WASHINGTON AREA STUDIES

The Center for Washington Area Studies announces the availability of limited funding for faculty research grants to support GW faculty undertaking or planning original research into some facet of the social, political or economic characteristics of the Washington, DC, metropolitan area.

All full-time faculty are eligible to apply. The Center for Washington Area Studies takes a broadly interdisciplinary approach and welcomes proposals from any and all departments and individual faculty members. Primary factors to be considered include the originality and appropriateness of the research design and the likely contribution of it to theoretical understanding, substantive knowledge or public policy-making. Projects for which there is a clear need and expressed interest on the part of local public officials or community leaders will be looked upon with particular favor. There is also an interest in studies possibly appropriate for use in the center's Washington Studies monograph series.

Written application should be made to the Center for Washington Area Studies by December 15, 1985. Funding for these grants is made available by the School of Public and International Affairs. For more information, call Ext. 7572.

SAR LEVITAN IS DECEMBER'S FIRST WEDNESDAY LECTURER

What impact have federal regulations had in the workplace and what have they accomplished? Sar Levitan, professor of economics and director of the Center for Social Policy Studies, will discuss this question on December 4, at 8 pm, in Rooms 410-415 of the Marvin Center.

The free event is part of the First Wednesday Lecture Series sponsored by the Alumni Relations Office. Call Ext. 6435 for reservations. The University Club will be serving dinner to members and nonmembers starting at 6:30 pm. Please make reservations directly with the Club at Ext. 6610.

GRANT OPPORTUNITIES WITH THE U.S. AIR FORCE

The U.S. Air Force Summer Faculty Research Program offers research opportunities for qualified faculty. Ten-week summer research periods are conducted at one of 20 U.S. Air Force laboratories/centers across the country with follow-on research opportunites at the home institution. Basic research will be conducted in areas of science, mathematics and engineering; application deadline is February 1, 1986.

The complete program announcement is available in the Office of Sponsored Research. Call Helen Spencer at Ext. 6255.

ENGINEERING ALUMNI HONOR DR. BENJAMIN C. CRUICKSHANKS

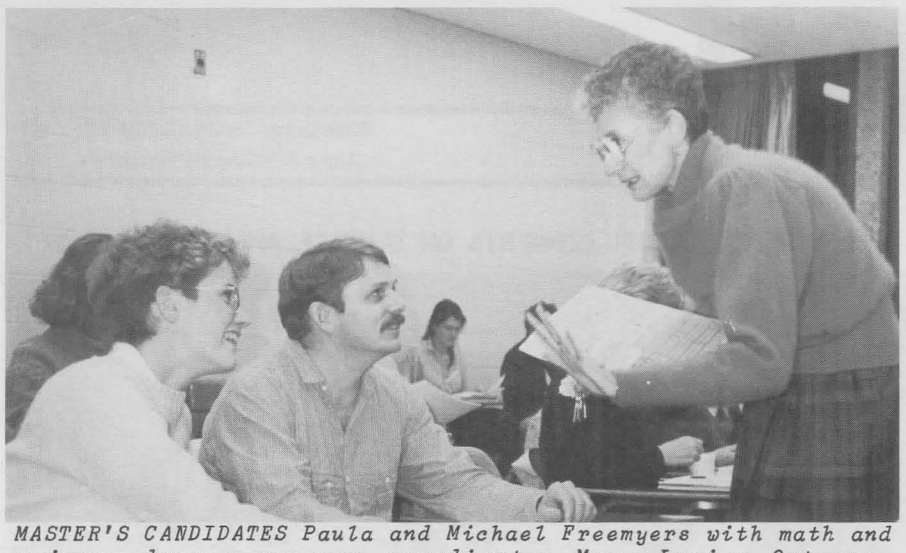
Professor Emeritus of Mechanical Engineering Benjamin C. Cruickshanks was honored at a November 14 reception by the Engineering Alumni Association (EAA).

Professor Cruickshanks spent more than 40 years as a student and later as a professor in the University's Engineering School. He received a Bachelor of Science in Mechanical Engineering from the University in 1920. Except for a four-year period when he was associated with the Hartford Steam Boiler Insurance Company, Professor Cruickshanks taught at the University from the time he graduated until he became professor emeritus in 1958. He is remembered as a highly respected professor who demanded hard work and excellence from his students.

Speakers at the event included President Lloyd H. Elliott, who spoke on behalf of the University and noted some of the technological changes of recent years; SEAS Dean Harold Liebowitz, who gave some anecdotes about the professor and praised his attributes; John Manning (B.S.E.E. 1957, J.D. 1961) and Bud Wareham (B.S.E.E. 1953) who gave a history of Professor Cruickshanks association with the University; and Dr. John Latimer, president of the Society of the Emeriti, who traced Cruickshanks' baseball career on the GW varsity and faculty teams.

EAA President Mary Jones announced that the association has established a scholarship fund in Professor Cruickshanks' name.

GW PROGRAM RESPONDS TO NEED FOR MATH, SCIENCE TEACHERS



MASTER'S CANDIDATES Paula and Michael Freemyers with math and science degree program coordinator Mary Louise Ortenzo, right.

An inaugural class of GW graduate students is now studying for the degree of Master of Arts in Education with a concentration in mathematics and science. The program is offered through the School of Education and Human Development.

One of the few such degree programs in the country, it comes at a time when warning flags have been raised, nationwide, about a severe shortage of teachers, especially in the areas of math and science. The shortage is expected to increase by the 1990s.

Two students in the nine-member class are husband and wife. They are Michael and Paula Freemyers of Alexandria, Virginia. Both Freemyers are currently in the Navy, but eventually will be leaving the service. According to Paula, "Each of us had parents who were teachers. I've always had an interest in teaching, so we think it might be hereditary."

All but three of the nine students in the program are in the military. According to Mary Louise Ortenzo, program coordinator, GW is targeting its student recruitment effort toward those who can best afford to make a transition into teaching--namely the military and mid-career professionals in high technology industries. She explains that these individuals have the knowledge and experience necessary to qualify them eventually to teach in the math and science areas but they lack the teaching credentials required for the job. Ms. Ortenzo notes that the teaching profession, which historically has not paid well, has suffered particularly in the areas of math and science with private companies luring potential teachers away with more lucrative salary offers. It is thought that retiring military personnel, who may be looking forward to a pension, can afford to go into teaching as a second career.

She explains, "Overall, we're encouraging individuals to enroll who have previous undergraduate or graduate course work in mathematics or science, are interested in working with young people, and are looking toward a career change in the near future."

Most students can complete the requirements for the program within one year as full-time students or in two years and three summers as part-time students.

"We are designing the curriculum to meet the needs of both the students and the school systems," Coordinator Ortenzo adds. "For example, the first course these students take has a field work component. The opportunity to observe junior and secondary high classes, and to take part in some actual 'hands-on' work, gives these students a good preview of the teaching profession."

The program is a first for Washington, DC., area universities. As the program matures, Ms. Ortenzo says the University hopes to develop partnerships with the local school systems to provide opportunities for those already teaching math and science to upgrade their skills.

IT'S TIME FOR YOUR 1986 ID

The blue or pink photo identification cards currently held by eligible faculty and staff will become invalid on January 1, 1986. Following is a schedule for the 1986 validation of the ID cards:

HOSPITAL CAFETERIA

Monday,	December 2	7 am - 3 pm
Tuesday,	December 3	9 am - 4 pm
Wednesday,	December 4	7 am - 3 pm
Thursday,	December 5	9 am - 4 pm
Friday,	December 6	7 am - 3 pm

MARVIN CENTER, 2ND FLOOR LOBBY

Monday,	December 9	9 am - 4 pm
Tuesday,	December 10	7:30 am - 3 pm
Wednesday,	December 11	9 am - 4 pm
Thursday,	December 12	7:30 am - 3 pm
Friday,	December 13	9 am - 4 pm

Each person must bring the current blue or pink University photo ID card to be validated.

Only those part-time, on-campus faculty members who have been appointed through the 1986 spring semester will receive validation stickers. Others should wait until they receive their spring semester letter of appointment from the Vice President for Academic Affairs before requesting the 1986 stickers.

If the current photo ID card has been lost, please contact the Records and Benefits Division of Personnel Services, Ext. 4480.

COLONNADE GALLERY TO SHOW WORKS BY UNIVERSITY ARTISTS

Art works by University students, faculty and staff members not enrolled in an art degree program will be on display in the Colonnade Gallery, Marvin Center, beginning December 4. Entitled, "The Artistic University Family: First Annual Exhibition," the juried show will include photography, pencil drawings, collages, acrylics, oil paintings and pottery. Sponsored by the Governing Board of the Marvin Center, the display is designed to show the diverse artistic abilities within the GW community.

Everyone is invited to attend the opening reception on Wednesday, December 4, from 4-6 pm in the Colonnade Gallery, located on the third floor of the Marvin Center. The show will continue through January 3.

SECURITY NOTE ON ASBESTOS

In response to the current concern about the possible threat to health from asbestos, Safety Manager Gerald C. Hinson of the Office of Safety and Security, has provided some pertinent information.

Hinson says that some of the buildings at the University do indeed contain asbestos, usually bound in a material such as plaster and then applied to piping as lagging. (Lagging is the name given to material used for thermal insulation, especially around a cylindrical object.) Hinson assures that as long as asbestos-containing materials are undamaged and are encapsulated by a non-asbestos material, there is absolutely no health problem. Measurements of atmospheres at the University known to contain asbestos have all been well below the current standard for asbestos workers set by federal regulations.

In the routine maintenance work at the University, many personal precautions are required of those working with materials containing asbestos. When asbestos removal is in progress, the work area is isolated to prevent air with asbestos fibers from migrating into clean-air areas.

"Without question, we at GW are concerned about asbestos and every precaution within reason is taken to avoid exposing our faculty or staff or students to needless risk," Hinson concludes.

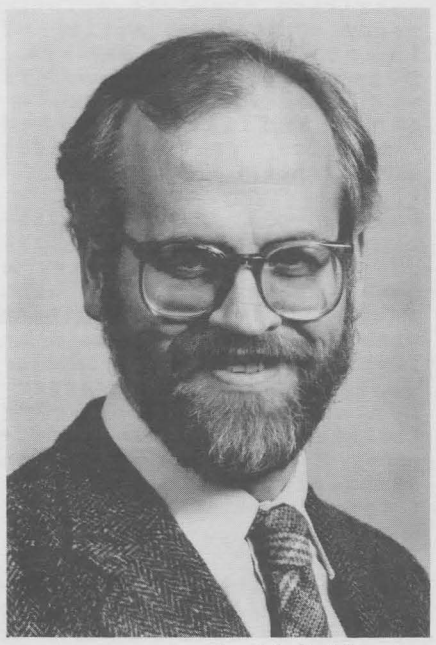
TWO NEW DEANS IN 1986 FOR COLUMBIAN COLLEGE



David McAleavey

Norayr Khatcheressian

Professors David McAleavey and Norayr Khatcheressian will assume new administrative posts in Columbian College effective January 1, 1986, according to an announcement by Columbian College Dean Clara M. Lovett.

McAleavey will become associate dean for student affairs and Khatcheressian will be assistant dean for student affairs.

Associate Professor of English McAleavey was born and grew up in Wichita, Kansas. He attended Cornell University on a Sloan Scholarship, graduating summa cum laude in 1968. After some graduate study at the University of California, Berkeley, he returned to Cornell where he earned two graduate degrees: an M.F.A. in Creative Writing (1972) and a Ph.D. (1975). His fields of specialization have been the writing of poetry and 20th century American poetry. He joined the University in 1974.

Professor McAleavey is the author of four books of poetry, most recently Holding Obsidian (Washington Writers' Publishing House, 1985); several articles dealing with the neglected American poet George Oppen; and reviews and essays discussing the Washington poetry scene. He edited an anthology of writing by participants in the English Department's Jenny McKean Moore Program of free community workshops (Evidence of Community, GW Center for Washington Area Studies, 1984).

A member of the executive committee for the Center for Washington Area Studies, he is the principal investigator for a grant from the D.C. Community Humanities Council to support a conference in April, 1986, on Washington and Washington writing. He hosts weekly poetry reading Fridays in the 2000 Pennsylvania Atrium and is active in numerous literary organizations and events.

Associate Professor of Physics Khatcheressian is an alumnus of Columbian College (B.A. 1960, M.A. 1963). After receiving his Ph.D. in physics from the University of Virginia in 1966, he returned to the University as assistant professor of physics. Immediately prior to his appointment as associate professor and chairman of the Department of Physics, a post he held from 1977 to 1980, Professor Khatcheressian was instrumental in reorganizing the physics curriculum for engineering and science students. For the past 10 years, he has served as chairman of the departmental Summer Programs.

His service to students spans many years -- first as a faculty advisor to the Society of Physics Students, later as an advisor in Columbian College to incoming freshmen, and most recently, as a departmental advisor to physics majors. He has served on many University and Faculty Senate committees, including several years on the Student-Faculty Committee on Appeals. He is currently chairing the Student Support Committee of the Columbian College Alumni Association.

CHANGE IN FORM FOR EMPLOYEE TUITION BENEFITS FOR 1986

The Tuition Benefit Application forms have recently been consolidated into a single form.

Effective with the 1986 Spring Semester registration, the old tuition benefit application forms will no longer be accepted. All employees requesting tuition benefits will be required to complete and submit the new form. The new forms are now available in the Records and Benefits Office, Personnel Services, Building GG, 2125 G Street, NW.

A tuition benefit form must be submitted by each student for each semester. The certification process, which requires the signature of a representative of the Records and Benefits Office, will begin Monday, December 16, 1985.

COLLOQUIUM ON UNITED NATIONS PEACE EFFORTS

How does U.S. foreign policy affect the United Nations' peacekeeping efforts? A colloquium, "U.S. Involvement in U.N. Peacekeeping," addressed this and other questions, December 2, at the Marvin Center.

The event, sponsored by the School of Public and International Affairs (SPIA) and the Foreign Service History Center, featured three speakers: Robert B. Houghton, formerly with the Office of Multinational Force and Observers' Affairs, Department of State; Nathan A. Pelcovits, former Director of U.N. Planning, Department of State; and Christopher C. Joyner, associate professor of political science at the University. The moderator was SPIA Dean Maurice East.

The discussants paid particular attention to East-West power politics and the Arab-Israeli conflict. According to Mr. Pelcovits, these situations exemplify the changing U.S. role in U.N. peacekeeping during the last 30 years, from a policy of "limited liability" toward one of more centralized responsibility. Professor Joyner noted that the U.N. peacekeeping process is a "contemporary substitute for collective security."

The Foreign Service History Center recorded the colloquium as part of its continuing program of compiling an oral history archive of the recollections and perceptions of U.S. foreign affairs specialists.

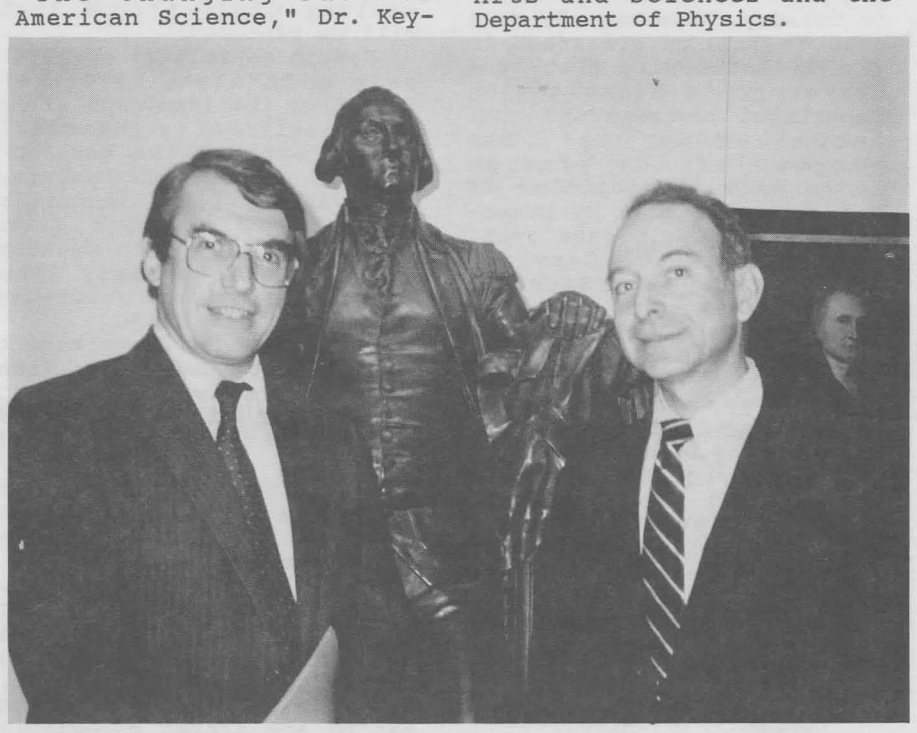
DR. KEYWORTH, PRESIDENT'S SCIENCE ADVISOR, SPEAKS HERE

"This is no time to be defensive in planning for the future," said Dr. G.A. Keyworth, Science Advisor to the President and Director, Office of Science and Technology Policy, in a speech at the University November 20.

"Economic health demands technological innovation and an investment in science," he continued. "The problem today is that there's so much talk about quick fixes to trade problems, and so much emphasis on trying to correct trade deficits through trade policies, that we often fail to see how the real solution comes from investing in our future and in becoming better producers than the other guy. . . We have the opportunity, using knowledge and talent resources that no other country approaches, to strengthen the infrastructure for future industrial and economic leadership, that can withstand the pressures of foreign competition."

In a broad discussion of "The Changing Face of American Science," Dr. Keyworth cited the benefits now emerging from the relationships between those in industry and those in the research laboratories. He said there is "an untapped potential available to us if we can improve our ability to link academic science with industrial opportunity." He continued, "If I had to identify a single means by which we could become a more competitive nation and capitalize on those technology and talent resources we have, it would be to improve that linkage. And the place to do that is at the source, on the university campus."

Dr. Keyworth described a new program in the National Science Foundation, "to link creative vigor with opportunities for technology," called Engineering Research Centers, designed to focus different disciplines on areas of important emerging technologies. He affirmed that "the government will keep the basic research pot bubbling." Dr. Keyworth's campus appearance was sponsored by the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and the Department of Physics.



SCIENCE ADVISOR to the President and Director, Office of Science and Technology G.A. Keyworth, left, is shown with Professor of Physics Barry L. Berman after Dr. Keyworth's November 20 address in Lisner Auditorium, sponsored by the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and the Department of Physics. They are shown with the University's statue of George Washington by Houdon.

GORDON L. LIPPITT DIES

Professor Emeritus of Behavioral Sciences Gordon L. Lippitt died November 25 at Suburban Hospital. He was 65.

Born in Fergus Falls, Minnesota, he held undergraduate degrees from Springfield College and Yale University; a master's degree from the University of Nebraska; and a doctorate in psychology from American University. He came to George Washington in 1960 as professor of behavioral sciences and was awarded the status of professor emeritus on May 5 of this year. He was a founder and a former director of the Center for Behavioral Sciences in the School of Government and Business Administration.

During his years at the University, he was extremely active in teaching, research, publishing, committee service and participation in student and alumni functions. He was esteemed by his colleagues for the influence he exercised on national and international thought in the field of behavioral science through his more than 300 books, articles and films, as well as speaking engagements, presentations at national and international meetings and uncounted hours spent with students, managers and administrators.

Recognition accorded Professor Lippitt included an endowed chair in his name at the University of Texas at Austin; the Wilbur McFeeley Award for contributions to the field of management; the Gordon Bliss Memorial Award from the American Society for Training and Development; the Annual Book Award from the Training Officers Conference; and the Leadership Award from the National League of Nursing.

He is survived by his wife, Phyllis, three daughters, Anne Rarich, Mary Lippitt, Connie Ridgway and grandchildren.

Contributions in his memory may be sent to the Gordon Lippitt Leadership Fund, Management Science Department, The George Washington University or the Gordon Lippitt Educational Fund at Concord-St. Andrews United Methodist Church in Bethesda.

10TH ANNUAL PRIDE DAY HELD

On Tuesday, November 12, at a 6:30 to 7:30 am breakfast in the GW University Club, the University's Housekeeping Department observed its 10th Annual Pride Day. The purpose of the program is to show appreciation of the fine job done by Housekeeping all during the year.

At the event, Servicemaster Management Services Corp. presented a plaque to Vice President and Treasurer Charles E. Diehl and the University in observance of the 10-year association between Servicemaster and the University. A number of University officials were present at the occasion. Vice President Diehl and Physical Plant Director Robert F. Burch expressed their appreciation to all the members of the Housekeeping Department.

IBM is offering members of The George Washington University community a substantial discount on its portable computer. The computer has two disk drives and 256K of memory. Call Mike Hamilton at Ext. 8737 for further information.

FRIENDS FORUM SPEAKER SAYS ATTACKS ON FREE LEARING GROW

Dorothy C. Massie, inquiry specialist in the Office of Human and Civil Rights of the National Education Association, was the speaker at the November 20 Friends Forum of the Friends of the University Libraries. Her subject was "Attacks on the Freedom to Learn."

In a wide-ranging discussion, she outlined many of the current situations regarding textbooks and teaching in schools across the country.

"What seems to be the trend now is less and less focus on library books and more and more people who want to turn their attention to taking out, expunging, from the curriculum anything but the basics," she said. "For example, the teaching of history. There are those who want students to learn dates, names and places. They want to eliminate everything but the basics. They want to see taught what they call chronological history -- the basics. Library books are looked at but more and more it's getting into how teachers teach and what students and teachers can talk about in the classroom. There are numbers of groups nationwide. They want to tell students what to think, not teach them how to think. These groups are increasingly sophisticated in the way they want to get their message across."

Among some of the organizations which have been seeking to counter this kind of trend, she said, are People for the American Way, the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Coalition Against Censorship in New York City. Ms. Massie said there are also some state coalitions against censorship.

JOSEPH PENNELL'S GRAPHIC WORKS IN DIMOCK GALLERY

The Dimock Gallery will present an exhibition titled, "The Graphic Works of Joseph Pennell," from December 12 through January 10, 1986. The show will include 61 of the artist's works.

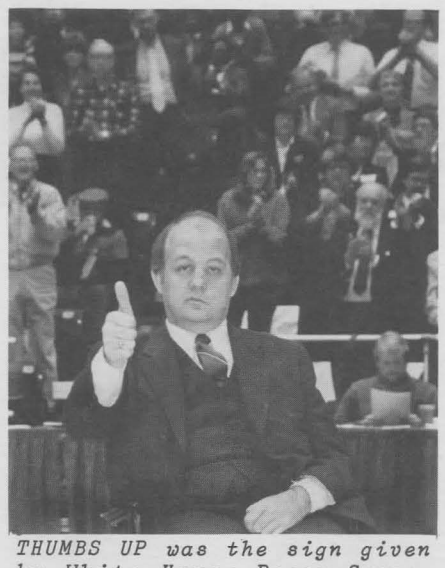
Etchings and lithographs reflecting Pennell's vision of the changing American scene from the turn of the century until around 1925 will be featured.

Joseph Pennell (1857-1926) made a lifelong career of depicting the landscape as it was transformed by industrial technology and the development of modern architecture. The exhibition will chronicle Pennell's lifework from scenes of late 19th century Philadelphia to early 20th century scenes and landmarks around New York City.

Influenced by James McNeil Whistler, Pennell was also very affected by the European revival of printmaking and spent much time working and traveling on the continent. A foremost exponent of etching and lithography, he eventually settled in his native America.

A collection of Pennell's works was begun at the University in 1954. A large number of the works have rarely been exhibited here, however. They have been matted and framed especially for this show. The exhibition is the result of the master's thesis of GW alumna Barbara J. Stephanic, (M.A. 1985).

Sponsored by the Dimock Gallery, Art Department, the exhibition can be seen from 10 am to 5 pm Monday through Friday.



THUMBS UP was the sign given by White House Press Secretary James Brady after throwing a ceremonial jump ball at the opening of the Colonial Women's 1985-86 basketball season on November 22 in the Charles E. Smith Center.

PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

DONALD E. HAWKINS, professor of travel and tourism, gave a speech on, "Critical Choices Facing Independent Hoteliers and Project Developers" to an international symposium in conjunction with Best Western International Conference, on October 14.

DAVID McALEAVEY, associate professor of English, has been elected to the Board of Directors of the newly incorporated Poetry Committee of the Greater Washington, DC, Area, a non-profit group which meets at the Folger Library and promotes the cause of poetry in the area. He gave readings of his own poetry on July 23, at the Joaquin Miller Cabin in Rock Creek Park; October 19, at the Slavin Gallery in Washington, DC; and October 24, at the Martin Luther King, Jr. Library. He also introduced the film Robert Frost (a new made-for-TV movie) to the Smithsonian Resident Associates Program at the Carmichael Auditorium, October 29.

STUART A. UMPLEBY, associate professor of management science, spent the past summer as a visiting professor at the Graduate School of Business Administration, University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, South Africa. He gave a lecture on community development strategies and spent many hours talking with a wide variety of people about the situation in South Africa. On September 18, he spoke, along with Richard Thomson, a lecturer at the University of Witwatersrand, on the topic, "Can Multinational Firms be Effectively Used for the Transfer of Values from One Country to Another: The Case of the Sullivan Principles in South Africa," to an audience in the Marvin Center. On October 9, Professor Umpleby and Fanyana Mazibuko, a spokesman for black activist groups in South Africa, addressed the topic, "The Effectiveness of Disinvestment as a Strategy for Change in South Africa," in the Marvin Center. (Both discussions were tape recorded.)

"DIAMONDS IN THE ROUGH" IN SPECIAL COLLECTIONS

The Gelman Library has mounted an exhibition entitled "Diamonds in the Rough: Selections from Gelman Library Special Collections."

The exhibition offers the viewer a selection of diverse materials chosen to suggest avenues of research which could be pursued by using the department's collections. Exhibited resources include original Minutes of Trustees of Columbian College (1821-1835); the first issue of "The Hatchet" (October, 1904); R.W. Smiley's "Glimpse at the Night Side of Washington: A Guide to Night Amusements by One Who Has Been There" (1894); the Limited Editions Club's "The Complete Poems of Robert Frost" (1950); a first American edition of "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland" (1866); and a letter of Stephen Decatur pertaining to the activities of the mayor of Washington.

The exhibition will remain on view through February 28, 1986. Special Collections, located in Room 207 of Gelman Library, is open from 9 am to 5 pm Monday through Friday.

READING CENTER HONORS PRESIDENT LLOYD H. ELLIOTT

President Elliott was guest of honor at a holiday reception given by the University's Reading Center at the GW Television Station, GWTV, on Friday, December 6.

The 5:30 to 8 pm occasion at the station was planned so that the Reading Center could say "thank you" to President Elliott for making possible some creative efforts between GWTV and the center. There was a tour of the TV studio in the first hour of the event, followed by brief speeches and the reception itself. Reading Center Director Florence Hesser, Acting Dean of the Division of Continuing Education G. Edgar Jones, and Judith Findlay, Reading Center program coordinator, spoke informally, expressing appreciation of the opportunities afforded by the cooperative project and noting the progress of the center's After-School Program.

A film, the first in a series under the title "Learning to Learn," directed by GWTV Producer/Director Paul Caffrey was shown during the evening. The film is described as "an interdisciplinary model for teaching." The purpose of the film series is to explain and show the teaching model which Dr. Hesser and Mrs. Findlay have developed and the application of the model in the classroom. "We're trying to teach the students how to learn," Mrs. Findlay says.

The event was attended by many who have been associated with the Reading Center in its 10 years of existence and by many of the children who have benefitted from its programs, along with their parents.

LILIEN ROBINSON WILL GIVE JANUARY FIRST WEDNESDAY TALK

"French Impressionism: The New Reality" will be the subject of January's First Wednesday Lecture, sponsored by the Alumni Relations Office. The lecturer, Chairman of the Art Department and Professor of Art Lilien F. Robinson, will speak at 8 pm in the Dorothy Betts Marvin Theatre, on Wednesday, January 8. She will illustrate the lecture with slides. Admission is free, but call Alumni Relations, Ext. 6435, to reserve seating. Dinner ahead of time will be served by the GW University Club, for both members and non-members, beginning at 6:30 pm. Call Ext. 6610 for dinner reservations.

HOLIDAY LIGHTS TWINKLE

Our campus holiday lights are twinkling campus-wide more than ever this year thanks to the Grounds Division of the Physical Plant Department. There are lights on University buildings on I Street, and H, G and F Streets, and at the residence halls. Once again we have the small white lights in the trees of the Academic Center courtyard.

New locations this year are the National Law Center and Alumni House as well as some of the University's smaller buildings. An addition this year is pine roping on railings in many locations. The decorations will remain in place until after the New Year holiday.

OVERSIGHT COMMITTEE ON AIDS APPOINTED

Because of the national concern about Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS), President Lloyd H. Elliott has appointed an Oversight Committee on AIDS for the University and has approved policies recommended by an ad hoc committee which has been meeting over the past several months.

President Elliott says of the policies, "They provide a base from which the University can take appropriate action if necessary."

The University policy, applicable to faculty, staff and students, includes the information that current scientific opinion indicates that persons with AIDS do not pose a threat to those with whom they have routine contact in an educational setting or in the workplace. The policy provides that the privacy rights of all individuals will be respected and protected. It states that the University will comply with all Federal and District of Columbia laws and regulations, including those of the United States Public Health Service, which may bear on the welfare of persons with AIDS or of others within the University community who may have contact with AIDS victims. When the University is informed that a member of the faculty, staff or student body has been diagnosed as having AIDS, standing University procedures for reviewing situations of illness will be followed. Each case will be considered on an individual basis and any action taken would be based on the most expert medical advice available.

The University will take an active role in making available current information about the transmission of AIDS and the means of minimizing risks. This information will be distributed by the Medical Center, the Student Health Service, the Counseling Center and the Office of Personnel Services as appropriate.

Copies of the University AIDS Policy are available from the Office of the Provost, 8th floor, Rice Hall.

Provost William D. Johnson is chair of the Oversight Committee, which is charged to assist with the implementation of the policy and with the further dissemination of information. Serving on the committee are: Dr. Mary Capon, Student Health; Gregg Fishman, GW Student Association; Dr. Isabel G. Kuperschmidt, director of Student Health; Vice President Carl J. Lange, Administration and Research; Dr. William Minogue, medical director, GWU Hospital; Professor Jonathan D. Moreno, Department of Philosophy; Vice President William P. Smith Jr., Student Affairs; and Dean Henry Solomon, Graduate School of Arts and Sciences.

JACK EINBINDER TO RETIRE

Assistant Treasurer for Business and Procurement John C. Einbinder will retire from the University on December 31 after 34 years of service. During this period, he has served under President Cloyd H. Marvin, President Thomas H. Carroll, Acting President O.S. Colclough and President Lloyd H. Elliott.

A GW alumnus, (B.A. 1951 from the then School of Government, now SGBA) he went to work in the Business Office right after his graduation. He became business manager in 1955. In 1973, he was named director of business affairs and, at the Board of Trustees meeting of May 1979, he was elected to his present position.

A large number of the University's activities in the Vice President and Treasurer's area have come under Mr. Einbinder's direction over the years. These have included the bookstore, Lisner Auditorium, parking, food service, graphics and printing, the University Mail Service, procurement and supply and, until about six months ago, the telephone service. In addition, Mr. Einbinder has handled all the leasing of commercial off-campus space for university offices.

Asked what he sees as the most important changes that have taken place while he has been here, he answers, "I think all the new physical facilities, which have prompted new expanded programs." As for his future plans, he says, "I'm going to play golf and travel. Doris (Mrs.Einbinder) and I will go to Europe sometime in the early spring."

Before coming to the University as a student in 1946, he served in the U.S. Army Infantry in World War II in England, France, Germany, Austria and Holland. "We did a lot of walking," he remembers.

Mr. Einbinder, left, with Vice President Diehl

INVENTORY MANAGEMENT SYSTEM FORM MODIFIED

According to the Procurement and Supply Department, the Inventory Management System Detailed Stores Requisition Report that many of you receive monthly, showing inventory charges levied against your department, has been modified to show the Stores Requisition number for all transactions. This change is expected to simplify your reconcilialtion procedures greatly. In addition, it will also help Procurement and Supply to resolve any incorrect charges you may encounter by identifying transaction source documents. "Look for other improvements to the system as we continue to evolve methods to serve you better," the department tells us.

INVITATION TO FACULTY, STAFF FOR NEW STUDENTS PIZZA PARTY

All members of the University faculty and staff are invited to attend an informal pizza party to welcome students entering the University for the Spring Semester 1986. The event is scheduled for George's, on Marvin Center's fifth floor, Tuesday, January 7, from 5 to 6 pm. If you plan to attend, please call the Student Activities Office, Ext. 6555, by Friday, January 3.
